

Good morning . . . you may be up an hour earlier than you expected.

You are if you failed to set back your clocks Saturday night. Today the nation returned to standard time.

Daylight Saving Time ended officially at 2 a.m. today and will start again in late February.

Prisoners Hold Hostages In Dutch Prison Chapel

The Hague (UPI) — Two Arabs, one of them serving a sentence for airplane hijacking, and two Dutchmen seized 26 hostages including four children Saturday during a Catholic mass in the chapel of Scheveningen Prison Saturday.

Police said one of the four was Adnan Ahmad Nuri, a Palestinian serving a five-year sentence for hijacking a British jet and setting it afire at Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport March 3.

The others were identified as an Algerian with the initials M. B. K. and a pair of young Dutch veterans of another hostages saga — Daan Denie and Jan Brouwers,

Arab Summit Opener Blisters Moves by Israel

Rabat, Morocco (UPI) — A summit meeting of 21 Arab leaders opened Saturday with a blistering keynote address charging Israel, rearmbed by the United States, was preparing for war against the Arabs.

"Israel is striving to increase its military and economic potential in preparation for a new attack on the Arabs," Arab League Secretary General Mohammed Riad said in the opening address. "Its aims have not changed, namely expansion and annexation of Arab lands and the destruction of the Palestinian people."

Riad said the military assistance the U.S. sent Israel since the October 1973 war was "many times as much as the aid it gave Israel previously."

"The Arab battle of liberation will not stop until all occupied Arab land has been regained and until Palestinian aspirations have been realized."

Among the draft motions studied by the summit is a recommendation to rapidly build the military potential of Egypt, Syria and Jordan for a possible new round of fighting with Israel.

There were signs of discord, however, in Arab ranks.

Arab diplomatic sources said the clash involved Jordan's refusal to accept a draft motion before the summit which promises to let the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) run the west bank of Jordan when and if Israel ends its occupation. Jordan stood alone in opposition, contending the people of the west bank should decide the future of the region.

King Hassan of Morocco, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Saudi Arabian King Faisal spearheaded efforts to bridge the gulf between Jordan's King Hussein and PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Another sound of discord came when Libya refused to send a high-level delegation. Libya, whose revolutionary leaders have a running feud with Egypt and other Arab nations including Morocco, sent a low-ranking team headed by an ambassador.

The summit is expected to last two to three days. It was called to determine military and diplomatic strategy before the U.N. General Assembly debate on Palestine opening Nov. 13.

Shortly before the summit opened, Israel announced the start of war maneuvers by land and air forces near the borders with Syria and Jordan. The announcement said the games will "commence this evening and will continue for some days."

Disqualified Homecoming Queen Lost Kisses and Handshake, Too

By Sam Thorson

After outpolling his nearest competitor by a wide margin in a student election, write-in homecoming queen candidate Gary Brantz didn't even get a handshake from Chancellor James Zumberge Saturday, let alone a kiss.

Brantz did get a smooch of consolation from No. 2 vote-getter Chris Evans, who was crowned queen of homecoming festivities at halftime of the Oklahoma State game.

All the same, Brantz said, he and his campaign manager will contest a decision by UNL's twin spirit organizations, Tassels and Corncocks, to rule him out of contention on a campaign infraction.

Miss Evans, a junior political science major from Beatrice who plans a diplomatic or state government career, sympathized with Brantz after her coronation.

But she said, nevertheless, she thought the ruling "was the only way it could be. We were told that candidates weren't supposed to campaign," she said.

Tassels president Carolyn Grice said she and Corncocks president made the decision based on reports Brantz had campaigned too close to a polling booth in the Nebraska Union on election day last Wednesday.

Students, including at least one other queen candidate, were "literally pushed up to the polls to vote for him," Miss Grice said. She added it was impossible to call the spirit organizations together for a general vote. So the presidents, knowing how their groups felt, acted on their behalf.

Brantz said he had escorted voters to the polls only when asked to do so and had told none of them to vote for him.

Of election day, which he spent campaigning at a legal booth out of sight of the polling place, Brantz said, "There were at least 20 people who were going to vote for girls that I showed to the polls."

The fellow contestant whom Brantz escorted to the polls was Nancy Stohs, a personal friend, he said. "I was just jacking her around because she was mad I was running," he said.

In a similar situation two years ago, second runner-up Kathy Smith of Omaha was disqualified by a Corncocks and Tassels committee for taking names of Dental College voters at the East Campus polling place. She was reinstated by the Council on Student Life which held she had been denied due process.

Brantz said he felt he had been denied it as well. The spirit organizations should have named him the winner and left it up to someone else to file a protest, he said. Sitting among his Delta Upsilon fraternity brothers at the game, Brantz said the spirit groups "have no reason to disqualify me except I was a guy. I was not hustling anybody to the polls."

Brantz noted there was an unusually big turnout for the election. "This is why I was running, to get people interested and psyched for Homecoming," he said. "It had nothing to do with men's lib, or anything like that."

"I was running as a fan, not as a queen."

"It's not going to mean anything to me when the game's over," he said. But his campaign manager, fraternity brother Dennis Onnen, "worked so hard," Brantz said.

And students who voted, Brantz said, got a "raw deal."

"It's sad the student body can elect somebody and the Tassels can pick who they want . . . they were out to get us."

Tassels president Grice, noting Miss Smith's disqualification two years ago, said the same thing would have happened to any contestant who broke the rules, regardless of sex.

Brantz, a junior from Council Bluffs, Iowa, said he wouldn't run again. "If they didn't give it to me this year, they won't give it to me next year," he said.

Commented a football fan, after the announcement of Brantz' disqualification: "They should have let him have it and they'd be done with it. No girl will have a chance next year."

Ford Finds Presidency Gets 'Adrenalin Going Again'

By Saul Pett

Aboard Air Force One (AP) — The day had been long, 17 hours from dawn over the south lawn of the White House to near midnight over the mesas and mountains of the Southwest, 2,800 miles by presidential jet, helicopter, car, bus, foot. Altogether a noisy, sweaty blur of unchic summery from the humid city hall of Magdalena, Mexico, to the sodden golf course of Tubac, Ariz.

In the darkened middle compartment of Air Force One, a Secret Service agent was whispering in the code of his trade, into an air-to-ground phone: "Red Baron advises that . . ."

Most people aboard, advisers, agents, speechwriters, secretaries and reporters, were now asleep or wearily on the edge. One furthest from the edge was the big man in the forward compartment, who sat at a table and talked ebulliently in his shirtsleeves, collar open, tie loosened, bourbon and brand water in hand.

Over the back of his chair hung a blue Air Force One lounge jacket. The name tag said: "Gerald Ford." The name tag on the jacket that his predecessor wore said: "The President."

The 38th President of the United States, in office 10 see-saw weeks, talked of many things during an exclusive interview, his first, on Monday night between Tucson and Oklahoma City.

He talked about "tougher measures," if necessary, to reduce American dependence on Arab oil and said, "We could really put an embargo on foreign imports which would have a much more severe impact on availability and supply." He said this might be necessary if Congress or the public failed to respond to his present program.

He talked about the economy and said he would consider wage and price controls only in the event of a "very major international crisis."

He talked about being President and said, "I love it," and, "It's sort of got my adrenalin going again."

He talked about the national state of skepticism and said he views it as a "self-destruct attitude" among Americans which "we've got to lick." Gerald Ford does not tend to blame presidents for the national funk.

He talked about the pardon and, answering detailed questions not asked by Congress, said there was no "conceivable" way — "none whatsoever" — that Richard Nixon's chief of staff could have gotten the impression Ford might favor a pardon.

He talked of his wobbly "marriage" with Congress and said he thought it would improve after the election despite his hard campaigning.

Poignant Detail

He talked in poignant detail of his last days as vice president. He said he was so stunned to learn he'd soon be President he couldn't tell his wife immediately. Instead, he went through the charade of looking at furniture with her for the vice president's house, which he knew they'd never live in.

He talked of his last fateful meeting with then President Nixon, one man on the way down from the pinnacle, the other on the way up, and came to the edge of tears in the telling.

Close up, Gerald Rudolph Ford comes across as a big, warm man whom you want to believe (you'd feel somewhat shabby if you didn't). A friendly, happy man you'd want to play golf with, a man of no intellectual pretensions but apparently a willing learner, a town booster, a Rotarian out of Main Street (if Sinclair Lewis had been benign), a man with a big, hearty laugh who likes to laugh, a man unabashedly at home with himself, his job and his countrymen, a genuine, gregarious middle American in ways Nixon, in his imperial solitude, might espouse but could not practice.

Gerald Ford's hair is thinning up the middle and his blue-gray eyes are disarmingly earnest. His clothes have been described as Sears Roebuck mod with their wide lapels, slashed pockets and flared trousers, suggesting he might have gone a bit overboard when the style arrived but as President has not yet had time to retrench.

He quickly addresses his visitors by their first names and, unlike the way it is with most politicians, you don't resent it. You quickly feel like an old friend without knowing why. The only problem in talking to him is to resist the temptation to call him Jerry.

We talked in the President's private compartment. Near his right hand, on a ledge under the windows, was a white phone which connects him with the cockpit and the plane's communications center, which connects him with the White House switchboard, which connects him with the world.

Also present were Donald Rumsfeld, White House staff director, and press secretary Ron Nessen.

The President was, exhilarated. He said he loves his job because of its challenges.

"I feel great. Every day, from the point of view of focusing in and meeting the problems, I think we're doing better. That doesn't mean we've solved all the problems but we're better organized to meet them."

A year ago, after 25 years in the House, nine as Republican minority leader, Gerald Ford was getting as "little bored." He was planning to run for one more two-year term and then quit politics.

"Old Adrenalin Going"

"Now," he said, "the old adrenalin is going. After a day like this, how can you help it? Weren't you impressed with the crowds (in Mexico)? Well, these things still thrill me. They really do."

He said he has found the burdens of the Oval Office tougher than his view from Capitol Hill had prepared him for. He now gets a "much more in-depth understanding of the complexities of the problems, particularly in international affairs. Also in domestic affairs. In some ways it's easier to make decisions. In other ways, it's more difficult."

" . . . When you're a legislative leader, you've got 180 or 190 people to meet with, talk with. When it gets down to the Oval Office, it's yes or no. As Harry Truman said, 'the buck stops here.'"

"Have you had to learn a lot in a hurry, Mr. President?"

"No." He said his 25 years in Congress had prepared him with more exposure to national problems than most people realize.

Despite his change of address, the President said he still sleeps well. "I don't stay awake worrying. I work 12, 14 hours a day. But when I finish I can sleep. When I get up, I get going." Gerald Ford is not a brooder.

The President interrupted himself. "Is it cool in here?" he asked, groping for the thermostat.

"Well, I guess I can turn it myself. I'm learning these things."

"Sure you didn't push the eject button?"

The Commander in Chief roared. With most Presidents, a casual visitor does not try small jokes.

"In your first speech to Congress, you said you were not so concerned with a honeymoon as with a good marriage. What's the marital status now?"

"Except on the continuing resolution (which contained an effort to cut aid to Turkey), I think we've had good relations. Oh, I vetoed a few bills (nine) but they knew why and I don't think they condemn me for it. But on the continuing resolution we had the paradoxical situation where the Democratic and Republican leadership were all with me. The troops on both sides of the aisle defected in large numbers."

" . . . The leaders come from relatively safe districts or they aren't up for election. Everybody else is and that makes a hell of a difference. The leaders wanted to be helpful because they thought I was right . . . I think the marriage will be better after the election."

"Even after your campaigning?"

"I haven't said anything unkind about any individual member."

JACK NICHOLSON

Q. Jack Nicholson, the actor—I understand he is only 5 feet 2 and that everyone who plays opposite him has to be shorter. Wasn't Nicholson's film Chinatown cast with midgets?—J. R. Truesdale, Honolulu.

A. Jack Nicholson is 5 feet 6½. No midgets were cast in Chinatown. Nicholson, however, does have a height problem since most actresses with their heels on are taller than he.

Q. Recently I attended a conference on the CIA in Washington, D.C., where I heard a professor from Vanderbilt University—I believe his name was Ransom—cite an exchange of letters between Adm. Sidney Souers, first temporary director of the CIA, and President Truman, who founded the CIA. Both were disillusioned with the agency. Can you fill me in on the details?—David Marks, Washington, D.C.

A. On Dec. 27, 1963, Admiral Souers, then chairman of the board of the General American Life Insurance Co. in St. Louis, wrote Truman a letter in which he stated: "...Allen Dulles caused the CIA to wander far from the original goal established by you, and it is certainly a different animal than I tried to set up for you.

"It would seem that its principal effort was to cause revolutions in smaller countries around the globe.

"As bad as that was, it was worse to try to conduct a 'war' invading Cuba with a handful of men and without air cover. The campaign had been designed and carried out by Mr. [Richard M.] Bissell who was on my staff in the N.S.C. (National Security Council). He had been a professor at Harvard and wrote good staff papers, but he had little or no experience in practical warfare. As a matter of fact, it is my understanding that he has never worn a uniform.

"With so much emphasis on operations, it would not surprise me to find that the matter of collecting and processing intelligence has suffered some."

In reply, Truman on Jan. 17, 1964, wrote Souers: "Thanks for yours of December 27. I more than appreciated it, and I am as happy as I can be that my article on the Central Intelligence Agency rang a bell with you because you know exactly why the organization was set up—it was set up so the President would know what was going on."

Q. Is it a fact that Chicago insurance tycoon Clement Stone, who contributed a million or two to Nixon's campaign, plans to hire all the Watergate scandal participants?—Ellen Lane, New York City.

A. To date Clement Stone has hired only one Watergate-convicted participant, Dwight L. Chapin, former appointments secretary for Nixon. Chapin was indicted on four counts of lying before the grand jury, found guilty on two counts on April 5, 1974, then hired by Stone. Sentenced May 15, 1974, to serve 10 to 30 months in prison, he appealed the conviction.

Q. Doris Day was recently awarded $22 million in a lawsuit against her ex-lawyer Jerome Rosenthal. Didn't Doris offer to settle out of court for a mere $4 million?—Peter Blood, Portland, Maine.

A. Yes, but lawyer Rosenthal turned down the offer, now must come up with $22 million for defrauding Doris, 50, and her late husband Marty Melcher in a variety of business deals.

DORIS'S PROFITABLE DAY IN COURT

Q. I read in the papers that Robert T. Hartmann is deputy president of the United States. I never heard of such a position. Can you explain?—Mrs. Robert Kelly, Philadelphia.

A. Robert T. Hartmann, 57, a tough, ex-newspaperman who used to head the Washington bureau of the Los Angeles Times and later went to work for Congressman Mel Laird, is President Ford's closest confidant and most senior aide. He not only writes many and oversees all of Ford's speeches, but he has more access to the President than anyone else. There is no such position technically as deputy president of the U.S., but as Ford's number one counselor, Hartmann figuratively is said to hold down the job.

SINATRA AND RIZZO: MUTUAL AID

Q. Jilly Rizzo, Frank Sinatra's bodyguard and close pal, was recently ordered to pay $101,000 in damages for striking a Salt Lake City insurance man. Who is going to pay the hundred grand, Rizzo or Sinatra?—R. M., Hoboken, N. J.

A. Most probably Sinatra since Rizzo doesn't have that kind of money and Sinatra is solicitous of such associates as Rizzo and Jerry "The Crusher" Arvenitas, who look after him.

Q. How old is singer Peggy Lee and does she really weigh 240 pounds, which is why she wears shifts?—Helen Klein, Mineola, N. Y.

A. Peggy Lee is 54, recently dropped 60 pounds, is down to a size 16.

Q. Is it true that Sen. William Proxmire [D., Wis.] was turned down for his hair transplant at the U.S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., causing him to get the transplant at his own expense? Could this be one reason for his constant slashing away at the Armed Forces?—R. K. S., San Diego, Calif.

A. Proxmire never applied to the U. S. Naval Hospital for a hair transplant. He is not an enemy of the Armed Forces, merely an enemy of moneys wasted by the Armed Forces.

Kennedy: Chappaquiddick Conduct Inexcusable

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., says his conduct following the Chappaquiddick incident was "irrational and indefensible and inexcusable and inexplicable," the Boston Globe said in its Sunday edition. In a copyright interview, Kennedy said the death of Mary Jo Kopechne five years ago was an accident, a tragic accident, and one which I do today bear responsibility for and I did then and will for the rest of my life.

Miss Kopechne drowned when Kennedy's car ran off a wooden bridge and landed upside down in a tidal pool the night of July 18, 1969.

In the interview with the Globe, Kennedy blamed his failure to summon police immediately after the accident on physical injuries and emotional shock. His thoughts were "unreal and irrational" immediately afterward, he said.

He said he almost drowned during the 500-foot swim across the channel to Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard Island and, "by the time I arrived on the other shore, I was absolutely spent. Absolutely exhausted. And just saying, 'I just can't do it (report the accident). I just can't do it. I just can't do it.'"

The senator said he had two rum-and-cola drinks at the party, but said he was "absolutely sober" while driving and Miss Kopechne did not appear "tipsy."

The party was for campaign workers for the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Edward's brother. Kennedy denied in the interview that the affair was a "married man's night out," although none of the five married men in attendance brought their wives and all six women were single.

U.S., Russia Agree On Scientific Research

The Soviet Union and the United States signed an agreement Saturday to carry out scientific research in various fields ranging from computers to city management and water resources.

Dr. H. Guyford Stever, President Ford's science adviser and director of the National Science Foundation, hailed the exchange as "an important building block in detente between the two countries."

Americans Optimistic About Personal Lives

Americans feel optimistic about their personal lives but fear for the future of their country, according to an in-depth survey of public attitudes released Saturday. The survey was conducted last spring as the basis for "State of the Nation — 1974" by William Watts and Lloyd Free to be published Nov. 27.

"Good Progress" Reported On Miners' Contract Talk

With only a week of negotiating time left to avert a shut-down of the nation's bituminous coal mines, labor and management negotiators took their marathon bargaining talks into the holiday weekend Saturday with both sides citing "good progress" and planning to meet again today.

5% Surtax Opposed, Observer Poll Shows

More than 71% of nearly 10,000 readers responding to a poll printed in the weekly National Observer said they opposed President Ford's recommendation for a 5% surtax on federal income, the newspaper reported Saturday. The Observer counted 9,868 ballots mailed in and said 7,065, or 71.6%, opposed the surtax. The other 2,803, or 28.4%, said they favored it.

Cowbirds Not Welcome At Rice University

The cowbirds are not welcome at Rice University in Houston, Tex. "It's looking for ways to make the campus scary," said Dr. Dan Johnson, a population ecologist. "There's not an actual attempt to kill the birds, but we probably will try to scare hell out of them."

The big, black cowbirds flock by the hundreds of thousands from the north in their winter migration to roost in the 3,400 live oak trees that make a canopy for almost every street, sidewalk and building, including the campus home of school president Norman Hackerman.

Puerto Rican Group Claims New York Bombings

Powerful bombs went off outside Manhattan banks early Saturday and a Puerto Rican nationalist group proclaimed them an offensive against "yankee monopoly capitalism." No one was killed or injured by four blasts in and around Rockefeller Center, nor by a fifth that exploded at the same time in the Wall Street area.

Cleveland Pinpointed

Ex-mobster Mickey Cohen has reportedly pinpointed Cleveland as the city where he says his underworld friends found Patricia Hearst and her two fugitive companions, the Chicago Tribune reported in its Sunday edition. Cohen refused to divulge where Miss Hearst, and Emily and William Harris were located during various interviews, but Tribune reporter Ronald Kozel said he learned Cohen made repeated references to Cleveland during an Oct. 7 meeting with Miss Hearst's parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst.

'Fall Guy'

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), founded by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., said Saturday it was convinced James Earl Ray was just the "fall guy" for wealthy interests in King's slaying, and urged Ray be given a new trial. The SCLC referred to Ray as a "minnow" in the case and said the new trial was needed so authorities can get to the "big fish." Ray pleaded guilty to the murder of the civil rights leader in exchange for a 99-year prison sentence, but has since changed his story and now contends he was pressured by his attorney, Percy Foreman, into entering the guilty plea. A federal court in Memphis currently is holding an evidentiary hearing into Ray's charges.

Viets Discover More Oil

A Shell Oil Co. subsidiary announced Saturday it had struck oil and gas in its second wildcat well off the South Vietnamese coast in the South China Sea.

A press release issued by Pecten Vietnam, a wholly owned Shell subsidiary, disclosed one zone in an exploratory well drilled to more than 13,000 feet "has been tested at a rate of 1,514 barrels a day."

A spokesman for the firm, Dennis Lohse, emphasized the find did not establish that commercially exploitable oil had been discovered, but the news was clearly a morale booster for South Vietnam, whose economy is in deep difficulty.

completely overwhelmed by the magnitude of the spillage," said a spokesman for Cork County Council. The spill, estimated by Gulf Oil officials at between 200,000 and 250,000 gallons of crude, was described as one of Europe's biggest. It began Tuesday when the 80,500-ton tanker universal leader was lying at the Gulf transshipment terminal on Whiddy Island in Bantry Bay at the southwest tip of Ireland.

Rebuild institutions

Sinologists like Barnett and others are convinced that China is in the midst of a period of transition, the current leadership trying valiantly to rebuild many of the institutions shattered during the Cultural Revolution of the 1960's.

For example, the convening of the fourth National People's Congress (NPC), China's highest constitutional body, is almost six years overdue, and half a dozen cabinet posts have gone vacant for years. Moreover, the Chinese Communist Party's 10th National Congress was held in secret last year, hardly anyone knowing it had taken place until it was over.

In China political instability is the state of affairs, the Mao-Chou era make every effort to minimize the chance that China will reverse its policy towards the U.S. in the post-Mao era.

SEN. HENRY JACKSON AND HIS WIFE ON RECENT VISIT WITH CHOU EN-LAI IN A PEKING HOSPITAL.

"The U.S. should also emphasize," he writes, "that it will continue to strive for good relations with China no matter who holds the reins of power" younger and possibly less tractable than their predecessors.

A. Doak Barnett, a senior fellow of the Brookings Institution and a recognized authority on China, writes in his latest book, Uncertain Passage, that our State Department should

CHOU STEPPING DOWN AND UP

At 76, Chinese Premier Chou En-lai plans to retire before the end of 1974, the 25th year in which Chou, Mao Tse-tung, and the Communist Party have run China.

Chou will undoubtedly remain in the Politburo as an elder statesman and may even take over as China's Number One should Mao Tse-tung predecease him.

The fact is, however, that Chou En-lai has become an invalid. Earlier this year he suffered two myocardial infarcts, damage of the heart muscle secondary to the loss of its blood supply. A team of physicians also repaired his aortal aneurysm, no minor surgery.

Can he again?

Recent visitors to China like Washington's Sen. Henry "Doc" Jackson, Niergia's President Yakubu Gowon, and the Philippines' Imelda Marcos doubt if Chou will ever again carry on as full-time Premier, working 18-hour days, seven days a week. This past summer, Chou wasn't well enough even to visit Peking, a significant development in view of the fact that Chou once described Peking as "one of the world's most knowledgeable men in the field of foreign affairs."

With Chou and Mao both fading rapidly, it would be prudent for the U.S. to consolidate its new relationship with China before the post-Mao-Chou era comes into being. The U.S. will then have to negotiate with a whole new set of Chinese leaders.

approaching its end, and the beginning of a new one not yet clearly defined but certainly in the offing.

During this all-important, delicate transitional period, President Gerald Ford has seen fit to send to China to replace David Bruce, 76, possibly our most experienced diplomat, a Republican politician, George Bush, 50, who is extremely kind to his wife and children, but whose knowledge of China and diplomacy is at best rudimentary. Bush is not one of President Ford's most stellar appointments to date—it is more political payoff than anything else—which is probably why Secretary of State Kissinger hopes to touch down in Peking at the turn of the year in an effort to consolidate U.S.-Chinese friendship.

What about the future?

While Mao and Chou remain alive, that friendship with Kissinger the binding influence. Once Mao and Chou pass on, however, the precarious balance in China among internal rival forces and influences, each struggling for the power of succession, becomes more dangerous, because there are groups within China which believe in closer alignment of China with the Soviet Union at the expense of the United States, and there are others which favor an escalation of tensions leading to a Sino-Soviet war.

In short, time may be running out for us. We may have to recognize Red China and dis-recognize Taiwan quickly. We may have to change our mission in Peking to a full-fledged U.S. Embassy while we have friends in high places.

Should Teng Hsiao-ping or Li Hsien-nien or Wang Hung-wen, the 38-year-old whiz kid from Shanghai, who is a member of the Politburo's standing committee, come into power, it may well turn out to be a different and, for us, a too-late story.

THE IMPERORS EX-PRESIDENCY

When Richard Nixon was President of the U.S. he appointed Gerald Ford Vice President; Roy Ash, director of Management and the Budget; and Arthur Sampson, administrator of the General Services Administration.

When Richard Nixon resigned, the three aforementioned appointees joined forces to provide their ex-boss with a "sweetheart retirement" at the expense of the long-suffering American taxpayer.

President Ford granted "a full, free, and absolute pardon unto Richard Nixon for all offenses against the United States which he, Richard Nixon, has committed or may have committed or taken part in during the period from January 20, 1969 through August 9, 1974."

He also requested Congress to vote Mr. Nixon $850,000 in transition expenses and agreed along with Mr. Ash and Mr. Sampson to see that Mr. Nixon got what he wanted.

What Mr. Nixon wanted was plenty: over and above the $850,000 some 22 persons detailed to San Clemente at an annual cost of $420,000, control of his tapes and $110,000 for a vault to keep them in, eight permanent maintenance men to look after his San Clemente residence at a cost of $91,387, and four other GSA employees to care for Mr. Nixon's Key Biscayne residence at an annual cost of $53,566.

Lilburn E. Boggs, deputy director of the Secret Service, has also testified that it will cost his agency about $622,000 annually to protect Mr. Nixon at San Clemente and another $424,000 at Key Biscayne.

Under the former Presidents' Act and the Transition Act, Mr. Nixon is entitled to a good life—he will receive in government pensions for life a sum not less than $80,000 a year and for office and staff maintenance no less than $96,000 a year—which isn't bad at all to say nothing of the Secret Service protection. Why Ford, Ash and Sampson had to provide him with carte blanche—a valet, a maid, a speech-writer, three chauffeurs, and much more, to the point where a large segment of the public was outraged, only they can tell.

Sen. Joseph Montoya (D., N. Mex.) and Rep. Tom Steed (D., Okla.) along with fellow legislators were similarly outraged by the extravagance. In committee they directed that Richard Nixon's valet and maid be removed from the federal payroll and that the $850,000 in funds requested for the former President's transition to private life be cut to $328,000, a sum the House reduced to $200,000.

Senator Montoya also pointed out that under existing law there is no limit to the number of federal employees who may be assigned to an ex-President for up to six months after he leaves office.

Here, for example, is the Nixon roster of federal personnel at San Clemente. In addition to their salaries, the first 11 persons listed are each entitled to living expenses of up to $40 a day.

Laws, Shortages Of Staff, Space Hurt VA Hospitals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey at Veterans Administration hospitals has found that the quality of patient care is often limited by staffing and space deficiencies and confusing eligibility laws.

Dr. John D. Chase, chief medical director of the VA, said, however, that the comprehensive survey uncovered no case in which a patient's life was jeopardized by lack of care.

He said the majority of patients in the 171 hospitals operated by the VA receive health care that meets or exceeds national standards, and that in some areas it is outstanding.

The survey was ordered last March by former President Richard M. Nixon in response to widespread criticism of VA hospital care in Congress and demonstrations by veterans groups.

Its major recommendation is that the current $36,000-a-year pay ceiling for physicians and dentists be lifted and that nurses' salaries be increased.

Present pay scales are making it difficult to recruit and retain experienced personnel, Chase said at a news conference Saturday.

A proposal that Congress appropriate $62.6 million this year to meet the need for higher pay is included in the survey report, which is now under study within the Ford administration.

"If the improved remuneration is not forthcoming in the next few months," the report says, "we are convinced that the VA's ability to recruit well-qualified physicians will be seriously impaired."

Besides suggesting higher pay, the report recommends that bonuses up to 25 per cent of the annual salary of doctors and nurses be awarded on the basis of special qualifications and responsibilities.

The nursing shortage was found to be particularly acute at night, the report says. One hospital studied had only one nurse responsible for four wards.

"Many of the deficiencies that have been identified in this study are of this type and represent a clear compromise of that hospital's ability to guarantee high quality and timely care to every patient," the report says.

The survey was conducted by 33 teams of professionals and medical program administrators headed by someone outside the VA, each of which studied a different hospital.

In addition, a special task force was assigned to study the laws that define a veteran's eligibility for medical care. It found there are 19 of them, enacted since 1917, providing various restrictions that make factors other than a patient's medical condition the basis for hospital admission.

"The eligibility laws are too complex for the veteran to understand and impossible for him to apply," says the report. "The confusing legal eligibility of veterans for medical care constitutes the first compromise of the quality of VA care."

The survey is also based on questionnaires sent to 25,000 patients, 20,431 employees, 1,159 physicians and 133 dentists. It says it is difficult to draw generalities, but the majority of patient complaints dealt with the need for improved communication between doctors and patients.

"I am confident the survey was accomplished in a professional and scientific manner," Chase said. "We found that the quality of care given the vast majority of VA patients was quite good and even outstanding, and that, as might be expected in any system of the VA magnitude, there are deficiencies that need correcting."

Key Stop on Kissinger's Visit to Subcontinent

India Considers Aid Dirty Word

By Sylvia Foa

New Delhi (UPI) — Aid is a dirty word in India, so politically explosive that most politicians have erased it from their vocabularies and cabinet ministers cringe to hear it uttered in their presence.

The topic will be studiously avoided by both sides when Secretary of State Henry Kissinger meets with Indian leaders here this next week.

Instead, the world's two largest democracies will talk about "cooperation" when they decide how much American food India will receive this year.

India is the key stop on Kissinger's six-day visit to the Indian subcontinent but there will be other problems when he visits in turn Bangladesh, Pakistan and Afghanistan.

In the Pakistani capital of Islamabad, Kissinger will find an anxious Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto — a man who has of late been America's only warm friend in this region of Moscow-oriented nations.

Although the Pakistan-U.S. friendship remains firm, Bhutto is extremely unhappy over Washington's continued refusal to resume the supply of arms it cut off shortly before the 1971 Indo-Pak war which resulted in a devastating defeat for Pakistan.

Bhutto has good reasons for feeling insecure militarily — the Soviet Union continues to pour massive military supplies into Pakistan's traditional enemy, India.

Kissinger is expected to attempt to soothe Bhutto with assurances Washington will not stand back if Pakistan's sovereignty is endangered.

Kissinger's trip to the Bangladesh capital of Dacca for talks with Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman should be relatively relaxing after his sessions with Indian leaders. The Bangladesh government is financially bankrupt and a famine has already left thousands dead of starvation.

The People of Bangladesh have long forgotten the U.S. opposed their movement for independence from Pakistan in 1971.

Today the Bengalis are hungry and the Kissinger visit, with its prospect of a new pledge of American food aid, will be welcomed with hope and expectation.

According to U.S. officials, Kissinger will make broad promises to Sheikh Mujibur for increased American economic assistance.

Kissinger will meet in the Afghani capital of Kabul with the Moscow-trained and Moscow-leaning leaders who came to power in a coup d'etat in 1973. He will hold four hours of talks with Afghani leaders on a "let's get acquainted" basis.

According to India's ambassador to the U.S., T. N. Kaul, New Delhi is prepared to accept U.S. cooperation in the form of "substantial quantities of food on longterm credit at favorable rates of interest without any strings attached."

In the U.S. that form of cooperation is known as "Food for Peace" and comes under Public Law 480 which provides food to needy nations at very concessional terms. Under PL480 the recipient nation pays for the food in U.S. dollars — but payment begins after a 10-year grace period and may be spread over a further 20 years at a low 3% interest rate.

"That's aid as far as most countries are concerned," said one Western diplomat. "We don't use the term here because India has developed a strong nationalistic pride. Also for many here the word aid is spelled CIA."

The final terms of America's food package could have been decided well before Kissinger flies to New Delhi from Moscow today, American officials say.

In the view of diplomats, the delay reflects the determination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government that Kissinger does not arrive here with the aura of a Santa Claus bearing gifts to poor, hungry India.

So the amount of PL480 food India will receive this year is expected to be decided when Kissinger is here. U.S. officials speculate the amount will be between 300,000 and 1 million tons of wheat depending on India's needs.

America's last PL480 agreement with India expired in June 1971 — a bumper year for Mrs. Gandhi.

In 1971 India produced 108 million tons of food grain, enough for self-sufficiency. During that year India was victorious in the 14-day war with Pakistan, which resulted in the creation of Bangladesh.

Angered by Washington's encouragement of Pakistan during the war and emboldened by the success of India's agricultural production, Mrs. Gandhi's government stood in parliament and announced it no longer needed U.S. food aid.

The terms of PL480, which at that time required repayment in local currency, were denounced and the government vowed never again to accept aid with "strings."

At a luncheon meeting last week, Kaul told foreign correspondents what India meant by "strings."

"In the 60s there was a period when food aid from the United States was almost scheduled from month to month, from ship to mouth, as it were, to keep Indians on the leash," Kaul said. "This kind of thing will not be tolerated."

According to American officials, the period referred to by Kaul was 1966-67 when the U.S. shipped more than 11 million tons of food to India in a massive effort to save the lives of 200 million persons affected by drought.

Since 1971, India's 1964 production has decreased significantly while its population continues to grow at the rate of 15 million a year.

This year India's crop failed miserably — an erratic monsoon and prolonged drought have left the country with only 100 million tons of food to feed its 600 million people.

Frightened at the possibility of food riots in her cities, Mrs. Gandhi has gone shopping around the world, buying about 4.5 million tons of food, and seriously depleting the country's foreign exchange reserves. What she bought was not enough to meet the need.

Thus, several months ago Mrs. Gandhi quietly asked Washington to resume PL480 shipments, the only food aid program legally available in the U.S.

Her request has been publicly announced as a "U.S. offer" and the question of PL480 is expertly skirted by officials who continue to insist "this is not PL480 because now we are repaying in dollars. This is credit."

Kissinger is expected to give Mrs. Gandhi the assurance she has long sought — that Washington now accepts the reality of Indian predominance in south Asia.

Kissinger Winds Up Talks With Soviets

Moscow (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Saturday wound up a series of tough and complex talks with Soviet leaders, paving the way for the first summit meeting between President Ford and Communist party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev next month in Vladivostok.

Kissinger held a fifth meeting with Brezhnev Saturday night before his scheduled departure for India this morning. U.S. officials said a joint communique on the results of four days of negotiations was expected tonight.

The Saturday night meeting was the longest of Kissinger's four-day stay here and lasted 7½ hours, ending at midnight (4 p.m. EDT). Brezhnev and Kissinger were joined from time to time by different advisers, but spent the last 90 minutes alone except for translators. U.S. officials said they dealt mostly with the complex subject of strategic arms limitation.

Best Judges for Court

A special committee of the Nebraska State Bar Association has arrived at a conclusion which Sen. James Waldron of Callaway reached several years ago and vainly tried to put into the state's Constitution, to wit:

Members of the seven-judge Nebraska Supreme Court should be selected from a statewide pool of attorney applicants and retention elections accordingly should be statewide in scope. If Nebraska is to be served at its highest judicial reaches by the best possible jurists, this is the way to go.

The matter has roots deep in the Constitution and population shifts through the decades.

When Nebraskans more than a half-century back adopted the present constitutional framework, the state's charter authorized a chief justice selected at large and six judges from geographic districts. Districts were to be of approximately equal population. The six districts chosen in 1920 were those of the then-existing six Nebraska congressional districts.

Since then, the historic human transfer of people from farm to town and from small town to city brought dramatic demographic changes. Several years ago the Legislature finally revamped Supreme Court districts. The lines drawn then by law reflected not only balanced population numbers but protection of the seats of sitting judges and some personal judicial desires.

In any event, Douglas County (where 42% of all practicing Nebraska attorneys live) was sliced into three of the required six districts. One is exclusively in Douglas County. Another is tied with Lancaster and Saunders Counties. The third links to the rest of southeast Nebraska.

While it is therefore possible that a court majority could come from Douglas County — three judges and the chief justice — the Omaha complaint is to the contrary. Hundreds of Omaha lawyers living in the southern and, particularly, suburban western parts of Douglas County are said pragmatically excluded from an opportunity to be appointed to the Supreme Court.

A last-minute Omaha effort in the 1974 Legislature to provide either a constitutional or statutory remedy was quashed. That move led to appointment of the special bar committee to review the situation and suggest a plan. Its proposal is the statewide selection and election route.

Such, the committee concludes, "is in the best interests of all of the people of this state, that the best qualified person should be selected, regardless of his place of residence. Because of the work of the court is statewide in nature, and not regional, the entire state should have a right to vote on retention in office of each member."

If this proposal is to win outstate legislative backing, its sponsors would seem under the gun to suggest methods to militate against overloading future Supreme Courts with Omaha-based jurists. That may be difficult, but not impossible.

911 — Everywhere, All the Time

In many communities across the nation, including Lincoln and Omaha, citizens have come to think of 911 as the phone number to dial when an emergency occurs — sickness, injury, an accident.

So that was the number Gerald Hughes of Lincoln naturally called last week when his son became ill from swallowing fuel oil.

Unfortunately, the Hughes family was on the road at the time, heading back to Lincoln. The phone booth from which Hughes tried to make his call happened to be in Elmwood, outside Lancaster County.

The 911 number didn't work. Just as it doesn't work in many localities in Nebraska. The 911 system is not yet universal.

In this instance, tragedy was averted.

Hughes' son reached a hospital in time for proper treatment. But another time, in another emergency, the ending might be less happy, simply because the emergency number on which people have come to depend does not exist everywhere.

Hughes drew the obvious conclusion from his experience: 911 should be the emergency number all across the state. He is right.

For that matter, it ought to be nationwide. But first things first: Is there any reason why the phone companies serving Nebraska cannot, immediately, see to it that anybody, anywhere in the state, at any time, can dial 911 with confidence that this is the sure and swift way to get help in an emergency?

Like Rocky, the 25th Amendment's in Trouble

By Don Bacon

Washington — When and if Nelson Rockefeller is confirmed as vice president, Congress should reexamine the 25th amendment to see if there may be some better way to fill vice presidential vacancies.

The succession amendment, which has been put to use twice within the past year, clearly has not functioned the way it was intended. Instead of providing the expeditious filling of a vice presidential vacancy, caused by the death or succession of an elected vice president, the amendment has spurred Congress to unconscionable delay and political mischief.

Last week, after Congress had had the Rockefeller nomination before it for eight weeks and had decided to let the matter lie for at least another six weeks, Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania denounced the delays which he perceived to be deliberate and politically motivated.

"If this is the way the 25th amendment is going to be implemented, we should get rid of it," he said.

It took Congress two months last fall to sift through the relatively uncomplicated personal affairs of Gerald Ford, after President Nixon had nominated him to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Vice President Spiro Agnew. Everything in Ford's past, from his income tax returns to his medical records, was spread out. Kooks and egomaniacs were allowed to trample over Ford's reputation as they scrambled to the congressional witness table. It was a sorry exercise, which turned up nothing solid against the nominee. Ford was too decent — some said too dumb — to be embarrassed by the experience.

But just last week, he recalled to a group of reporters that the congressional confirmation process was "ragged" and that he couldn't "help but wonder how many people on either side of the aisle can undergo this kind of scrutiny."

Now Rockefeller is having his turn on the griddle. Only during a longer, more daring political career, he has made more enemies than Ford. Also he is an outsider to Congress, therefore suspicious, while Ford was one of the boys. Finally, Rockefeller's confirmation difficulties are multiplied because of Congress' inability to comprehend the impact of his great personal wealth on his political performance.

A 2,000-page investigatory report on Rockefeller by the Federal Bureau of Investigation is now in the hands of Senate Rules Committee members and staff. It tells everything there is to be learned about Rockefeller, his public and private life down to the last detail. The most damaging morsels are now common knowledge, having been carefully leaked to reporters by Rockefeller's opponents.

The revelations, to be sure, have undercut Rockefeller's chances for confirmation. He may not — although he probably will — win the approval of the Senate. And if he does, he still must run the House gauntlet, which may be even rougher. Sometime toward the end of December, and maybe not until next January or February, the nation will know whether or not it has a new vice president.

This kind of delay, shabby expose and political infighting was not envisioned when Congress and the state legislatures approved the 25th amendment in 1967. The focus then was on the presidential succession and disability provisions of the amendment. Few thought Congress would bog down in filling a vice presidential vacancy.

Some did, however. Richard Nixon, for one, argued that the Electoral College was better qualified than Congress to fill vice presidential vacancies. Others argued that with the enactment of a presidential succession order, the vice presidential office was superfluous and should be abolished. A few suggested the nation return to the original intention of the founding fathers which was to fill presidential and vice presidential vacancies by special election.

In the light of experience under the 25th amendment, all of these alternatives are being discussed again. Last week, in an article in the New York Times, Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) presented a strong case against "non-elected leadership" in the White House.

"We already use the special election route to fill unexpected vacancies in the Senate and House of Representatives," he wrote. "It is difficult to see why the president should be treated any differently."

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

The basic Republican conscience, after much agony, began to emerge in the editorial columns of newspapers in Nebraska's Third Congressional District as the Grand Island Independent and McCook Daily Gazette endorsed Mrs. Haven Smith for Congress.

It was party labels, not issues, which finally tipped the scales in favor of the Republican candidate over Democrat Wayne Ziebarth. "Even though both Mr. Ziebarth and Mrs. Smith contend they agree a cutback (in federal spending) is necessary, we feel when it comes to closing party ranks . . . we would feel more comfortable with Mrs. Smith voting along the truly conservative lines of Nebraska's Third District," concluded the McCook editorial.

For the Grand Island newspaper, which decided to give its support to Democratic Gov. J. J. Exon, supporting Democrats in what it called the "two top races on the ballot," became too painful.

The Independent, a self-proclaimed "nominal" Republican newspaper, said Ziebarth "is a likeable sort with enough conservatism and common sense to make a good representative." Of Mrs. Smith, the newspaper said, "there's been a rather dreary sameness about her campaigning that hardly indicates an innovative Congresswoman." Yet, the newspaper opted for Mrs. Smith on the grounds that Ziebarth could not be totally independent of Democratic leaders in Congress.

The decision was easier for the Independent in endorsing Exon. The newspaper found little in the governor's record to argue with and believed he has a good ear for the wishes of Nebraskans. Republican candidate Richard Marvel "has not excited the voters or Republican support," the newspaper said. "That hardly speaks well for his candidacy." The newspaper found much to like about petition candidate Ernest Chambers, but preferred his "maverick" brand of politics confined to the Legislature.

The North Platte Telegraph found the state attorney general's race much easier to decide than the other papers with the congressional race. "Paul Douglas should be the clear-cut, positive choice for attorney general," it said. "Nebraskans have probably never had a chance to 'hire' an attorney general so thoroughly prepared for the job." The only reference to Douglas' Democratic opponent, former three-term governor Frank Morrison, was by age, not name.

On the national scene, the Omaha World-Herald dismissed the controversy arising out of the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller for vice president. The allegations about the impropriety of Rockefeller gifts to his associates and taxes should not hold up his nomination. "Rockefeller should be confirmed, unless there are much better reasons than have been disclosed for not confirming him," the newspaper said.

Shades of John L. Lewis: Coal Again a Key to Nation's Economy

By A. H. Raskin

New York — In 1949, when a dizzying succession of union-enforced three-day weeks and even no-day weeks in the soft coal mines had brought the national economy close to paralysis, John L. Lewis, imperious leader of the United Mine Workers, told the coal industry's top negotiators:

"You need men and I have all the men" and they are here in the palm of my hand; and now I ask, "What am I bid?"

A quarter-century later last vestiges of the one-man dictatorship maintained by the majestic Lewis and petty tyrants who succeeded him are being dismantled by the new reform leadership of the mine union but, stripped of its peremptoriness, the question he asked is essentially the same one the new UMW bargaining team has put to the industry in the fateful contract talks now nearing the showdown state.

If anything, the vastly increased importance given coal by the current energy crisis makes receipt of an acceptable answer — an answer that must come by next weekend if a mine shutdown is to be avoided — even more crucial to the economy than in 1949, when President Truman invoked the national emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act in a vain effort to get striking miners back in the pits.

The official anxiety over this year's coal talks extends beyond the harsh downward push that a long strike would give to general industrial activity and jobs in an already sagging economy. The White House worries just as much about the possibility that a fat wage settlement in the mines would set a costly pattern for a 1975 collective bargaining round, to be ushered in by January contracts in the nation's railroads and oil refineries.

Since the demise of federal wage-price controls April 30, the price of labor peace in major industries has been getting steadily more expensive.

A survey last week by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of all contracts covering 1,000 workers or more showed those signed in the third quarter called for first-year pay increases averaging 11.1%, fully double the anti-inflation guideline of 5.5% established by the Pay Board in the Nixon Administration.

The master agreement between the mine union and the bituminous coal operators association does not actually expire until Nov. 12. However, the effective deadline is 10 days earlier because of the new leaders' insistence that the country's 120,000 unionized miners get a direct voice in approving the proposed pact — for the first time in UMW history.

Though both sides say there is still a chance for a strikeless agreement, pessimism hangs over the bargaining table — partly because so many pivotal issues have not even been touched thus far and partly because of doubt that any employer offer, however good, will have much chance of rank-and-file acceptance without at least a brief tie-up.

This last is the big imponderable in the negotiations, so widespread is the conviction that militant elements in the coal fields "have to have a strike" to let out frustrations accumulated through years of autocratic union rule. These frustrations are aggravated now by inflation's deep bite in pay envelopes and astronomical profits reported by coal producers.

President Ford's energy planners have been busy drawing up emergency plans for allocated fuel and electricity in the event of a prolonged mine shutdown. Most utilities will be able to go for one to three months on the basis of current stockpiles, but reserves are uneven. Steel mills and many big industrial users of coal would begin feeling the pinch after the first week.

The toughest problem for the President would be how soon, if ever, to move for a no-strike injunction under the Taft-Hartley Act. Arnold Miller, new president of the UMW and a member of Ford's recently appointed top-level labor-management committee, has dashed off the old Lewis warnings that "you can't mine coal with bayonets" in an effort to dissuade the White House from such action.

An impasse over mine safety, an issue that ranks as high as money on the union agenda, has just been broken. This cleared the way for sufficient progress on non-economic issues to convince both sides neither was bent on turning any strike that might develop into a siege of the kind once familiar in the mine fields.

While this improvement in the bargaining climate offers no guarantee the country will be spared a shutdown long enough to force brownouts and mass hardship, charges of bad faith that marked opening phases of the talks are almost totally gone.

Basic pay for miners now ranges from $42.50 to $50 a day, which puts them on a par with auto and steel workers, a comparison the union considers less than fair because it fails to take account of extra hazards.

Intense as is the feeling on that point, many observers believe a wage pact in line with the emerging 10% to 12% pattern, plus an escalator, might have appeal if it were accompanied by sizable concessions on pensions and a long list of innovations in sick pay, supplemental unemployment benefits and safety features — all areas in which the old contract either provides nothing or much less than agreements in auto and steel.

A coal contract heavy on fringe benefits would have important direct cost consequences for operators and purchasers of coal, but its ripple effect on wages in other industries would be far less than an automatic new hike in direct wages for miners.

Underpopulated

Lincoln — Anyone who thinks Nebraska has a problem with overpopulation should travel to the western half and see what a critical labor shortage they have. They would also find numerous businesses all around that have had to shorten their open hours because they can't hire the help they need.

Then just look up the number of schools that have closed the last five years because of decreased number of children, not because of consolidation. Unless Nebraska has a great increase in migration, especially into small towns, we'll have a barren state with two main cities and no one to work the farms in the next generation.

Fall From Within

Stuart — Since 1950, the Blessed Virgin has been appearing to Mrs. Fred Van Hoof at Necedah, Wis. The message is the same as was given at Fatima in 1917. So far the church has not approved, but it may if we pray enough.

As far as I know, no paper in this area has ever printed a word about these appearances.

Why doesn't the Catholic Church start a Rosary crusade and all other churches prayer services? Looks like it's true the Communists will never have to fire a shot to take over our country — we'll fall from within.

ART BUCHWALD

Male Pigs' Stronghold Falls

As everyone knows, I have been in the forefront of the fight for women's liberation. My body is scarred from battling on the picket lines at the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City and the Miss Universe Contest in Miami. As we say in the lib movement, "I've paid my dues."

Therefore, I believe I can deal with the following subject with complete objectivity. What on God's green Astroturf is a woman doing acting as a sports commentator during a professional football game?

Last week I turned on the Redskin-Giant game, leaned back in my chair with a beer in my hand and a bowl of potato chips at my feet. Suddenly I heard this strange voice. It sounded exactly like a woman's. My first thought was that CBS' Pat Summerall had had a serious operation. Then I decided the sound on my set had gone awry.

But a few seconds later a pretty brunette came on the screen who was introduced as Jane Chastain, and Summerall said she was going to do the color for the game.

I sat straight up in my seat. A woman doing color on TV? Didn't CBS have any shame at all?

How could a multibillion-dollar network invade the homes of 30 million beer-drinking, potato chip-eating, red-blooded American football fans with the voice of a girl?

Let us make no mistake about this. Football watching is the last refuge of the Male Chauvinist Pig. We invented the game; we play it every Sunday — and Monday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday and Saturday (see your local paper for TV listings). It is our thing.

As nice as Ms. Chastain looks and as knowledgeable as she tried to be, she has no more business on a TV football game than Howard Cosell has on The Waltons.

I would have to guess that by assigning a woman announcer to a TV football game CBS was trying to attract a larger female audience, hoping to win over the wives or, as they are called, "widows" of men who spend weekends staring dumbly at their tubes.

This is not the way we do things in America. The role of the wife on Sunday afternoons is to make beds, prepare meals, drive children somewhere or take care of relatives who might drop in unexpectedly.

Even if they wanted to, they don't have time to watch football. It is a cruel hoax on the part of the network to try to attract them to TV when it knows women have so many more important things to do.

To show you the groveling they did last Sunday, CBS had Ms. Chastain interview Billie Jean King at halftime. The last thing American men want to see during football halftime is an interview with Billie Jean King.

Let me make myself perfectly clear. I have no objection to women being airline pilots, truck drivers, senators and even president. They're entitled.

They can be doctors, lawyers, mechanics, policemen, firemen and Indian chiefs. They can own banks, be in the numbers rackets and play Little League baseball.

The only place they don't belong is on a TV sportscast telling us male spectators things they think we didn't know about football.

P.S. No abusive mail concerning this column will be answered.

Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, and wife Janie discuss recent cases with Grace Surguy who directs a Houston telephone service that helps young runaways.

Hot Line for Runaway Kids

by Don A. Schanche

A desperate and hungry 15-year-old runaway named Laura stepped into a phone booth in Jacksonville, Fla., a few weeks ago and hesitantly dialed the toll-free number, 1-800-231-6946. She had spotted the number on a poster just a few minutes earlier when she had tried without luck to panhandle a meal in a coffee shop.

"Are you still alive?" its headline asked. "Let somebody know."

The poster's message, advertising a little-known group of telephone hot-line volunteers in Houston, Tex., was simple. "You call us. We'll call them. No tricks, bugs or traps. We're just here to pass on the word. To let them know you're still alive. Whoever they are."

Last April Laura became one of the million American youngsters who run away from home each year. Since then her imagination had worked overtime, with nightmares of being arrested, spending weeks in a juvenile detention cell, then facing punishment at home. She loved her parents but feared them, too. She was afraid that if she telephoned them directly, they would track her down.

But Laura had even more urgent problems. She had not eaten for three days. She had no place to stay. And she was afraid that she was pregnant.

Laura's desperate call was answered by a confident, reassuring voice 900 miles away, from a crowded Houston motel room by a "Peace of Mind" volunteer.

"No," the soft-spoken volunteer, Mrs. Philip (Lee) Didelot, told Laura, "we can't trace your call, and you don't have to tell me where you are. I'm just here to let your family know you're alive and well."

Laura broke down in tears. She was alive, but not well. Mrs. Didelot, a Houston mother who has been taking calls from kids like Laura for more than a year, listened quietly. She did not interrupt with adult judgments and criticism, nor gush with motherly advice.

"If you want to tell me where you are, I can find someone to help you," she said. "And I'll call your parents. I won't tell them how to find you, but I'll give them any message you want to send. If you call back later, I'll pass along their message to you."

She got help

Within an hour Mrs. Didelot and other telephone volunteers had made arrangements for food, lodging and a free medical exam for Laura in Jacksonville. They also had tried to call her parents, failed, and reached Laura's grandmother instead. From her they learned that Laura had run away because her strict and occasionally abusive parents had refused to let her take refuge at the grandmother's house. Later the tearful parents telephoned the 800 number to say that they were willing to let Laura move to her grandmother's.

Laura telephoned Peace of Mind the next day, vastly relieved by the results of her medical checkup. She was not pregnant, just severely undernourished. And she was overjoyed by the message from her mother and father.

A week later Peace of Mind Director Grace Surguy, a 23-year-old social worker on the staff of Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, heard from Laura again. She was happily settled in her grandmother's house in Kentucky, back in

Inflation Politics: Iowa's Example

Des Moines — "I wouldn't want my children to be unable to buy a new car every other year," a state official in Iowa said the other day. That comment expresses perfectly the nature of inflation politics.

While rising prices have not crushed most Americans, they have raised the specter of a change in lifestyle. Since voters don't want a change, they look for candidates they can trust, who will save conditions which are by and large satisfactory.

The continuing bounty of American life is apparent in this state. Driving from Kansas City to Des Moines, I was struck again by the rich, rolling farm country — unsurpassed, I suppose, anywhere in the world. Barns and homes are freshly painted.

Though there have been some crop losses due to weather, Iowa is going to have one of its best years. The state has the third highest per-capita income in the country.

But if good money is to be had, costs and risks are high. Feed prices are so high it doesn't pay to fatten calves for market. Price supports for corn and wheat are only about a third of the going price.

So the mood is not unmixed joy. "People aren't angry about inflation," Robert Ray, the Republican governor, said in an interview. "But they're concerned. They're concerned by the steady rise in prices. They're very sensitive. With costs so high, the least little thing can worry them. They're not sure they can make ends meet. They don't know whether they can keep sending kids to college."

The old rule that Iowa goes Republican except when farmers are in trouble is going to be smashed with a vengeance this year. Not because President Ford isn't liked. He has a 64% approval in the Iowa Poll.

But inflation combines with Watergate to make people very choosy. "Voters," Ray says, "aren't voting their narrow economic interest. They're looking carefully at candidates. They're asking, are they genuine? Do they have integrity?"

Ray himself plainly passes the test. He has an approval rating of 76%. His Democratic opponent, James Schaben, has a hard time getting people to take his candidacy seriously.

But a different picture is presented in the race for the seat being vacated by Democratic Sen. Harold Hughes. The Republican candidate, David Stanley, is rich, intelligent and well-known. He nearly beat Hughes in 1968, and has made a record in the legislature as an advocate of reform. He has been campaigning nearly a year, attacking his Democratic opponent, Cong. John Culver, as a "big spender," financed by labor money from "out of state."

Culver is vulnerable to the spender charge and he does have union money. But he is a bluff, hearty man of obvious good will and intelligence. He has been able to show Stanley also took money from an out-of-state organization — the Republican boosters.

That demonstration of trickiness and casuistry on the part of Stanley has evidently made the difference. After running neck and neck in the polls, Culver has now pulled far ahead.

The lesson of all this is that there really is such a thing as inflation politics. Since it focuses on selecting candidates with integrity, the inflation issue tends to merge with — and be obscured by — Watergate. But, as the case of Gov. Ray shows, it doesn't necessarily work against Republicans.

On the contrary, it accelerates the drift away from party-line toint and toward ticket-splitting, which has become probably the dominant characteristic of national politics.

Detente's Critics Urge Boldness

Washington — The day before Secretary of State Kissinger set out for Moscow to seek new Soviet-U.S. agreements on nuclear-arms control and the Middle East, a group of learned skeptics from the academic world met here to cry out against the whole thrust of Kissinger's policy.

These angry men, many with distinguished careers, call themselves the National Committee on American Foreign Policy. Prof. Hans J. Morgenthau, with the New School for Social Research in New York, is chairman.

Morgenthau and his colleagues argue the United States is giving too much and getting too little in dealings with the Soviet Union.

They believe American credits, technology, industrial know-how and trade — things Russia hopes to gain from detente — are potentially of incomparable value to the Soviet Union, enabling it to rescue a sluggish, if not actually failing, communist system.

They see U.S. bargaining power therefore as immense, and point to the remarkable fact that Moscow, to get credits and non-discriminatory trade, has recently agreed to sweeping modification of its emigration policy despite damage this change may do to internal discipline in the Soviet bloc and external Soviet influence in the Arab world. Arabs bitterly oppose any Jewish emigration to Israel.

What his critics would have the secretary of state do, is insist Moscow reverse not just its emigration policy but its whole stance toward the Mideast.

They want Kissinger to require of Moscow, as a precondition for detente, that it abandon rearming the Arab world and join in pressing the Arabs to make peace on Israel's terms.

In all likelihood Morgenthau's real expectations are more modest — a willingness, for example, by the Soviet Union to limit in some directions the military options available to its Arab clients.

The Morgenthau committee does have a secondary interest in other possible agreements with the Soviet Union, but its overriding concern is a Mideast settlement consistent with Israel's security requirements.

But the terms envisaged would involve a massive expenditure of American bargaining currency. This raises serious questions of national priority. What settlements with Moscow should be sought first? If all cannot be had, which should be foregone?

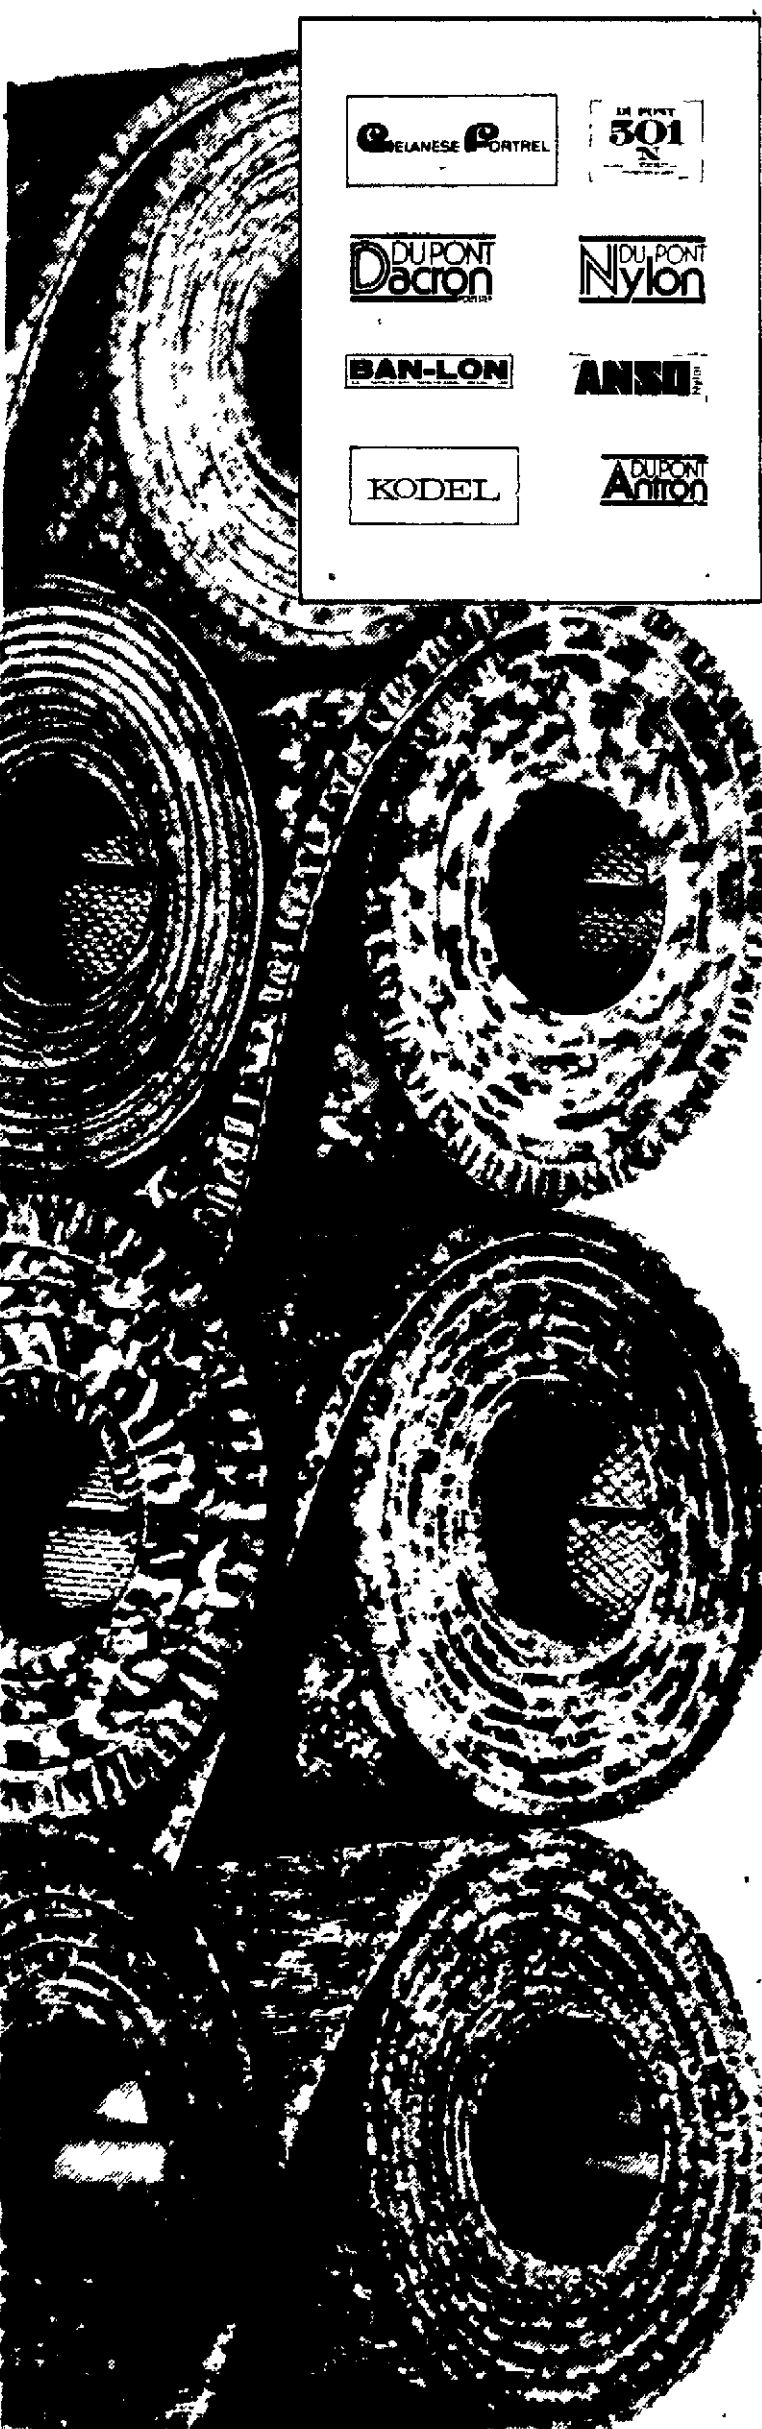

It will not be possible to extract from Moscow, in return for anything the United States can conceivably offer, agreement to limit Soviet strategic weapons deployment, liberalize communism in Eastern Europe and help impose Israel's peace terms on Arab states.

Some of these may be negotiable in part, but to try for all of them at once would destroy the negotiation.

In proposing a national debate on detente, Kissinger has in effect called on the American people to decide which of them it wants most.

He Was Strong . . . What the Hell Do You Say in Those Circumstances?"

(among Americans). I don't point the finger at the press or anyone. But you look at it. It sort of started when they were giving Jack Kennedy hell. You know, in the last days before the assassination . . .

"They? The press?"

"Well, no. People in political life. I wouldn't say the press in that case, but there was high criticism of Kennedy. And then it began really in an uphill crescendo toward LBJ and they drove him out of office, literally. Then, there was sort of a hiatus with Nixon. Then, because of Watergate, it just burst forward . . .

"And that's what we've got to overcome. There is no reason why it should be. I don't blame the press. I don't blame partisanship. Somehow, we've gotten that attitude, that we're condemning ourselves so much. We're hurting ourselves when we should be doing just the opposite."

Vague Masochism

It is a thesis that suggests the American malaise grew out of a vague masochism, not for the seeds of wrong policy or leaders who misled. It is a refrain reminiscent of Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, who said that what the country needs is to talk less about what's wrong with America and more about what's right with America.

"On another level, Mr. President. Forgive me for prefacing so many questions on another level . . .

"We going up or down?" asked the laughing President. The small joke score was now clearly even.

"As vice president-designate you told Congress you wouldn't run for president in 1976. As President, you say you probably will run . . .

"Probably. What changed your mind?" "He said the clout with Congress than would normally accrue to a two-year lame duck."

"A two-year presidency," he said, "was not sufficient to do the things . . . that had to be done. We need continuity in foreign policy, continuity in domestic policy."

"The continuity was interrupted by the appearance of a steward with a tray."

"You going to feed us again?" asked an amazed Gerald Ford, the national cheerleader of the take-all-you-want-but-eat-all-you-take movement. "You're going to get me back over 200! All right, I'll take another one of these."

The President declined the food but accepted another bourbon, a gesture followed by his patriotic visitor. He watched the dinner tray being inherited by Rumsfeld.

"Look at the New York sirloin!" said the President. "My God!" Rumsfeld fell to, anyway.

"A few questions about the economy. When does a recession become a recession?" The President has said the country is not in a recession.

"Well, here's something I think we have to raise. This is a matter I discussed with Alan Greenspan (chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers) the other day. Experts economists and others, develop labels for categorizing something if one, two, three, four, five things happen."

"If those things happened in the traditional sense over the last 10 years, you could say this was a recession or this was something else. Most economists today agree we're in the most unique circumstances where, you've got double-digit inflation and yet a certain softness in the economy."

"And to use the same labels for unique circumstances is inaccurate. We either have to — well, we probably should get some new labels to meet new circumstances. Now, that's hard to develop in a political year . . .

Traditional Criteria Exist

The President said some traditional criteria of a recession now exist in rising unemployment, a developing inventory backlog and a "cutback in consumer confidence." He continued:

"On the other hand . . . you've got extreme shortages, where they can't get materials, they can't get employees, they're begging for both raw materials and labor. So you've got this pulling and hauling that's too unique at this time to use the same labels. It's kind of out of style. And that's what we're trying to do with (our) program. We had people saying you can't go too hard, you can't be too soft . . .

"What would it take in the economy and energy situation to bring on those tougher measures you hinted at?"

"In energy we could really put an embargo on foreign imports which would have a much more severe impact on availability and supply."

"What would it take to do that?"

"The failure of the Congress or the public to respond. Congress, if it failed to increase supplies, and the public's failure to conserve."

"Are you philosophically opposed to wage and price controls as something to be used only as a last resort? What would persuade you they were necessary?"

"Outside of an international crisis of major proportions —

"You see no reason to have them?"

"It has to be a VERY major international crisis . . . I don't see anything domestically that would precipitate it."

"Mr. President, you show a great deal of faith in voluntary methods. I'm trying to recall another time when voluntary methods got us out of a real economic crisis. Did you have something in mind?" "I think this is a unique situation. There's no war. War seems to have been the catalyst in the past . . . This is so unique domestically that I think you can relate it to a wartime situation."

Turning to Pardon

It seemed an appropriate time to turn to the pardon. The President had told Congress how stunned he was Aug. 1 when Gen. Alexander Haig Jr. told him about new and devastating Watergate evidence and that Ford was likely to become President very soon.

"What were your thoughts then? How did you sleep that night?"

"Let me just tell you something," Gerald Ford said over the roar of the jet motors. "Al came to see me late in the afternoon. I had a date with Betty to go out to the Massachusetts residence (the newly designated home for vice presidents) to spend an hour with her to make some final decisions to find furniture for us to live there."

"I went through this routine for an hour and she had all these plans where this piece of furniture was going here and that was going there. Then I went back to the office. Then I went home and while we were changing clothes for dinner I said, 'Betty, the probability of us living in that house is very remote.'"

"And I told her what had happened two, three hours before. I took a half hour to tell Betty that everything she had planned and worked for was probably out the window. Because it wasn't going to happen . . .

"On the three following days, Aug. 3-4-5, Vice President Ford continued publicly to express confidence in President Nixon's innocence although he knew better."

"You continued to say these things because you couldn't be in the position of seeking to effect his resignation?"

"For my own personal benefit," Ford said, nodding.

"Well, that was one priority. And yet here you were clearly about to become President of a very skeptical nation. So another priority had to be your credibility. Was that a priority?"

"Well, I had to weigh those priorities. And I put things on the scales, and one outweighed the other. And it did affect my credibility. But if you will read some of these questions and answers (in those three days); I was less enthusiastic than I had been . . . But how you could change dramatically without being depicted as a seer of the office was the hard one."

"This question arises about your talks with General Haig Aug. 1 and 2: Did you consider him at all as any kind of an emissary from President Nixon or the Nixon White House?"

Haig Kept Ford Posted

"No, I did not. Not at all. Periodically during that whole period but more specifically in the last several months, he (Haig) would come over to the office and keep me posted, bring me up to date. Admittedly, this was . . . totally startling and stunning. But I had that morning a meeting with him, which seemed rather routine, at about 8:30 or 9, Aug. 1."

"But then about noon or between 1 and 2 o'clock he called and asked if he could see me on an emergency basis . . .

"As the general told you of the options being considered at the White House — and I gather that's all he said — being considered at the White House. He didn't say the President was considering them?"

"No. He said the White House."

"As he went through the options and got to the question of a pardon of Mr. Nixon by Mr. Ford, did you have any reason to feel this was kind of a probe or feeler?"

"No. There was just the option that somebody over there — I don't know who —

"Just another option?"

"Right."

"That somebody over there was considering? Whether that somebody was Mr. Nixon you didn't know?"

Gerald Ford shook his head.

"When Haig brought up the option of a pardon of one President by the new President, did you make any other specific response other than to ask about the pardon powers of a President?"

"As I said in my testimony," President Ford said patiently, "after we'd gone through this five- or six-option situation, I said to General Haig, I wanted to talk the next morning . . . I said two things. Number one, I've got to talk to (Mrs. Ford) because he put it very bluntly to me. He said, 'Are you ready to take over the presidency?'

"I said, 'This is a total shock to us. Number two, I think I ought to talk to Jim St. Clair (White House attorney) who had listened to or read the transcripts . . . of the critical June 23rd tape . . .

"Was there any kind of spontaneous, off-the-cuff, temporary sort of reaction on your part that could conceivably have left Haig with the impression that you might be favorable to a pardon?"

"None whatsoever."

The President took a long sip of his drink. In the silence, he looked out the window.

"Can you say now, Mr. President, what your view is of your predecessor? How do you explain him in your mind?"

There followed a long, seemingly painful pause. Then he said, softly, "I really don't think I ought to go into that."

Last, Long Conversation

"Can you tell me about that last long conversation you had with the President on Aug. 8?"

"He was the most controlled person. I wondered how anybody could be that controlled under those circumstances. And as I recollect the first statement, he said to me, 'Jerry, you'll do a good job.' What do I say then? I asked for any suggestions."

The 37th President and the 38th President then had a "very practical, very helpful discussion . . . about foreign policy, very high level." Nixon, extolling the abilities of his secretary of state, "strongly recommended" that Ford retain Henry Kissinger.

"Did you have much to say?"

"No . . . He thanked me profusely for defending him."

And now, at the end of our interview, came the longest of pauses. Gerald Ford silently shook his head side to side and seemed on the edge of tears. Finally, he said:

"He was strong . . . What the hell do you say in those circumstances?"

The 1974 Franklin Mint Christmas Ingot

in Solid Sterling Silver

ACTUAL SIZE

The Franklin Mint's annual Christmas Ingots have been highly treasured by collectors ever since the first one was issued four years ago.

Now, for the first time, The Franklin Mint is making available, directly to the public, its new 1974 Sterling Silver Christmas Ingot in a special edition.

Each 1974 Christmas Ingot, in the special edition, will contain 500 grains of solid sterling silver—more than one troy ounce—and will be struck with The Franklin Mint's flawless gem PROOF finish. The design for the ingot is an original work of art, "The Snowman," created by the distinguished American sculptor James Porter.

A MEMORABLE GIFT. The 1974 Christmas Ingot makes a unique holiday gift for family, friends or business associates. A gift of beauty and charm. A gift of distinction and enduring value. The cost of each 500-grain solid sterling silver proof ingot is $14. A deluxe presentation case is included. All ingots will be delivered in time for Christmas giving.

LIMITED EDITION. The total number of ingots produced will be exactly equal to the number ordered by November 10, 1974. After these ingots have been minted, the dies will be destroyed so that the 1974 Christmas Ingot can never be produced again. Thus, its rarity will be assured forever.

Also available at selected Franklin Mint dealers

On the hot line: Volunteer assures runaway she won't reveal his whereabouts but will be happy to relay a message to his family.

school, and trying hard to resolve her differences with her parents.

Laura's is but one of more than 4000 similar human dramas that have been played out entirely by telephone during the past year over the nation's only hot line for runaway kids. Houston's free message and referral service has reunited more than 1000 youngsters with their families. In many more instances it has passed reassuring messages to parents who feared that their children were dead. Never has the hot line given away the location of a runaway.

Arose in a crisis

Like most telephone hot-line services, Peace of Mind was formed to meet a crisis. It began in August, 1973, when two Houston teenagers blurted out an incredible story of sexual depravity and murder involving runaway kids. As the now notorious mass murder story unfolded, authorities began digging for bodies. All of the victims were youngsters from the Houston area. Soon, police and social agency lines were jammed with anxious calls from the more than 5000 families in the area whose children had left home. Each caller hoped against desperate hope that his or her missing child was not among the bodies then being disinterred by the police. But there was no way to reassure them. Broadcast appeals by newspapers and TV and radio stations failed to induce the runaways to call home or the police.

"They weren't about to call the police, because they were afraid of being arrested," says volunteer Mrs. George (Suzanne) Randolph, "and if they felt free to call their parents they probably wouldn't have run away. So our organization got together, to give peace of mind to parents at a time when the police were still looking for bodies."

With Governor Briscoe's backing, Rev. Travis Key, a local Baptist minister, brought together a force that eventually included 250 volunteers. Some of them were former runaway kids and some the parents of runaways. Holiday Inn donated two rooms, and two toll-free long-distance lines were installed—1-800-392-3352 for runaways still living in Texas, the other—1-800-231-6946—for kids in any other state except Hawaii and Alaska.

It soon became apparent to Governor Briscoe and Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby that the hot line was providing a sorely needed service. The state of Texas supplied a paid director, Grace Surguy, and Peace of Mind has been taking calls nationwide ever since at a rate that has zoomed from 32 in the first month to more than 700 a month today. Its monthly costs of $4000 have been met almost entirely by contributions, mostly from Texans and grateful parents, and its phones have been staffed around the clock by volunteers working in four-hour relays.

Last summer Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, distressed that his state spends more than $700,000 a year to detain and process runaway children, responded to a call for help from Governor Briscoe. Askew sponsored a national conference at which Peace of Mind volunteers briefed his and 24 other state governments on the problem and their work. The Florida legislature promptly appropriated $20,000 with which to publicize the toll-free hot line with posters, billboards, ads and spot radio and TV announcements volunteered by the Miami Advertising Club. Other states have promised to follow suit. (The advertising material is available at cost to public and private social agencies from the Miami Advertising Club and Peace of Mind.)

Calls from Florida

A few weeks ago, when PARADE sought out Peace of Mind the new surge of publicity in Florida already was being felt, as indicated by Laura's call from Jacksonville.

(When Peace of Mind gets a plea for help of any kind the volunteers try to locate private and public agencies, including 80-odd runaway houses in the U.S. where confidential assistance is available.)

Grace Surguy explained why many kids leave home. She had just helped to reunite three 12-year-olds with their families after the youngsters had run away on what proved to be merely a lark.

"They weren't serious about it," she said, "but most of our callers are. They run away for two reasons, mostly. Many leave homes that supply all of the basic physical needs but no emotional support or communication. Many of the others come from intolerable homes, where the parents are violently abusive, alcoholic or so deep into poverty that the kids leave to ease the burden."

Four reasons

Once they hit the road, she said, the kids who call Peace of Mind commonly become desperate for four reasons: "They need shelter; they need health care for drug problems, pregnancy or illness; they need legal aid, or they need counseling. And almost all of them want to send word home, if only to tell their parents that they are alive."

About a quarter of the youngsters who call eventually return home, she said, but the majority, for reasons of their own, elect to keep their whereabouts secret.

"We are absolutely strict about maintaining and respecting their confidence," she said. "Some parents have called to complain that we're just encouraging them to stay away. But our success depends entirely upon the fact that the runaway doesn't have to reveal himself. The kids are willing to make contact through a third party—Peace of Mind—as long as there's no risk of being located. If we betrayed that confidence, this hot line wouldn't work. And the parents might never learn whether their kids are alive or dead."

Cash Transfer Plan Welfare Alternative

By Ernest Holmsendolph
(c) New York Times

Washington — Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of the Health, Education and Welfare Dept., is preparing to offer President Ford a proposal to replace the nation's major welfare programs with a $21.6 billion "cash transfer" plan.

Patterned after the negative income tax idea, and much more comprehensive than the ill-fated family assistance plan offered by former President Nixon, HEW's proposed income supplement plan is being circulated among departments that would be affected by it. It has not yet been sent to the White House, Weinberger said.

costs of the present system over the next few years.

It is acknowledged that the political task of getting the necessary legislation passed could be formidable. Some are expected to favor the step as a means of reducing the federal bureaucracy and reducing the amount of interference in personal lives while the government does something to help the "deserving poor."

Others may object that the level of support is too low and that the needy individuals and families stand to gain much more from the present variety of programs.

Even if Weinberger succeeds in selling Ford on the idea, the administration is likely to be upstaged by Rep. Martha W. Griffiths, D-Mich., who is set to introduce legislation along similar lines sometime after the Nov. 5 election.

In succinct terms, approval of the plan would mean that food stamps and such programs as Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC) would be terminated, and in exchange a jobless family of four with no other means of support would receive $3,600 a year.

Designed to be a work incentive program, income supplement would provide that the family could work and earn money but only half of the earnings would be deducted from the basic benefit.

For example, the breadwinner in the family of four could earn $2,000 a year, and the benefit would drop to $2,600. The total family income, including $2,000 earned and $2,600 in benefits thus would be $4,600.

HEW estimates that about 25 states, including New York, are likely to supplement any federal funds put into the program. This was seen as the most effective way to handle such variables as regional differences in the cost of living.

Weinberger, in an interview, was explicit in what he saw as the advantages of the proposal. "We prefer a cash system because it allows us to determine clear lines of eligibility, establish a real work requirement and a means of consolidating from 16 to 18 programs into one," he said.

Under the proposal, checks would be sent directly to beneficiaries by the Internal Revenue Service or a separate division of the Treasury Dept., but the check-issuing agency would be outside HEW. Indeed, if the program were adopted in its proposed form, it would take most of the "W" out of HEW.

It is the threat of runaway costs, Weinberger feels, that may well commend his plan to the White House. He said the department is now at work trying to determine projected Celebrated 1960 Spy Plane Incident Bomb Secreted in U2 Tail?

By Thomas Ross
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Washington — Soviet military intelligence reportedly claims it brought down the celebrated U2 spy plane in 1960 with a bomb smuggled aboard prior to takeoff rather than with a missile.

Selmer Nilsen, a Norwegian who was a Russian spy at the time, said a Soviet military intelligence officer told him the bomb was secreted in the tail of the U.S. plane before it left Pakistan for the flight over the Soviet Union.

Publicly, the Russians have always claimed the U2 was shot down by an anti-aircraft missile. But the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), which was in charge of the spy flights, reportedly has never reached a firm conclusion as to what happened.

The CIA assumed the fragile, glider-like plane would have been blown to bits by a missile but the U2 was captured almost completely intact.

Confident incriminating evidence would not have fallen into the Soviets' hands, the U.S. government issued an elaborate cover story, denying any aerial espionage. The Russians then produced the plane and its pilot, Francis Gary Powers, and raised a mighty international storm that led to cancellation of a planned summit meeting between Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev and President Dwight Eisenhower.

Nilsen, who spied on the CIA installation at Bode, Norway, Powers' destination, said he received several days advance notice the U2 was shortly expected to land there.

He also said the Soviets had previously asked him to try to put a bomb aboard one of the U2's at Bode but he was unable to do so because of tight security.

Nilsen said the Russians subsidized him in setting up a traveling circus so as to provide him with cover. During his frequent visits to Bode, he said he ingratiated himself with U.S. and other NATO military officers, invited them to parties and supplied them with liquor and women.

Nilsen made his assertions in a documentary produced for Swedish television by Peter Davis and Steffan Lamm. The documentary has not been shown in the U.S. because CBS, which wanted it, could not get a waiver from Powers, and the Public Broadcasting System, which is also interested, has not found a sponsor.

Powers, who was interviewed at length for the documentary, reportedly felt it cast him in an unfavorable light.

His version of what happened to his plane could be interpreted as supporting Nilsen's report a bomb had been placed in the tail of the U2.

"This big explosion took place," Powers said, "and the explosion I'm sure was behind and to the right of the airplane, but I don't know where back there. I didn't feel an impact against the aircraft, all I felt was a sudden acceleration."

Shortly after Powers was captured, Nilsen said he went to the Soviet Union for one of his many reporting trips. During a party celebrating the event, he said: "One of the officers explained to me that the U2 had not been shot down — they had managed to put a bomb in the tail-part, in such a way that it exploded exactly over Russian territory."

The narrator of the documentary suggested the Soviets suppressed the Nilsen version because they wanted to stop further U2 flights by persuading the U.S. their missiles could knock down high flying planes.

Nilsen, who was recruited by the Russians during World War II, was arrested by the Norwegian police in 1967 and served a two-year prison term.

U.S. Warns Against False Food Hopes

Washington (AP) — U.S. participants in the World Food Conference in Rome next month are warning against any expectation that ways will be found to feed all of the world's hungry in the next few years.

They say they don't want to build false hopes by other nations that the United States will agree to bankroll an international food welfare system.

Instead, participants such as ambassador Edwin M. Martin and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz say the emphasis at the meeting in Rome Nov. 5-16 should be on improving agriculture production in developing countries.

The U.S. delegation will support the idea of a system of nationally held food reserves. However, Russian participation is regarded by some delegation sources as a key condition before such a system can actually function.

U.S. officials say a stockpile of 30 million to 60 million tons of grain could be set up but details would have to be worked out.

The meeting of about 130 nations was proposed a year ago by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to discuss ways of maintaining adequate world food supplies and to deal with hunger arising from natural disasters.

Martin, a career diplomat who is organizing U.S. participation in the conference, said the Ford administration may pledge some increase in its food aid program, which has declined sharply in volume in the last two years.

But he said world hunger probably will be a fact of life for 10 years to come.

Some government officials planning the conference believe the United States has shifted emphasis from help-now to help-tomorrow. They said this is in part because of a worsening outlook for U.S. farm production this year.

However, these same adverse crop conditions, along with rising prices, have made the developing countries, especially India, Bangladesh and Central Africa, desperate for help now.

"The conference was called at a time when we anticipated good food harvests," said Howard L. Worthington, a deputy assistant Treasury secretary. "I don't think they had in mind that things were going to be even worse."

"If we had a good crop this year, people would be concentrating on how to help people feed themselves, and wouldn't be worrying about food aid," he added.

The administration has asked Congress for $1 billion for food aid in the current fiscal year, which will provide about the same quantity of food as last year. But the volume of food aid last year was the lowest since Congress approved the U.S. Food for Peace law in 1954.

While food aid has declined, U.S. agricultural commercial exports soared last year to $21.3 billion, nearly twice the previous year's.

Martin said that resulted from the increased commercial demand for U.S. food and the declining food surplus.

"Food aid has been a by-product of unwanted reserves in the past," he said in an interview. "It used to be cheaper to give it away than pay for storage."

But World Bank President Robert S. McNamara takes an opposite view.

In a recent speech he said, "Aid is not a luxury — something affordable when times are easy and superfluous when times become temporarily troublesome."

"Aid is a continuing social and moral responsibility, and its need now is greater than ever."

Lester R. Brown, a food expert with the Overseas Development Council and a former Agriculture Dept. official, also says Americans must do some "belt-tightening" to be sure death rates do not rise dramatically in a number of developing countries.

He said at a news conference this past week that there already is "disturbing evidence" that the 20-year decline in death rates has been reversed in anywhere from 12 to 20 developing nations of the world.

Special Watergate Prosecutor Ruth: Office Will Go On, Be Independent

Washington (UPI) — Henry Ruth, the third Watergate special prosecutor in a little over a year, has a quick answer for those who think the investigation of the political scandal that forced former President Richard Nixon from office is over.

"The office goes on. It will go on, and we will be independent," said Ruth Saturday as he was sworn in as head of the Watergate investigation team.

Ruth, 43, is a soft-spoken lawyer who has been the No. 2 man in the Watergate investigation since June 1973. He was deputy to both Archibald Cox, the first prosecutor who was fired during the infamous "Saturday Night Massacre" on Oct. 20, 1973, and Leon Jaworski, who left the job Friday after a little more than 11 months.

With a quiet "I do. Thank you very much," Ruth took the oath of office, kissed his wife and spoke briefly to the small crowd gathered for the low-key ceremony. He jokingly called the event "out annual change of special prosecutors."

Speaking briefly with reporters, Ruth refused comment on Jaworski's hint earlier this week of possible further Watergate-related indictments.

He said the prosecutor's office will focus on "a number of major investigations that we're going to finish" and added that conclusion of the Watergate probe hinges on "how quickly we get the tapes and document we need (from the White House)."

Ruth takes control when the most significant outgrowth of the investigation — the Watergate cover-up trial of five former Nixon aides and associates — is still in its early stages. But he will not play a principal role in that case, which features a team of government lawyers led by chief trial attorney James Neal.

A prototype of the B1, America's newest bomber, was rolled out Saturday.

Model of Controversial B1 Unveiled

Palmdale, Calif. (AP) — America's newest bomber, the supersonic B1, hailed by some as filling a gap in the United States defense ring and scored by critics as an expensive anachronism, was unveiled on the California desert Saturday.

The maiden showing of the prototype — first offspring of an $18.6 billion defense program — was halted briefly by a protester who broke out of the roped-off spectator area and tried to throw himself in front of the huge white, pin-nosed plane as it was being towed toward the speakers stand.

Security guards stopped him about 20 feet short of the plane and restrained him until it had resumed its journey. He was not arrested.

The nuclear missile-armed bomber, which promises to fly faster and farther with twice the payload of the aging B52s, has met stiff criticism from persons who say the B1 is the costliest weapons system in military history.

About 7,000 persons — many of them employees of Rockwell International which built the sleek jet — stood under cloudy skies at this city 50 miles north of Los Angeles as Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger delivered a strongly worded speech supporting the plane's part in the overall United States defense posture.

Schlesinger said the new bomber was needed to compensate for a Soviet missile advantage under agreements limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

"The SALT agreement established lower limits for U.S. missile forces than those applied to the Soviets, implicitly compensated for by a larger number of bombers," Schlesinger said. He said, "This points . . . to the necessity of a bomber" to replace the aging B52 force in the 1980s and beyond.

The four-year-old program has so far cost $1.6 billion. By 1983 — two years before the planned production of 247 planes, including three prototypes, ends — it is expected to cost $18.6 billion, some $7.4 billion more than the original 1970 cost estimate.

Flight testing of the B1 is scheduled to begin in December, with a final decision on production due in late 1976. If the program is approved, the first B1s would enter the United States' fleet in 1979.

Schlesinger implied cost should not be the determining factor as to whether the United States should go ahead and build B1 bombers.

He said the country's strategic nuclear forces are bought "not for their specific, cost-effective contribution to target destruction narrowly defined but for their broader contribution to that panoply of power than maintains deterrents."

That Rash, an Itch, It's Underwearitis?

Richmond, Va. (UPI) — If you're bothered with a rash and can't trace it to a common allergy, you might try throwing your underwear away.

A Medical College of Virginia dermatologist makes the suggestion, saying he traced a patient's skin rash to a "bleached-rubber allergy" that resulted from a complex chemical reaction between bleach and underwear.

Dr. William P. Jordan Jr. said he had been perplexed in looking for the cause of the rash and thought he might be dealing with an unknown type of contact dermatitis caused by an allergic reaction.

He was.

Jordan, who presented his findings Saturday to the International Contact Dermatitis Group in Copenhagen, Denmark, said he and a Virginia Commonwealth University chemist traced the problem to a reaction between bleach used by the patient's wife in laundering and the rubber in the elastic part of the underwear.

He said tests on volunteer inmates at the Virginia State Penitentiary show there may be a significant incidence of this type of skin allergy.

Jordan, who developed a widely used system for administering contact allergy tests, said many undergarments manufactured in the United States use the type of rubber susceptible to the bleach reaction.

He added there is no way the manufacturers of the underwear, the bleach or the rubber could have foreseen the reaction.

"It's ironic that such a complex reaction could just happen in the washing machine," Jordan said.

The allergy's symptoms — itching and rash where skin contacts the waistband and legbands — are identical to those of other known rubber allergies, Jordan said.

"You want the way to MA? Go back to PA and take the road to RI by way of CT."

MA, PA, CA, WA— What State Are We In?

by Herbert Kupferberg

Have you ever thought of taking a trip from MA to PA and even continuing on to CA or WA?

You can if you follow the two-letter state abbreviations approved by the United States Postal Service (USPS) for use in mail addresses.

The two-character designations, issued a few years ago, were originally intended for high-volume mailers who employ automatic addressing machines. But more and more ordinary letter-writers are starting to use them, too.

The advantage, of course, is that it's easier to write MA, PA, CA and WA than Mass., Penna., Calif. and Wash. On the other hand, some linguistic purists may feel that there's something lost, too.

There's a kind of imagery conjured up by certain of those traditional abbreviations. Wyo. brings a picture of carefree cowboys, Mich. of bustling automobile plants, Miss. of a mighty river flowing to the seas. Somehow, WY, MI and MS don't mean the same.

Of course, some people may like the new designation for their state. Residents of OK probably think it's OK, and citizens of OH may shrug the whole thing off with an "Oh." NY, NJ, NH and several others have always been two-character states, so they may not mind either.

But what about UT, CT, AK, HI and GU? Will these curt designations really satisfy the good people of Utah, Connecticut, Alaska, Hawaii and Guam? Should people in Idaho accept the Freudian connotations of ID, and those in Oregon be satisfied with the equivocation of OR? Can an inhabitant of AR always be certain he lives in Arkansas and not in Arizona? When do CO and PR leave off meaning "company" and "public relations" and signify instead Colorado and Puerto Rico?

Fortunately there's nothing mandatory about the system. We imagine quite a few people are going to use it in this abbreviation-prone age. On the other hand, there probably are going to be a good many others who will be inclined to dismiss it with a simple but heartfelt "Ugh." Or rather, UG.

Chicago — Former astronaut Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin Jr. has been traveling around the country talking about mental illness, his own included. It is not the great American success story that the public came to associate with astronauts in the 1960s.

Aldrin, 44, suffers periodically from depression. He sees both a psychiatrist and hypnotist regularly. He admits he boozes it up and he's on medication to keep his mental state on a more or less even keel.

Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin

A side effect of either the liquor or the lithium (which he takes "to chop off the highs" of his highs and lows, or both) is that Aldrin's hands tremble and he perspires.

Both his mother and maternal grandfather committed suicide and Aldrin is convinced both suffered from what now has: bipolar depression. "Unipolar is a steady, constant depression. Mine goes in cycles, manic depression. I've asked doctors if a person can inherit that. Some say no but I've found one who said yes," Aldrin explained.

For all that, Aldrin says he doesn't mind talking about his problems. In fact, "I enjoy the hell out of it."

"One of my goals is to change people's attitudes. I want to help Buzz Aldrin," he said emphatically during a visit to Chicago.

Aldrin explained if the stigma and mystery is stripped away from mental illness, he will benefit from it as he tries to earn a living and put his personal life in order.

Aldrin estimates his travels and public appearances as national chairman of the mental Health Assn. takes up 20% of his time. Then he has just fingers in a dozen business projects, manor of the test-pilot school at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. He was the only commander in the school's history who hadn't gone through the school. He was passed over for a rank increase, and as the weeks passed, Aldrin's self-confidence ebbed.

"On a trip East I was telling my father how I felt and as I talked I realized how bad it was, Aldrin remembered. Finally he got the flight surgeon at Edwards to admit him to a hospital, ostensibly for a neck muscle problem.

Aldrin doesn't remember that anyone suggested professional help. The wife of one colonel told him, "You'll find your salvation in Jesus."

Actually, Aldrin had been a religious man, served as an elder in a Presbyterian Church in Houston and took a tiny chalice, wine and a wafer on the moon trip so he could serve himself communion before the lunar landing. But in late 1971, Aldrin knew he needed more than prayer.

Aldrin spent a month in the hospital but the giant leap was far from the full journey. He took a pass, first to visit his wife and family, then to see a divorcee in New York and beg her to not marry another man but wait until Aldrin could get a divorce.

He and his wife Joan went to Acapulco for a wedding anniversary and Aldrin decided it was time to ask for the divorce.

"We were having dinner and Joan raised her glass. She said, 'Here's to our 17th Buzz. Will there be an 18th?'"

Aldrin had been talking, almost nonstop for about an hour. He stopped and tears welled up in his eyes. After a long pause he mumbled, "It's still kinda hard to talk about it." Finally, he finished the story. The divorcee married the other man and the Aldrins "decided to pick up the pieces. It has been rough."

The former astronaut retired from the Air Force in 1972 and Buzz, Joan and the three children moved to a 2½-acre place that he likes to call a "ranch" in the San Fernando Valley.

Aldrin admits now that when he came out of his first, long depression he thought he had whipped it. When a second short one occurred this year, he trimmed that estimate down to "handling it. I'm convinced that if I can handle it, anyone can."

Space Becoming Cosmic Junkyard

Washington (AP) — There's a population explosion of sorts in outer space.

Not the baby boom variety, but in the steadily increasing number of manmade objects orbiting the earth, more than 3,200 at latest count.

"It's starting to look like a junkyard out there," said an official of the North American Defense Command (NORAD), which keeps track of satellites and debris circling the globe.

According to the adage, "What goes up, must come down." And the stuff is coming down at the rate of one piece a day. Almost all of it burns up from atmospheric friction, and the odds against anyone being hit are calculated at more than one billion to one.

But NORAD estimates that by year 2000 there will be 10,000 objects in space, and more fragments are expected to survive re-entry and thus impact on earth because of sturdier materials and improved designs. So the chances of getting beamed will become greater unless preventive steps are taken.

Most of the orbiting material is useless debris from two sources: Satellites and rocket cases that break apart, and expendable items such as nose shrouds, nuts and bolts, cable tethers, spent engines and pressure bottles that are discarded when a payload enters orbit.

NORAD analysts foresee new launch designs that would keep most of the expendable items attached to the final rocket stage.

NORAD's Space Defense Center at Colorado Springs, Colo., keeps tabs on all orbiting objects through a worldwide network of radars and optical sensors, some of which can photograph an item the size of a basketball 20,000 miles away.

NORAD experts are able to make fairly precise predictions on how long each will remain in space. As decay time nears, they can forecast the approximate re-entry path within 100 miles or so.

If a re-entry situation is potentially hazardous, warnings are issued to airlines and various government and scientific agencies.

The NORAD center presently logs 3,229 space objects. Only 705 are actual payloads. The United States has 356 satellites and 1,753 pieces of debris in orbit. Russia has 267 and 672, respectively. The rest are the property of several other nations.

Gallup Poll Demo House Vote Landslide Foreseen

Princeton, N.J. — With the elections only nine days away, the seminal Gallup report shows the Democrats holding a commanding lead in the race for the 435 seats in the House of Representatives.

In surveys completed in the middle of October, Democrats win 55% of the vote for House candidates as opposed to 35% for the Republicans, with 2% choosing candidates of other parties and 8% undecided.

The latest findings indicate a landslide in the making, with Democratic seat gains likely to be considerably in excess of the normal off-year gains for the party out of power.

The results reported today, which show no improvement for the GOP since the previous Gallup report, mark the demise of President Nixon's "new majority." Stung by inflation and disillusionment over Watergate, many normally Democratic voters who backed Nixon in his landslide victory in 1972 now lean heavily Democratic in their preferences.

These include groups such as manual workers, Catholics and labor union families, voter groups Nixon and Republican party strategists hoped to build into a new coalition.

The previous Gallup report showed Democrats with 54%, Republicans with 35%, 3% voting for candidates of other parties and 8% undecided.

In the last congressional election year of 1970, the Gallup Poll's seminal report showed a closer race than today's, with

Ford, Bodyguard Look-alikes

By R. H. Growald

Thurmont, Md. (UPI) — President Ford never packs a gun. But Ford has a double who does — the chief Secret Service man in the presidential bodyguard detail.

That fact has triggered some confused identifications and, Saturday, a bit of joking speculation over whether Ford would attend the Thanksgiving turkey shoot being held by folks around this community in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

The Thurmont shoot near the presidential retreat, a White House spokesman said, holds little interest for Ford who "has never been known to carry a gun."

The gun thing started when Police Chief Nelson Beckett of Warr Acres, Okla., said he saw Ford move a pistol from a coat pocket during a campaign visit to Oklahoma Tuesday.

The White House spokesman said no — Beckett must have seen Richard Keiser, the Secret Service agent in charge of the White House detail.

Ford and his chief bodyguard are almost look-alikes, especially to someone who has never before seen the President in person.

In Des Moines Thursday, even White House press corps veterans got into an argument over who was who in one crowd scene. Reporters in the press bus saw Ford and Keiser plunge into a crowd. One of the two removed his jacket.

Which husky broad-shouldered partly bald man was the President?

"Good gosh, Keiser's taken off his jacket," said one.

"Oh, no, only a President could take off his jacket in the presence of the President.

Besides, no Secret Service man would want to display his gun and holster," said another reporter.

It was, the White House spokesman clarified, the President who could ease the burden of sunshine by removing his coat.

Keiser does resemble the President.

Both have a sharply receding hairline and a bald spot at the back of the skull. Each has heavy eyebrows, wide cheekbones, a firm chin and a broad nose in addition to the wide shoulders of an athlete. Ford was a college football star, a center at the University of Michigan.

Most of Keiser's crew resemble sleek professional golfers rather than football guards or tackles. But when the Secret Service detail chief wears a suit similar to that of the President and their backs are turned, a presidential spotter sees double.

The White House spokesman said Beckett probably mistook the pipe and tobacco pouch, which are often in Ford's hand, for a pistol. And of course, the spokesman said, there is one easy way to tell the President from the agent.

"Keiser rarely smiles. Keiser never waves both arms at crowds," he said.

Some Amtrak Fares Up

Washington (AP) — Citing inflation, Amtrak said Saturday it is increasing fares an average of 10% on most of its routes effective Nov. 15.

"Congress, recognizing the cost escalation affecting Amtrak fuel, material and labor, restated earlier this year its intent that Amtrak compensate, to the extent possible, for such increases with fare adjustments," the railroad passenger corporation said in announcing the increases.

It said the fare increase is generally applicable in the East.

Local fares between Chicago and Denver will not be raised.

It said details of the varying rate changes will be included in a new Amtrak systemwide tariff to be published Oct. 27.

Institute Charging CBS with Biasness

Washington (UPI) — The institute for American Strategy (IAS) Saturday accused CBS of trying to "mislead the press and the public" about an institute report which found the network's TV news reporting on national defense issues "partial and slanted."

John M. Fisher, president of the institute, said CBS news president Richard S. Salant "has attempted to mislead the press and the public regarding the integrity of recent findings of an institute study" on the network's coverage of defense issues.

CBS had no immediate reply to Fisher's accusations.

The institute, which favors strengthening U.S. defenses against the Soviet Union, released a 209-page report Wednesday based on a two-year study of CBS news programs.

The report said CBS had given much more time to coverage of those satisfied with present defense programs or those advocating reduced Pentagon spending than it gave to those favoring increased defense efforts.

In so doing, the institute charged, the network "clearly violated the Federal Communications Commission's fairness doctrine, the television code of the National Association of Broadcasters and the code of ethics of the Radio-Television News Directors Assn."

"We had hoped that CBS would give serious and careful consideration to the study on its merits," Fisher said.

"However, in responding to the study's disclosures this week, Mr. Salant tried to question the integrity of the study and the scholars who participated by misinforming the press as to the content of a letter I wrote to IAS supporters one year ago."

The institute, which has its headquarters in Boston, Va., describes itself as a nonprofit educational institution devoted to research and education in the field of national security.

The Swing Era

story-stirring series offers you more than Band instrumental and vocal hits - not in lchy monaural recordings, not in doctored-
- but in rich, modern stereo. These swing have been re-created in the original arrangements and recorded "live" by present-day master musicians, many of whom played in the original big bands.

As a result, these stereo records are so true to life, so rich in sweet sounds, that you may feel as if you've been transported back in time to join the dancing throngs at the old Palladium or the Glen Island Casino.

To further enhance the pleasures of your "sentimental journey," each album of The Swing Era series also includes a delightful, word-and-picture book devoted to the Big Band years. In these books, you'll share in the exciting history of swing as it swept the nation, you'll meet the men who played the music, and you'll re-experience fads, fashions and memorable moments of the period, from saddle shoes to the golden age of radio, vintage Hollywood spectaculars and dancing in the aisles at the Paramount Theater.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Chastity Reborn

It sounds incredible, especially in these days of sexual permissiveness and women's lib, but in Japan many families still go to great lengths to determine if their son's prospective marital partner has engaged in premarital sex relations.

Frequently, the bride-to-be must obtain a certificate of virginity from a gynecologist for presentation to her future in-laws.

Virginity is valued so highly in Japan that plastic surgeons now specialize in what is known in Tokyo as "hymen rebirth." The operation takes only five minutes plus two or so hours for the anesthetic to fade.

Dr. Fumio Umezawa, president of the Japanese Foundation for Cosmetic Surgery, says, "The operation has become increasingly popular because it serves a good purpose. It removes from the bride any guilt feelings she may have because of past experiences. It also permits young unmarried women to enjoy themselves sexually without the fear that they will not be able to find husbands later on in life."

Dr. Umezawa charges $150 to $200 for the five-minute operation, and the good doctor confesses that "I myself perform three to four hundred a year. Many of my colleagues do many more."

In prewar Japan one ground for divorce was marriage to a non-virginal wife on her wedding night. That law no longer exists. Even so, modern Japanese men seem to prize female virginity—natural or reconstructed.

Overseeing School Records

On Nov. 17, the Education Amendments Act of 1974 goes into effect. Under its provisions all secondary schools must provide parents the opportunity to inspect and review the cumulative school records of their children. The same right applies to students 18 or older attending any institution of post-high school education.

The law also will protect student files against inspection by anybody outside the school system without parental consent—except, of course, other schools in which the student expects to enroll, or in compliance with a court order. In other words, the confidentiality of school records against outsiders has now been established.

The new legislation was introduced by Sen. James L. Buckley, (Cons., N.Y.), who says his "inspiration" was an article in PARADE March 31, 1974 entitled "How Secret School Records Can Hurt Your Child." According to his press secretary, Leonard Saffir, "The PARADE article underscored a specific, widespread problem: the abuse of children's school files and the inability of parents to obtain access to their children's files."

If parents or students uncover "misinformation" in the cumulative record they have the right under the new law to a hearing to "challenge and expunge any inaccurate, misleading or otherwise inappropriate information." School districts failing to comply with the new statute may lose federal funds.

J. Paul Getty III on the Lecture Trail

J. Paul Getty III, 18, and his longtime girlfriend, Martine Zacher-Winklemann, 25, finally made it. They were married last month in Sovicille, Italy, after the wedding had been postponed because young Paul couldn't produce his birth certificate.

Martine, who was four months pregnant when they were wed—she has another baby—18-month-old Anna Exuma by a previous marriage—plans to accompany young Getty to the United States where supposedly he has lined up a lecture tour at American universities. His subject: "The Politics of Terror," in which he will describe his kidnapping, how his assailants severed his right ear and mailed it to an Italian newspaper, and how he waited anxiously for his billionaire grandfather and namesake to produce the million dollars which finally ransomed him.

1974—A Good Year to Graduate

Now in October it may not seem that way, but 1974 was a good year for college graduates seeking jobs.

The College Placement Council reveals that the number of job offers submitted to bachelor degree candidates rose 25 percent this year over last. Those with masters' degrees had offers up 12 percent, and those with doctorates up 34 percent.

The Placement Council's survey was based on job offers made to students in selected programs during the normal recruiting period, September to June.

The major source of employment offers for bachelor candidates was manufacturing and industry, 68 percent. Business firms accounted for another 22 percent, followed by government job offers, 7 percent.

Most of the job offers to master's degree candidates went to business and engineering majors.

The average salary offer to a bachelor degree candidate majoring in engineering was $997 a month. An accounting major was offered $925 a month, and general business majors averaged $803 a month.

Venezuela Feels She Has to Make Good

By Marvin Howe

(c) New York Times News Service

Caracas, Venezuela — There is a feeling of urgency here in the halls of Congress, the plush skyscraper offices, the noisy factories and even the tropical parks where the unemployed wait for a day's work.

Venezuela, with a windfall of oil money — estimated at $10 billion in 1974, compared with $3 billion last year — feels she has to make good.

"If we miss out this time, with all our oil money, we will be in bad trouble," a prominent physician commented.

But making good means more than just having more oil money. Venezuelans want to free themselves from dependence on what is after all a finite supply of oil and to become a minor industrial power.

Oil, in fact, has not entirely been a positive factor in Venezuela. Many people feel their country's principal problems have come from the "easy money" that oil represents and from the failure of government to put the oil money to productive use; they wonder if things will change.

Carlos Andres Perez, who took office as president in March after a sweeping electoral victory, apparently is aware of the country's mood and has said repeatedly that "This is the last chance for Venezuelan democracy."

His meaning is clear: If his government, with all its available resources, cannot solve urgent problems, Venezuela could follow most of the rest of Latin America into authoritarianism. He has therefore begun an ambitious program aimed at ending the paradoxical situation of the country rich in oil in which more than a third of the population of 12 million lives on the margin of subsistence.

Indeed there are two Venezuelas. One is a dynamic, modern, urban consumer society with high expectations. The other consists of perhaps 4.8 million marginal rural people, the migrants clustered in poverty around the cities.

Close to U.S.

Venezuela is close to the U.S. both geographically, on the northern shores of South America, and in tastes.

Venezuelans are an easy-going blend of people, whose ancestors came mainly from southern Europe and mixed widely with native Indians and blacks of African descent. Although the upper crust is generally white, there are no racial ghettos or violence and about 70% of the population comes from racially mixed backgrounds.

Venezuelans are essentially political animals. Fathers teach children from the age of 2 to chant their party slogans. Many business and government departments, even cultural and charity groups, consider party allegiances above other qualifications.

Modern Venezuelans are closer to the U.S. than to Europe, not only geographically but in their tastes and anxieties. There's more concern here over Watergate, pollution, traffic and automation than any other Latin

Carlos Andres Perez
American country.

Venezuelans are eager baseball fans, like big cars, air conditioning, credit cards, shopping centers and American movies. English has replaced French as the first foreign language in schools because Venezuelans who speak English generally command higher salaries.

Yet Venezuelans are increasingly nationalistic. They may go to school in the U.S. or Europe but they rarely stay. "What we want is know-how, so we can do things ourselves," a U.S.-trained economist says, and variations of this theme are heard in every field.

High Per Capita Income

Venezuela has the highest per capita income in Latin America — $1,260 in 1973, compared with $55 in 1969, when oil prices were still depressed (in the U.S. per capita income in 1973 was $5,000).

The affluence of urban society has been accompanied by excessive urbanization. About 78% of the population is massed in and around the cities, which have insufficient housing, schools and sanitary and transport facilities.

Furthermore, Venezuela began to live on easily accessible U.S. exports, from corn flakes and beans to expensive cars and rock music.

"The people have stopped working because of the oil money and left their fields to follow the bright lights," said Juan Pablo Perez Alfonso, former minister of mines and chief architect of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). For years he has urged drastic cutbacks in oil production to save resources for future generations and avoid what he calls economic indigestion.

Venezuelans are generally self-critical about how they have wasted much of the oil areas of the northwest. Oil was discovered in commercial quantities in Lake Maracaibo in 1914 but had virtually no impact until after World War II.

The dictator, Juan Vicente Gomez, who governed stringently from 1908 to 1935, is described as a semiliterate peasant who did not understand the value of the oil and gave the oil lands to members of his family, who sold them to foreign interests.

Another dictator, Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez, used some funds to lay out highways in the 1950's but spent most of the money on spectacular projects that afforded little but construction jobs and prestige.

In more recent times, as the oil wealth has been put to more effective use, migrants have flocked into service industries or soft government jobs depleting the country side and reducing agricultural output. Others, less fortunate, have joined the ranks of the unemployed or underemployed, estimated to total 2.3 million, or a third of the labor force, and have moved into slums known as ranches.

Root of Problem?

A dramatic study, "Unemployment: The National Evil," German Cortas concludes the root of the problem is that the petroleum industry employs fewer than 25,000 people to provide the bulk of the country's basic wealth.

About 800,000 people live in ranches on the hills around Caracas, and there are similar poverty belts around other major cities, all of which are centers of malnutrition, prostitution and delinquency. The governor of Caracas is trying to move people back to rural areas, but they do not want to go.

"I'd rather die of hunger in Caracas than go back to the country," said a laundry woman who was recently ordered out.

"We've done poorly, wasted tremendous revenues with lousy planning and little followup," said Humberto Penaloza, president of an oil company.

One of the severest critics is the finance minister, Hector Hurtado, who said: "We know how to build but we don't know how to administer or maintain." He points to the state petrochemical industry as one of the biggest failures, a victim of "false nationalism."

Carlos Andres Perez came to power at a time when oil prices had risen fourfold and Venezuela was confronted with a serious problem of how to spend its wealth.

Although his Democratic Action party, which is comparable to the British Labor party, won a comfortable majority in Congress, he asked for "extraordinary economic powers" for a year to bypass bureaucratic and legislative delays.

His first measures were obviously aimed at fulfilling electoral promises, among them an across-the-board pay increase of 5 to 25% for all earning under $1,200, a minimum wage for farm workers and domestics, a temporary price freeze.

Oil Nationalization

No doubt even more important was the announcement of nationalization of the oil industry, controlled by Exxon, Shell and Gulf, within a year. The companies' contracts were due to expire starting in 1963, but all political parties have been pressing for earlier reversion.

In a surprise action, Perez also ruled iron-ore concessions held by U.S. Steel and Bethlehem should revert to the state by the end of this year rather than the year 2000, as originally agreed.

At the same time he launched long-range programs in agriculture, industry and education in an effort to transform society. Finance Minister Hurtado believes the country can be largely self-sufficient in agriculture in three years as a result of a new price policy, credits and other incentives to raise productivity.

"Our most immediate problem is the lack of qualified manpower," said Dr. Francisco Kerdel, a physician and a member of the board of the government's new program of mass scholarships, which aims to send 10,000 students to local and foreign universities annually.

Simultaneously, the government has begun to set up university institutes of technology in each of the 20 states. These technical junior colleges are to provide 15 basic specialties in economic development.

Perez has declared the pillar of development is to be the steel industry at the new city of Ciudad Guayana, in the southeast. Founded in 1962 with a population of 30,000, it is a vigorous, well-planned and rapidly expanding city of over 200,000 based on cheap hydroelectric power.

The 51-year-old president has shaken the country with his fierce pace. At first the public applauded enthusiastically and private opinion polls showed 78% support for him at the end of June. Since then he has had to slow down because he upset businessmen and the bureaucracy could not keep up with him.

Then public opinion shifted substantially amid a serious wave of inflation after some prices, including those of basic food items, were unfrozen.

In still another reversal in the last few weeks, his popularity is up again, thanks to President Ford's criticism of the oil producers and the Venezuelan leader's reply, in which he accused the industrial nations of paying low prices for raw materials and charging high prices for manufactured goods.

"What we demand is justice," Perez said.

Create hand-made tree ornaments... indoor and outdoor displays... candleholders and tabletoppers... wall hangings and centerpieces... plus decorations for New Year, Valentine's Day, Easter, Halloween, Thanksgiving and all major holidays.

Christmas-Time Cook Book features more than 200 pages of mouth-watering dishes. You'll find old-world recipes for rich, dark fruitcake, Sugar-Spritz Cookies and Squash Pie... along with exotic yuletide treats like Turkey Teriyaki and Coconut Milk Punch (an Hawaiian favorite)... plus traditional Christmas meals of Standing Rib Roast and plump, stuffed Turkey. Also included are helpful, practical hints on setting a festive table, preparing food gifts for friends, and storing left-overs.

Take both these idea-packed volumes — a combined $15.90 retail value — for just $1.95 plus postage and handling as an introduction to Better Homes and Gardens Family Book Service. Family Book Service offers a wide selection of creative idea books on every subject of importance to home and family: home decorating, sewing, crafts, gardening, family medical problems, home repairs and remodeling, money management, child care, and much more.

Here is how the Family Book Service works: every 4 weeks you get the club bulletin, Editor's Choice, which describes the current selection and alternates. You also get 2 special seasonal bulletins. If you want the current selection do nothing, and it will be sent to you automatically. If you want an alternate selection, or no book at all, just tell us your wishes on a card provided for that purpose. Cards are timed to give you at least 10 days to tell us your wishes. Should the card arrive too late — and you receive a book you don't want to keep — you may return it at our expense. You may also return any books you do not wish to keep after examining them for 10 days.

You may cancel your membership after purchasing 2 books at substantial discounts off publisher's prices (plus postage and handling) during the next 12 months. Or if you are not satisfied with your introductory shipment, return both volumes within 10 days to cancel membership. You choose from 15 regular selections and dozens of alternates. Pope Paul VI

Pontiff Rejects Many Changes

(c) New York Times
Rome — Addressing the final session of the month-long synod of bishops, Pope Paul VI Saturday pronounced its work "positive" and then rejected many of the principal proposals made at the synod.

Reminding the bishops of his primacy and on the task assigned by the Lord of "tending his lambs and sheep," the Pope said: "We would not be able to remain silent. We could not allow false directions to be followed."

Warning that some points made by the bishops "demand a refining," that "not all the elements are to be retained," and that proposals "need to be placed in proper proportion," he listed first and foremost proposals for changing "the relationship between the particular churches and the Apostolic See."

A number of bishops had pressed for greater freedom for local dioceses to decide more matters without asking Rome's approval. The Pope rejected this, saying: "No, we say with trepidation, by reason of the responsibility that falls upon us, that the successor of Peter (the Pope) is and remains the ordinary pastor of the church in her unity and entirety."

Pope Paul quoted a passage from the dogmatic constitution on the Church, a document approved by the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965), which says that the Pope "has full, supreme and universal power in the church."

He passed over the collegial statement from the next paragraph of the document which says: "Together with its head, the Roman Pontiff, and never without this head, the episcopal order is the subject of supreme and full power over the Universal Church."

Of demands, especially by African bishops, for expressions of faith corresponding to local cultures, the Pope said: "This is indeed a necessary requirement... it would, nevertheless, be dangerous to speak of diversified theologies according to continents and cultures. The content of the faith is either Catholic or it is not. All of us have received the faith of a constant tradition. Peter and Paul did not transform it to adapt it to the Jewish, Greek or Roman world."

Many bishops from Latin America had urged greater commitment to politico-economic liberation movements, but the Pope warned that "the totality of salvation is not to be confused with one or another aspect of liberation." He added that "human advancement and social progress, is not to be excessively emphasized on a temporal level to the detriment of the essential meaning which evangelization has for the Church of Christ, the announcement of the good news."

Commenting on the Pope's 35-minute address in Latin, the most Rev. Donal R. Lamont, the Irish-born bishop of Umali, Rhodesia, noted: "It was the Pope saying: 'I have not been appointed the Lord's first minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the Roman empire.' It was the Pope speaking as the boss man. I'm in charge, and I'm very grateful to you people for helping, but I'll make up my own mind. I'm not Hamlet."

Maurice Cardinal Otunga, archbishop of Nairobi, Kenya, suggested that "the Pope was really telling us to be careful."

Before leaving the final session, the bishops learned the results of Friday's voting on final documents prepared by two working groups set up when the single document originally proposed was rejected Tuesday for being too general. Approving a similarly general, but new and shorter "declaration of the synodal fathers," the vote was 182 to 11.

I bought a Texas Instruments electric calculator from All Makes Office Equipment Co. in February. On Aug. 15, I returned the calculator to All Makes for repairs. I'm still waiting for its return. Can you help?

—Gary Jewell, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Harlan Priesman, manager of All Makes Office Equipment Co., 1100 O St., said he's anxious to figure out what happened to your calculator, too.

The machine was shipped to Texas Instruments for repairs. About 85% of the repairs can be done in his store, he said, but this was an off-beat problem.

Texas Instruments is trying to locate the machine, Priesman said. During a recent consolidation of all repair shops to one location in Dallas, several calculators evidently got misplaced.

Priesman asked that you stop in his office soon, and he'll personally make amends for your missing calculator.

Watch Your Touch

ACTION TIP: Have you ever reached for a piece of toast and ended up with a toaster burn or blistered a wrist after brushing against the supposedly touchable side of an electric iron?

Louis A. Marzetta, research engineer, National Bureau of Standards, U.S. Commerce Dept., has developed an instrument to help designers produce safe products and, in turn, cut down on such appliance-related accidents.

This thermes-thesiometer can duplicate and measure the response of human finger tissue to heated surfaces.

Burn injuries, and their severity, are dependant on the length of time you are in contact with a heated surface as well as the contact temperature, Marzetta said.

Hopefully, this gadget will encourage legal requirements about the safety of heated surfaces. Until then, watch your touch.

Up, Not Down

What has been the increase in the U.S. cost of living since 1972?

—Lee Kruse, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The old adage "what goes up must come down" won't describe the Consumer Price Index (CPI), at least on a short-term basis.

In October of 1972, the CPI, considered the best measure of cost of living changes, hit 128.6 compared to 100 in the 1967 base year. That means you'd pay about $1.27 for the same goods and services you handed over one buck for five years earlier.

The September 1974 index count, the most recent available this year, jumped to 151.9, compared to the 1967 base.

No Hot Item

Please help me find some isinglass to repair the small windows in the front of an old wood stove.

—Charlene Sieck, Martell

ACTION LINE: Isinglass, a transparent, fireproof covering, isn't a hot sales item in most stores. However, Action Line did find one outlet.

Milt Burkley, sales clerk at Baker Hardware Co., 801 N St., said this store carries the isinglass in five sizes — 2x4 inches, 3x4 inches, 4x5 inches, 4x8 inches and 6x10 inches. Cost begins at 22¢ for one sheet of the smallest size.

Pemican, Anyone?

ACTION UPDATE: Mary Ann Bowman, Lincoln, has alerted Action Line to another recipe for pemican. (One was reported in the Oct. 13 column.)

Hey, Give Yourself

Women, men and youth are needed by the nonprofit Volunteer Bureau. Address responses to Rm. 225, Lincoln Center Bldg., 215 So. 15th, Lincoln, Neb. 68508.

Do You Care? Enough to be an advocate to a retarded person on a one-to-one basis? One contact per week is requested. Several volunteers are needed.

Do You Care? Enough to work at a nature center as a trail guide or on the bird banding program? For someone who enjoys the outdoors. Three or four volunteers are needed.

Do You Care? Enough to be a friendly visitor once a week to a lonely homebound person? Many volunteers are needed.

During the past week six volunteers and one group registered at the Volunteer Bureau of the Lincoln Area, according to Ms. Susan Jackson, director. They have been referred to LOMR, Lincoln Information for the Elderly, Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council, City Recreation Developmental Program for the Handicapped and Lincoln General Hospital.

County Funds Could Be Earning More

By Warren Weber

The amount of county funds placed in interest earning deposits by the county treasurer's office appears to be substantially below the level it could be.

Compared to investments by the City of Lincoln and Douglas County, the county government here is losing money which could be going into the county coffers if more funds were taken out of idle checking accounts and placed in interest earning savings accounts.

The amount of county money invested in interest deposits varies from 45% to 58%, according to reports County Treasurer Frank Golden submitted to the County Board when it recently asked him for information on his investment and banking practices.

The city treasurer's office and the Douglas County treasurer's office both report that they invest at least 85% of their funds in accounts which draw interest. Sometimes that percentage of invested funds goes as high as 97%.

Both offices report they keep a bare minimum in checking accounts, no more than is needed to pay off outgoing checks for claims and payrolls.

The city treasurer's office here keeps an average of $600,000 in checking and currently has about $17 million invested in interest paying accounts. Douglas County reports that it carries about $1 million in checking for its cash flow and, has approximately $16 million in savings deposits.

State Voter Registration Total Drops

Nebraska Republicans took their lumps in voter registration figures released Saturday by the secretary of state's office, although the GOP remained the dominant party.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann warned the figures were not final totals for the Nov. 5 election. Registration ended Friday and complete figures cannot be compiled before Nov. 5.

Most counties had figures up to Oct. 15, but Jefferson County registration data only included those registered by Oct. 1.

Total state registration was 787,746, down from 794,212 before the May primary. There have been registrations since the primary, but many counties also have purged their registration rolls of persons who moved or died.

Republicans had a total registration of 386,109 in the latest figures, down from 394,908 in preprimary data.

Democrats in the latest figures showed a gain of 1,942 moving from 362,468 before the primary to 364,410 in the latest compilation.

Independents also increased, going from 36,839 the primary to 37,227 in the new figures.

Officials of Nebraska's two major parties predicted a fair-to-good voter turnout Nov. 5 despite the absence of a U.S. Senate race and what some say is a lackluster gubernatorial contest.

Each cited what could be close races in the state's three congressional district and said his party would be working hard to get out voters.

Dick White, Democratic state chairman, said his prediction of a good turnout meant it would approach 50% of the registered voters, but that could be the top.

Glenn Wilson, executive secretary of the state GOP, predicted a 50% turnout of the registered voters.

He said the actual number of registered voters probably is lower than the number of compiled because purges of the rolls never quite catch up with changes.

Gillette, Wyo. — "Boomtown" is not a word appreciated by leaders in this northeast Wyoming community, but it flows easily in discussing what has happened to the once sleepy cowtown.

It is not just one boom that has changed

Golden said he does not know how much money Lancaster County needs to keep on hand to pay its bills. He said it is hard to estimate because claims against the county vary from time to time.

"This is a big operation," he said.

According to the latest information Golden has forwarded to the County Board showing a breakdown of county deposits, the lowest amount deposited in the county's checking accounts was $2.8 million and the highest was $4.4 million.

These figures are from balance sheets dated Dec. 31 and June 30, respectively. The December tally sheet showed a total of $3.9 million in interest-earning deposits and the June report listed $3.7 million.

Why does Lancaster need up to four times more money in its checking accounts than is needed for similar accounts maintained by the city government and Golden's counterpart in Douglas County?

Although Golden said he does not know how much money the county needs to keep on hand to pay its debts, he does say he could have placed more funds in interest paying accounts.

Admitting there may be room for improvement, the treasurer said his overall investment program has been good and a proper portion of funds were placed in interest drawing accounts. According to records in his office, the county earned $482,275 in interest on general fund accounts and another $158,171 on federal revenue sharing funds during the fiscal year which ended July 1.

Golden said those interest earnings are the highest ever paid to the county.

County Commissioners Jan Gauger and Robert Colin point out that had more money been placed in savings accounts, the interest earned by the county would have been larger. Both commissioners said they were surprised to learn from Golden's reports that the county has idle funds which could be invested.

They stress, however, that the County Board has no control over Golden's investment or banking practices since he is an elected official and has, in effect, a free hand in running his office.

Most of the county's funds are deposited in the two largest banks here, First National Bank and National Bank of Commerce. According to Golden's June 30 financial statement, the county had funds totaling $8.1 million, of which $6.9 million was deposited in the two larger banks. The remaining $1.2 million was divided among the 16 other county banks.

First National and NBC accounts are used to pay most of the county's warrants, although Golden said he sometimes draws checks on the other banks.

A total of $895,000 has been deposited in checking accounts in the 16 smaller banks since last December, even though those accounts are not often drawn upon. The county treasurer said he maintains checking accounts in those banks as a courtesy and incentive for them to cash payroll checks for county employees.

Under state law, county deposits in banks not used for active checking accounts should be distributed to banks in proportion to the banks' capitalization. The intent of the law is to eliminate the possibility of preferential treatment.

Golden said his deposits aren't always proportional to a bank's capitalization, but he contends that he plans to correct any deposits which aren't in line with the state law.

He said he hasn't received any complaints on his deposit procedures from bankers in the county.

Vets Day Will Be Celebrated Twice By Spanish-American War Corporal

By Dean Terrill

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Friend — Although it has been riddled by moths, the old uniform is still a proud blue. Its corporal stripes are nearly as red as they were three-quarters of a century back. Its brass buttons will still take a polish.

And Frank R. Clark, one of Nebraska's last living Spanish-American War veterans, will pay his respects to his nation Monday "even though it has set the wrong date." Then he'll add a second salute when Nov. 11 comes around two weeks hence.

"I'd favor keeping Veterans Day as it was for years, but I'll probably celebrate both dates as holidays," said the 91-year-old. "We still have the finest country in this world despite all the kicking we do about it."

Apologetic that "this old chest has slipped downward a bit," Clark still managed to wriggle into the coat he wore during the 1899-1902 occupation of Cuba. A dimness of sight and hearing didn't keep his words from peeling forth as clear as a bugle call.

And it doesn't take a national holiday to get old Cpl. Frank to unfurl the flag.

"When I enlisted, patriotism was so rampant that a call for 25,000 volunteers actually brought out 50,000," he reflected. "Today that sort of thing is in the past, with thousands burning their draft cards and even renouncing their country. I say it would be a dishonor for us to forgive such fellows, though maybe the real conscientious objectors should be dealt with a little more friendly like."

Clark wanted to get into the Army badly enough that he walked 23 miles and, in order to make the minimum age of 18, "raised my years a bit." He was actually 15 when sworn into Battery M, 2nd U.S. Artillery, on May 12, 1899.

Sparkling Wit

What the New York native calls "my gift of a kaleidoscopic memory" is enriched by a wit nearly as remarkable. His eyes sparkle and his distinctive white goatee accents a smile as he jests about "my three whole years in Cuba without getting killed even once."

Recalling the 88,000 troops who attended Havana memorial services for the assassinated President McKinley, Clark also calls off the name of the bugler (Shetka) "who played the most beautiful Taps I ever heard."

Many are the times he saluted the late Douglas MacArthur's father, Gen. Arthur MacArthur. Also Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, the son of Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee.

It was the Spanish-American War which reunited this country, he reflected, "bringing the boys of blue and gray side by side." It was also the war which boomed the U.S.A. into a world power, he added.

Clark especially enjoys reminiscing with residents of Friend Manor about Teddy Roosevelt and his Rough Riders.

"The admired Teddy came to Cuba on a military inspection and I can still see his daughter with him," Clark said. "A pretty girl she was, and she wore a light straw sailor hat with a blue ribbon. She may be living yet for all I know, but if so, she's gotta be up there in years."

The recounting of two personal incidents especially widens the grin on Clark's face. One was "the honor accorded me" to serve as guard for Gen. Leonard A. Wood. The other was the time Clark, as an eager artilleryman, volunteered to test-fire a captured Spanish cannon.

"It was a 12-incher and I discovered that is a lot of gun," he recalled. "I was warned not to stand flat-footed, but nobody said anything about covering my ears. After the blast it was days before I could hear again."

Although he missed the famous charge up San Juan Hill and other actual combat, Clark was fired upon once while standing guard. The bullet intended for him wounded a Cuban boy.

Homesteaders

Clark came to Nebraska at age five following the death of his father in a New York railroad accident. The youngster's paternal grandparents homesteaded south of Friend.

Most of Clark's life has been devoted to farming, he and his late wife, Hazel, spending 67 years together in Virginia, New York, Missouri and Nebraska. They returned to Friend in 1962 and he entered the nursing home 1½ years ago.

A widowed daughter, Mrs. Geraldine Meinke, also is a Friend resident. Son Lyman lives in Omaha.

Educated at Drake University and the old Lincoln Business College, Clark served Saline County in a number of capacities, including that of county commissioner. He also worked with the AAA program and was a field supervisor for the Farm Credit Assn.

Now a Republican who "can't understand what crime Nixon is supposed to have committed," Clark was an ardent Democrat until the second Roosevelt came along. Among his keepsakes is a personal letter from Lyndon B. Johnson in response to a letter commending Johnson on a speech.

"I had written the President that in my opinion the speech compared with Lincoln's Gettysburg Address," explained the well-read olderster. "I really liked LBJ."

Federal Offices Will Not Be Open On Veterans Day

Federal offices and the Post Office will be closed in observance of Veterans Day Monday. However, state, county and city offices, as well as veterans organizations, will observe the traditional Nov. 11 date.

The Chamber of Commerce reports that most major businesses will be open.

Like It or Not, Wyoming's Gillette Is a Boomtown

Gillette, Wyo. — "Boomtown" is not a word appreciated by leaders in this northeast Wyoming community, but it flows easily in discussing what has happened to the once sleepy cowtown.

It is not just one boom that has changed has become king. The boom of 1974 centers on construction of five coal-mining operations and related facilities.

Gillette is 150 miles west of the Nebraska Panhandle, yet it is joined to Nebraska's economy by the Burlington Northern. Trains loaded with Wyoming coal are put together in Alliance, Neb., and can be seen all along BN's Nebraska routes.

At first glance, Gillette is a city of corrugated steel buildings, mobile homes and an axle-busting main street. It is this first impression and reputation that makes the word "boomtown" repugnant to such people as Chamber of Commerce manager Kenneth Baab.

"A boomtown," Baab said, "tends to attract people looking for a quick buck." However, by his own definition, Gillette's construction boom is one in which many men, especially single, are seeking a fast dollar.

Gillette has become a hard-drinking, rough-talking colony of men who use only first names.

For Mike of Syracuse, N.Y., it is a profitable but sad place to live and work. "I left the woman I love and my dog behind for $600 a week," said Mike, who is helping to build a new bank. "Everyone's unhappy here. The only reason we are here is for the money, and that's sad."

The sadness shows between drinks and laughs at the lounges and in frequent fights that break out in the milder night spots.

Gillette is a city of many different people and varying images. Obviously middle-aged women serve as hot panted barmaids. A band is likely to play a polka, switch to soul music, break into a country song, followed by an old favorite in any given set — diversified music for a diverse audience.

The landscape, like the town, can seem a little out of joint. The rolling range nearby is broken by a 100-foot-deep, box-cut coal mine. Massive earth-moving equipment rolls over land where cattle once roamed.

Those first impressions and images are misleading, protest coal company and city officials. They are becoming defensive toward attention being given them by the national press. A New York Times story, headlined "The Rape of the Rockies," especially has drawn their ire. Men like city planner Rick Jakobson do not let the criticism by others get them down. "The last thing we need is people saying we can't do it," he said.

Jakobson says Gillette is better off than many eastern journalists have pictured it. Its problems, he asserts, are small in comparison to those of the urban East.

"Full employment reduces our social problems appreciably," he said. "Maybe that is why we are looked down on. No one has ever been in a community with full employment."

Gillette has an agricultural town of 3,000 in 1960, spurred on oil to 7,000 in 1970 and is building daily past 10,000. One projection estimates the population of Gillette at nearly 40,000 in 1978 before dropping and leveling off at 22,000 in 1980.

By 1990, according to a U.S. Interior Dept. study, the eight-county area surrounding Gillette is expected to have 80,

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

HOME QUIZ FUN: Designed for the whole family, from age 4 up, a new game uses a minicomputer to pose questions at three age levels. And 3,200 combinations of 260 different questions and challenges, the game tests memory, claims the maker. Questions range from animals, boats and cities to buildings to sports, space, the weather and more. Cost: $10 in stores. The Ohio Art Co., Dept. PP, Bryan, Ohio 43506.

FIRE STARTER: Getting a fire going in either your fireplace or grill is said to be both easy and completely safe with a new solid starter in stick form. Made of compressed wood shavings and paraffin, the 4"-long stick contains kerosene distillates and cannot explode, flare up, or produce an unpleasant odor. High heat from a stick lasts 20 minutes and will ignite Pres-To-Logs as well as natural logs and charcoal without relighting. Pack of 5: 59¢ in stores. Dept. PP, 7320 Convoy Court, Menlo Park, Calif. 92111. (right).

EMERGENCY HEMMING: Your hemming on dresses, skirts, slacks, other garments—should go faster with a new eight, aluminum hemmer that is designed to assure 100 percent accuracy. Just insert it to desired hem width, set the easy-to-read measurement and pin. A convenient sponge on top of the hemmer holds pins so you pin the hem. $1.75 postpaid. In Products Co., Dept. PP, Box 58501, Bismarck, N. Dak. 58501. (right)

WET HUMIDIFIER: Proper humidifying the heating season can keep you comfortable with a lower, fuel-efficient thermostat setting. And a new capacity home humidifier can humidify up to 3000 sq. ft. of space. It has a wire mesh disks that rotate and pump water droplets from a reservoir, forcing them for evaporation in the air stream. The unit, which fits under a forced warm air furnace, also can be used with adapters on steam, hot water and electrical heating systems. Also available: a smaller model for $25. HEAVENLY DESSERT

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Create a sensation at your next dinner party by serving an elegant dessert—Creamy Chocolate Celeste. It'll captivate your guests with its richness and deceptively light smoothness. Enhanced by swirls of creamy marbling, it's a delightful indulgence in every respect.

With such a rich dessert you'll want to balance the menu with courses that have somewhat lower caloric content. Why not begin with hot consommé madrilène garnished with tiny packaged croutons? Follow with broiled chicken delicately seasoned with tarragon, frozen asparagus spears, frozen squash, lightly dressed with butter or margarine and a salad of mixed greens tossed with your favorite dressing.

CREAMY CHOCOLATE CELESTE

- | | |
|--|-----------------------------|
| 1 pkg. (8 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate | 2 tablespoons strong coffee |
| 1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate | Few grains salt |
| 2 tablespoons butter or margarine | 2 eggs, separated |
| | 1 tablespoon brandy |
| | 2 cups whipping cream |

in coffee, salt, egg yolks and brandy. Cool slightly. Beat egg whites stiff; fold into chocolate mixture slowly but thoroughly. Whip cream until it mounds softly but is not stiff. Fold in until a marbled effect is obtained. Spoon into dessert dishes, mounding high. Chill several hours. If desired, garnish with small swirls of additional whipped cream, shaved chocolate and a sprinkle of finely chopped walnuts. Makes eight servings.

Melt chocolate with the butter over hot, not boiling, water, stirring to blend until smooth. Remove from heat, stir

State Won't Pay Maintenance Costs for Field House—Luedtke

By Bill Kreifel

Labeling as "foolish" any attempt by University of Nebraska officials to try to get the Legislature to foot the bill for maintaining the new NU Field House, State Sen. Roland Luedtke declared flatly that "they're not going to get away with that."

The Lincoln lawmaker, whose LB87 raised state cigarette taxes by a nickel in 1971, and paved the way for construction of the field house on State Fairgrounds property, was responding to a letter from William Erskine, NU executive vice president for administration, which estimated annual maintenance costs for the facility at $745,000, and suggested that most of this amount might have to be borne by the Legislature.

Admitting that he was irritated by that report, submitted by Nebraska Administrative Services Director Stan Matzke, Sen. Luedtke said the university "is going to pay their fair share based upon their usage, or perhaps we should turn it over to some private enterprise operation" for appropriate rental.

Luedtke said that in earlier conversations with NU officials concerning future field house maintenance, the university "was told to work together in a cooperative effort with the Fair Board and outside interests" that could generate income.

Basketball Boon

The solon said the Fair Board is expected to pay its share of costs, as are outside users, and he suggested that NU could handle its portion through increased athletic income — the latter coming principally from a predicted rise in the demand for basketball tickets.

Luedtke observed that NU Athletic Director Bob Devaney — who was a strong influence in the passage of LB87 — "had figured an increased amount of money would be brought in with increased basketball ticket sales" once the field house is completed.

"But," the senator added, "you've got to give him time to make it work."

Devaney said he doesn't have any concrete answers to the maintenance money problem at this point, noting: "We're still feeling our way in this area." He said firm answers probably won't be available "until such time as we figure all of the (potential) uses" of the facility, which he predicts will be completed by late 1975.

Pershing Trouble

It's the question of those potential uses that has become a point of serious concern to Lincoln's Pershing Auditorium Manager Ike Hoig, who says completion of the NU facility "is something I've been dreading." Envisioning possible stiff competition between the auditorium and the field house for future income from entertainment, Hoig said the Harlem Globetrotters have already expressed an interest in moving their performances to the NU structure once it's finished.

Noting that NU officials "have been very cooperative in the past, and have not tried to compete with us," he observed that if the university encounters great difficulty in obtaining needed field house maintenance money, "they might get hungry, too."

Hoig said the probably transfer of UNL commencements and Student Union sponsored events from Pershing to the field house wouldn't represent a large percentage of the auditorium's total business, "although every little bit helps."

The Real Pinch

The real pinch, he explained, would be felt if promoters of attractions such as the forthcoming Johnny Cash Show were to move their performances to the NU facility in the future.

Pointing out that Pershing always has an overflow crowd for the Cash show, Hoig said some 7,000 persons will attend that performance Nov. 7. He noted the field house will be able to seat 15,000-16,000, "and they've got a built-in audience of 18,000" students.

In addition, Hoig said, with the larger seating capacity popular shows might be able to charge less per seat, making the same amount or more on the basis of volume.

Citing the fact that operating in the black has been the exception rather than the rule for Pershing over the years Hoig said the more into the red the auditorium slips, the deeper the City of Lincoln will have to dig to make up the deficit with tax dollars.

Sen. Luedtke, on the other hand, said he feels competition between Pershing and the field house could be healthy, noting that if existence of the NU facility could help lower ticket prices for popular shows, "maybe the common people would have a chance to get out and see some of these things, too."

He said once a field house manager is hired, that person could work with Hoig to bring in the kinds of events that are particularly suited to each facility, adding that "the large shows that will come to the field house are not the type that the auditorium could handle anyway."

Outside Income

Devaney noted that other universities have used coliseums or field houses to draw on large entertainment groups for outside income. He said if that were done here, he expects "it would certainly cut into other activities" such as the Pershing operation.

Concerning use of the field house by the State Fair Board, the athletic director said he didn't know what specific arrangements had been made with that group for a maintenance payment.

Helen Wadhams, the Fair Board's administrative assistant, said there is no arrangement for any such payment, noting that the board's use of the facility for one week during the State Fair "is in return for putting the building on our property." She added that the Fair Board has no present plans to use the field house beyond fair week.

Dr. Ron Wright, assistant director of business and finance UNL, said he sees no way at this point that NU athletics could support much of the maintenance of the field house, even though, he notes, it is principally an athletic facility.

Noting that athletic monies are used to support NU's Memorial Stadium almost entirely and in conjunction with other university funds to maintain the coliseum, Wright observed that "the well has about gone dry," and that budget is facing a possible deficit in 1975-76.

NU Only: $60,000

He said Erskine's $745,000 maintenance estimate for the field house was made about a month ago, and included allowances for non-university use of the facility (the Fair Board and outside groups).

Wright said the best "ballpark estimates" to date on strictly university use of the field house would place the annual maintenance figure at about $600,000.

Broken down, this would include: Utilities, $260,000; custodial, $100,000; overall maintenance, $100,000; management (including related clerical help and office costs and supplies), $50,000; grounds up-keep (including trash removal), $30,000; full-time security, $25,000; telephone service, $5,000; $10,000; supervisory costs, $5,000; amortization, $25,000.

Observing that further, refined estimates are to be completed in November, Wright said utility costs (lights, heating, air conditioning) could go up appreciably if the price of fuel oil rises. He also noted that as the building gets older, its maintenance needs can be expected to increase.

Omaha to England Coloradan Readies Long Kayak Trip

Omaha (UPI) — Scott W. Emerich of Boulder, Colo., was to start from here Sunday on a trip to Falmouth, England. It was to be no ordinary journey, however, because Emerich was to travel in a 17-foot kayak he built himself.

Emerich, 27, plans to paddle down the Missouri River to St. Louis, take the Mississippi River to New Orleans, travel along the Gulf of Mexico to Ft. Myers, Fla., cross the Everglades and continue up the East Coast to Riverside, Conn.

Emerich said his parents live in Riverside and he plans to arrive there about May 1.

"Once I get there, I will return to Colorado to visit with my two young sons," Emerich said, "then will spend about two weeks in Riverside outfitting my kayak for the ocean crossing."

Emerich said he is divorced. He expects the trip across the Atlantic to take about 100 days and he plans to begin that portion of the journey June 1.

Emerich said he will not have radio contact during the crossing because the "radios and batteries and so forth would be too much bulk" for his craft.

He will have some safety equipment aboard, including a "special sleeping bag which will float and give me protection from sharks if I should have to use it."

A five-gallon supply of water at the start of the trip across the ocean would be sufficient, Emerich said, because he will have some solar stills aboard, each capable of producing about one quart of drinking water from the sea each day.

Emerich built the kayak last summer. It has a mahogany framework covered with canvas. "It took about a month to build. It's pretty simple," he said.

Bronstein Is Free on Bond

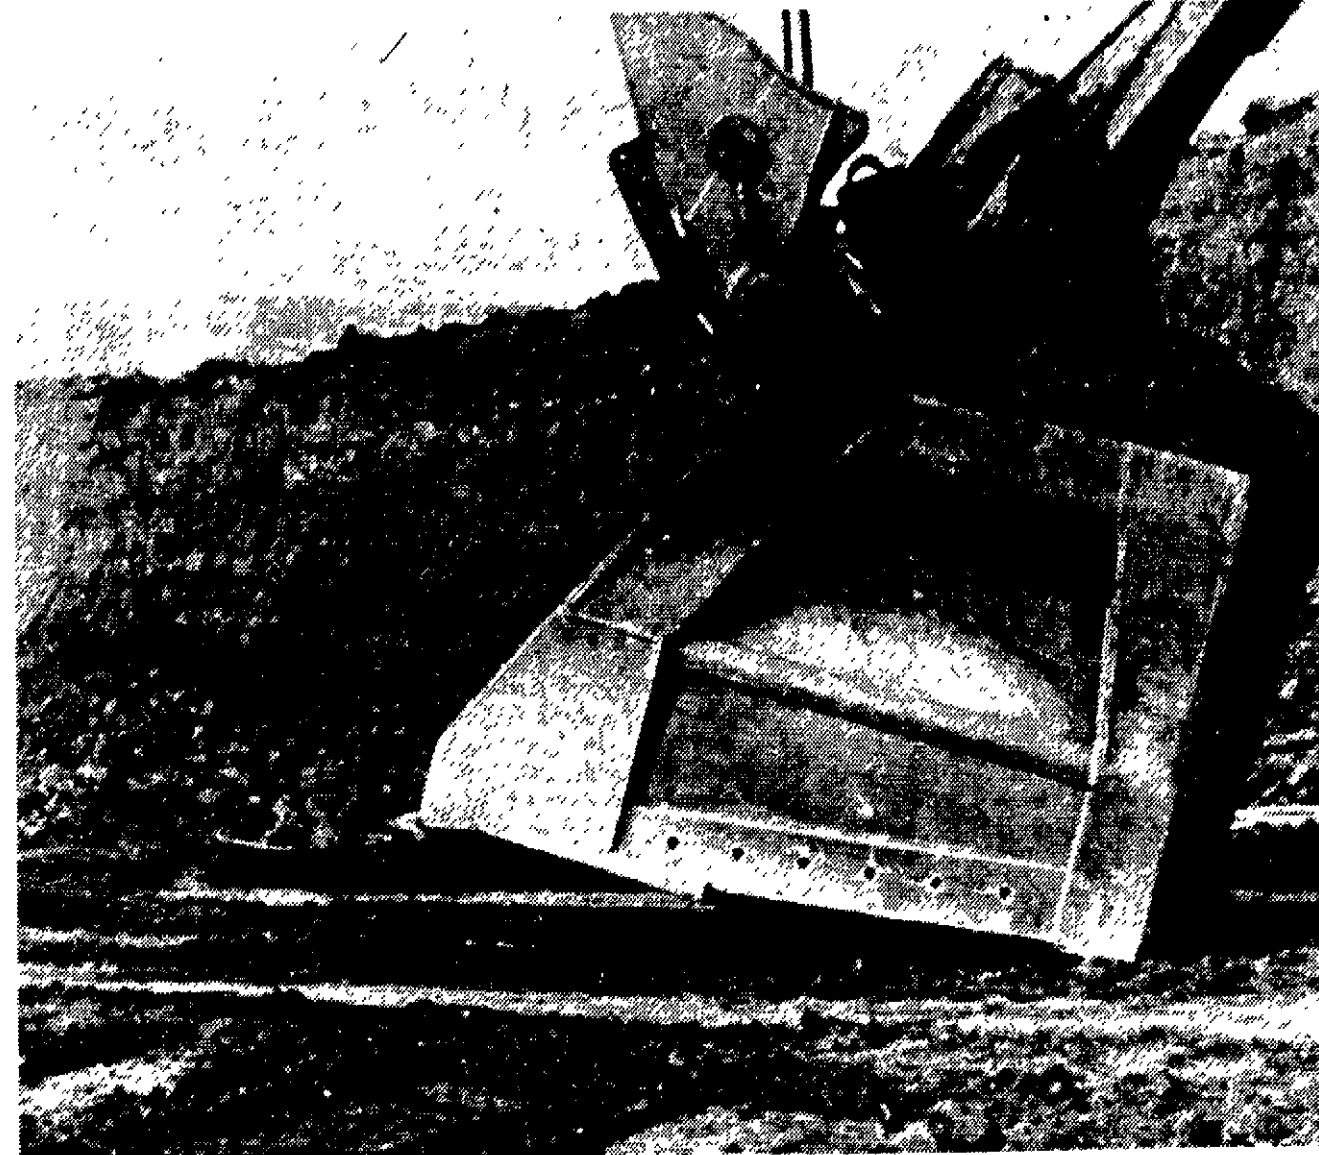

Miami (AP) — The deposed head of debt-ridden Cedars of Lebanon Hospital is free on $100,000 bond after conviction of theft, forgery and conspiracy charges involving $662,750 in missing hospital funds.

Sanford K. Bronstein, 57, was forced to resign earlier this year, a few months after a hospital wing was dedicated by then-President Richard M. Nixon.

Why is Emerich making the trip across the Atlantic via kayak?

"I grew up on the East Coast and have had an attraction for the ocean ever since I can remember," he said. "I've always wanted to do something the first time on it."

He said he may write a book about his experiences once the journey is completed.

Doctors, Homes Both in Short Supply

500 more residents than the 107,364 it had in 1970.

It is in the more stable period following the construction boom that Jackson, Baab and others anticipate a manageable town.

They say that when the nomadic construction and oil workers leave and the family coal workers arrive, Gillette will stabilize. Now, however, it is a city of too many single men with too much money looking for things to do.

Crime Explosion

Crime has exploded along with the population. In September, there were 685 complaints to the police, compared to 437 in September 1973. Asst. Police Chief R. Castleberry says the crime rate has risen at a steady rate all year, with crimes in all categories up from 1973.

Castleberry says much of the problem has been created by "single men wanting to make a quick buck and working one week and staying drunk for the next two." He says that in Gillette, "every night is Saturday night and Saturday is New Year's Eve."

There is a manpower shortage in virtually all professions, from doctors to secretaries. And a shortage of homes, too.

Trailers and mobile homes, which house 40% to 50% of the population, are stuck in every vacant lot. If the possible dip in population comes after the construction phase, Jakobson says, the town is better off with mobile homes than with vacant houses.

Baab points out that planning and zoning ordinances were ignored in the oil days. "The town shows the ravages of the oil boom," he said, "not the coal boom."

Coal is not expected to have as devastating an effect, according to Baab and Jakobson, because the coal companies are being open about their plans. The independent oil men, Baab said, were secretive and speculative.

One of the people who are especially conscious of environmental complaints is Dwight Knott, chief of farming and reclamation for AMAX Coal Co. A University of Wyoming agriculture graduate and Gillette's former vocational agriculture teacher, Knott insists land that is strip-mined can be reclaimed and in many cases made more productive.

Knott approves of what is happening to his hometown of 20 years, but there are others who don't.

Confidence Slight

The Interior Dept. is not as confident as

Knott and the coal companies that the land can be left unchanged or improved. In a recent report, the department said the mining and related growth would place intense pressures on land, air and water resources and the life-styles of existing communities.

William Barlow, rancher and member of the Powder Basin Research Council, is one of those disturbed by Gillette's transition from agriculture to coal. The social changes have been so great, he says, that many ranchers and farmers are selling out.

"I hate to see our area screwed up for a stop-gap solution to the energy crisis," said Barlow. He believes more efficient alternate energy sources will be developed to replace coal and oil.

Barlow notes that lack of planning has always troubled Gillette. "If they had planning or common sense," he said, "they wouldn't have built Gillette on the north side of a hill. Have you ever been there in the winter?"

The next two years will decide whether Gillette's boom is disaster or progress, Jakobson says. He compared the situation to building a house: "When it's half-built, the yard torn up and no landscaping, it looks horrible; but when it's finished, it looks fine."

Maintenance Organization to Be Established? $50,000 Given Health Care Unit

By Bess Jenkins

Community Health Care Assn. (CHCA), a local community-based nonprofit corporation, received official notice this weekend that it has been awarded a $50,000 federal grant to study the feasibility of establishing a Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) in Lincoln.

Don Nielsen, CHCA president, said the word came from the U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Dept. to which application was made several months ago.

To Nielsen's knowledge, CHCA is the only applicant seeking and receiving the HMO feasibility funding in Nebraska.

He understands less than 50 were awarded nationally.

An HMO would provide a comprehensive range of health care services, from doctors' office visits through extended hospitalization, to an enrolled population on a prepaid, per capita basis.

Nielsen said the board will form a search committee immediately to find a project director, a person with high qualifications in the field of health care administration.

This person, with physicians, hospitals, other health care providers, comprehensive health planning agencies and others, will carry on the feasibility study. He anticipates this will take six to nine months to complete.

"If findings are positive, plans will be made to proceed into planning, developmental and operational stages and the HMO could begin operations sometime in 1976 if everything works out," Nielsen said.

The health-oriented citizen said CHCA would "like to establish a financially sound, self-supporting HMO which is community-based and responsive to needs of the community."

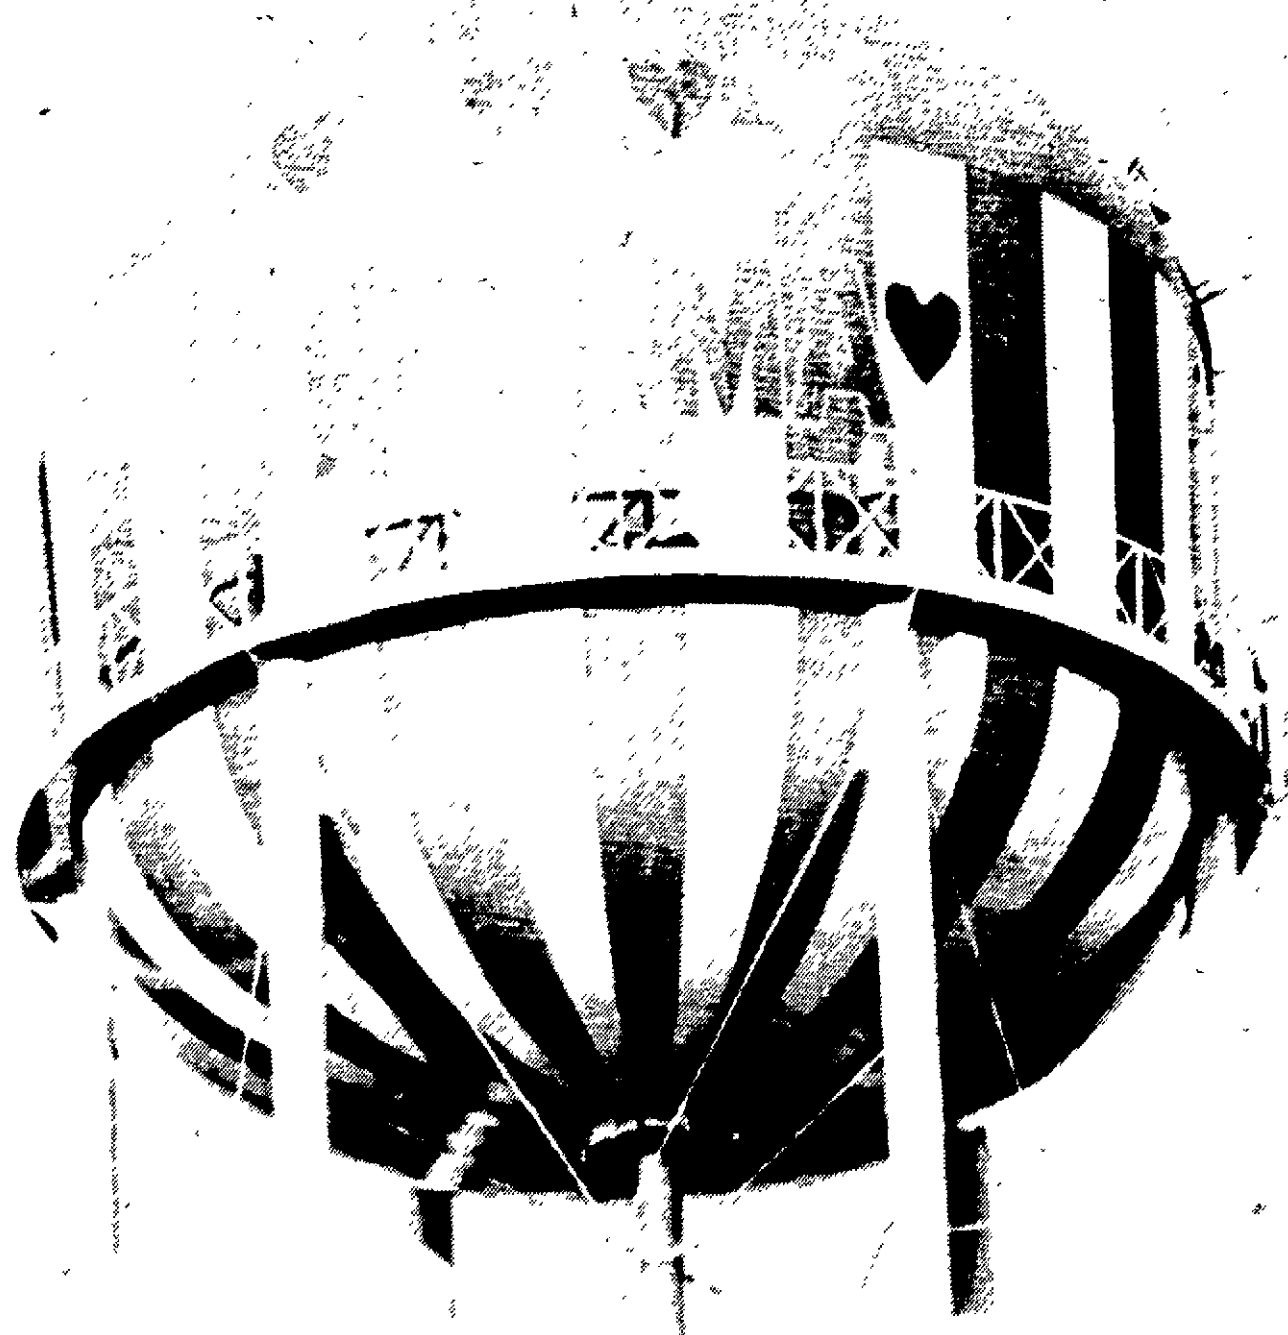

Nielsen explained that if feasibility is shown by early 1975, that CHCA would like to work with the medical community to establish a health care delivery system that emphasizes keeping people healthy — health maintenance — through such measures as preventive medicine, early detection of disease and prompt treatment.

According to Nielsen, there would be no fees collected for each service, which often create an economic barrier to prompt medical care when a family member gets sick.

Instead, the HMO would collect in advance from the subscriber (or his employer) to pay for comprehensive care. The HMO would have arrangements made with doctors, hospitals and other health care sources to provide the services.

"This concept is working well for millions of Americans in other parts of the country, providing highest quality care at less expense because of the organization," said Nielsen, adding "We'd like to see it work in Lincoln, too."

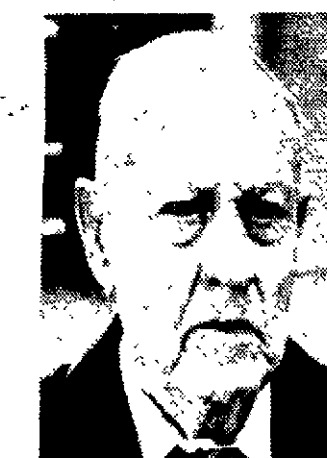

CHCA was formed last spring by a few Lincoln citizens interested in the HMO concept. Its board now includes a physician, an attorney, two homemakers and individuals from business, industry, labor and government.

Few Left in Nebraska Spanish War Vets Fading Away Fast

Rapidly dwindling the past few years, the number of Spanish-American War veterans is a small fraction of what it was even a decade ago.

On the occasion of the group's annual convention in Philadelphia a few weeks ago, it was reported that the nation had only 1,352 remaining. A mere 16 showed up for that session.

The exact number in Nebraska is unknown, but it is believed to be fewer than half a dozen. As recently as 1967, the total was said to be 73.

Interestingly, two are claimed by Saline County. Besides Frank R. Clark (see separate story), there is John Musil of Western.

A resident of Crete Manor for about six years, the 97-year-old Musil served about a year with Company E of the 2nd Nebraska Volunteer Infantry Regiment. He enlisted from Western and was a private.

His wife still lives with a son on the old family farm near Western. Four sons — Robert, Victor, Don and John Jr. — are World War II veterans.

The only Spanish-American War veteran at the Nebraska Veterans Home is Albert C. Grimes, who has been at the Norfolk annex intermittently since 1947. Now 94, he enlisted from Beatrice and later lived in Omaha.

He served nearly a year as a private in Company D of the 2nd Nebraska Volunteer Infantry Regiment.

In the Veterans Administration Hospital at Grand Island is Hugh E. Clapp, 97, a onetime resident of Steele City. He was a sergeant in Company D of the 1st Nebraska Volunteer Infantry Regiment.

Out, Out, Damned Pot

Geary, Okla. (AP) — Authorities had to use axes to cut down marijuana plants that have been growing in a field near here for at least the past 15 years.

"It took six men with axes, working pretty hard, about five hours to cut all that stuff down. Then we had to pile it up and pour diesel oil on the plants to make them burn," Canadian County Sheriff Jerry Ervin said.

It came as a surprise to Pat Mooney of El Reno when he learned those "trees" were marijuana plants. "I tried weed killer on them for a few years, but when they got so tall I decided they must be some kind of tree," he said.

Honduran Flood Was Scary For Two Nebraska Natives

Alden SOS is an orphanage just outside Choloma, Honduras, near San Pedro Sula. Run by Sister Maria Rosa, SOS is financed by the Kinderdorf of Austria, the Society of Friends of Children and the Christian Children's Fund.

Two U.S. Peace Corps volunteers, Pat and Lynn Hostetler, natives of Millford and Friend, Neb., respectively and their adopted Honduran daughter, Pia, lived and worked at the orphanage. During a night of deadly flooding in Choloma, Pat helped save scores of small children from certain drowning.

It had rained hard for two days around Choloma before the flash floods hit in the early morning hours of Thursday, Sept. 18. Pat was busy taking care of the 120 children, ranging in age from two months to 12 years, who were housed at the orphanage. At first, she regarded the rains as a normal part of the rainy season. Armed Forces Radio reported that Hurricane Fifi was off the Mosquito coast and posed no direct threat to Puerto Cortes or Choloma.

"I didn't give it too much thought when the water began to rise and come in our house to the kitchen table," Pat said. "But it must have rained really hard in the mountains because that water came flying down on Thursday."

About 2 a.m., Pat and the 10 other women who were caring for the orphan children began to move them from the outlying cottages to the main house, which is on higher ground. Pat didn't think the flooding would force them out of the main house and she was simply going to bed the children down on closet shelves to keep them dry.

By 5 o'clock, however, the water had risen considerably and the women decided to evacuate the orphanage. Through waist-deep water, the adults first carried out the babies, then returned for the older children. Crying and holding onto their brothers and sisters, the children were led to the two vehicles the orphanage drivers had left on the paved, elevated highway that goes through Choloma.

132 Passengers

Somehow, through the wind and heavy rain, 122 children and 10 adults were squeezed into the two vehicles — a pickup with a camper top and a Jeep Wagoneer. They escaped only 100 yards from where the flash flood waters were raging.

Pat went ahead in the Wagoneer with about 45 children and five adults to scout for higher ground. As they headed for San Pedro Sula, they met a bus jammed with people. They were coming from San Pedro Sula and they too were trying to find high ground.

Finally, the women found an empty two-bedroom concrete house on dry ground in Lopez Arrelane. Pat took all the children in, set them down on the only furniture in the house — one double bed and two single beds — and stayed with them while her driver, Juan, went back to direct the second car to the house.

A neighbor brought in a sack of candy for the children, and although they were wet and cold, they relaxed and played, oblivious to the many tragic deaths around them. "The flood didn't seem to bother them," Pat remembered when she was safely back at Peace Corps headquarters in Tegucigalpa.

All 122 children and their "parents" stayed at the house until late Friday afternoon, when, despite the rains that had continued the whole time, the water had receded from the orphanage buildings. The staff went back, cleaned out the main building and two of the smaller houses, connected the one stove that still worked and fixed dinner for the hungry children.

Moving Back In

Although the water had reached above the windows of the orphanage and everything was a mess, the children had a dry place to sleep that night: on plastic-covered mattresses.

The next day, the children were bused to Tegucigalpa, where they were fed and clothed.

The orphanage was converted into an emergency clinic to treat the few survivors of the flash floods in Choloma and to house the new and numerous orphans of the area.

The well-built Alden SOS is one of the few buildings left standing around Choloma. Most of the houses, either adobe, wood or cane shacks, were washed away or covered by mud up to their roofs. "Some of the adobe houses are just piles of sticks now. The water washed all the mud away," said Lynn, who was in Tegucigalpa and unable to get to isolated Choloma during the flooding.

All day in Choloma, Pat saw hundreds of people in a state of semishock, wandering up and down the highway between San Pedro and Cortes and carrying their few belongings on their backs. "People were in a real daze," Pat said. "At least the people in the concrete homes had a chance — they had something to hold onto, at least."

Furtseva Dies

Moscow (UPI) — Culture Minister Yekaterina Furtseva, 64, the highest-ranking woman in the Soviet government, died Friday of a heart attack, the Tass news agency said.

But those cane and adobe huts went right down the river."

Lynn adds: "Choloma was a nice little town. They had the one paved street, a garbage truck and a couple of city cars plus some nice stores. No more."

Four in Jail At Fremont: Holdup Told

Fremont (AP) — Three men and a young woman remained in jail in Fremont Saturday as authorities continued an investigation into a holdup and abduction at West Point.

Officials said those held were Allen Keith Decora and Jenelle Rubideant, both 18; Guillermo Santana, 26, and Lindsey Lowrey, 21.

No home towns were listed for any of the four.

Carl Petet, an employee of Rush's Drive In Liquor Store in West Point, was reported in good condition at the Dodge County Hospital after surgery on a neck wound Friday night.

After the holdup Friday afternoon, Dodge County deputies chased the fleeing car and shot out a tire two miles east of Scribner.

The State Patrol said two men fled on foot in a cornfield and Petet was left behind.

Decora and the Rubideant woman were arrested as they walked north from Scribner toward West Point. Troopers said the other two men were found hiding in a corn field several hours later.

Circumstances of the robbery and abduction still had not been disclosed Saturday.

No charges have been filed.

Student Desire, Teacher Direction — Jenkins

'Good Instruction Is Merger'

Good individualized instruction is a merger of student desire and teacher direction, and extremes on either end can be self-defeating, Lee Jenkins, Fullerton, Calif., mathematics and science coordinator, says.

Students should be able to manipulate their own environment, he said in a Hilton Hotel room ringed with tables full of cards, straws, an "environmental geometry" exercise, blocks, cubes and squares made out of plastic.

He recalled one of his fifth grade teachers who said, when he finished an exercise in a workbook ahead of the other students: "That's just too bad." There was nothing she could do, he recalled her as saying.

Giving students hands-on experience in small math or science "interest centers" is one way to really individualize instruction, said Jenkins, who criticized some commercial publishers who "jumped on the bandwagon" when individualized education began getting notice.

Some publishers "have a very, very narrow view of individualized instruction," Jenkins said.

Teachers "can't plan a year's program in advance," he said, but neither can they let students go completely on their own. "They're not adults. They don't know exactly what they want." He told of one school that gave children rewards for high scores after repeated tests. At the other extreme, he said, is the alleged "open classroom" he saw using the same materials as more rigid conventional classrooms. "The only difference was they got to lie on the floor to do it."

Propane Rollbacks Are Slated

Kansas City, Mo. — Six propane distributing companies in Kansas, Nebraska, and Missouri have agreed voluntarily to make adjustments for overcharges totaling $73,825.68, James R. Newman, Region VII administrator of the Federal Energy Administration, announced.

Newman explained the voluntary rollbacks in pricing pertained to sales overcharges made in excess of the lawful ceiling prices. He noted that one of the distributors, S & S Oil and Propane of Emporia, Kansas, has agreed to a civil penalty of $2,500 in addition to a propane rollback adjustment of $30,000.

Newman identified the firms and the amount of adjustment as follows: Welch Gas Company of Camdenton, Mo., $14,866.60; Hess, Inc. of Fairbury, Neb., $2,478.99; Standly Furniture of Bolivar, Mo., $1,293.00; Hillen Gas Co. of Springfield, Mo., $6,494.00; Ellington Skeigas Service of Van Buren, Mo., $4,523.59; and Ellington Skeigas Service of Ellington, Mo., $14,169.50.

"We can make the kids love math and learn the skills" without sacrificing either, Jenkins said.

Even the new metric system can be taught in just a few minutes, he said, if teachers have blocks, scales, meter sticks and other usable items in the room instead of just talking about the system.

He suggested students make teaching tools of their own for display. One district has a personal math book for each student, in which he writes down what he did during the day — or the teacher may suggest individual exercises. The book can then be shown to parents as an illustration of what the children are learning.

Another class merged art, reading and math by making a picture with pattern blocks in various geometric shapes, then writing a story about the picture and telling it. Another group "collected lids all summer" in various shapes and sizes, to show relationships and aid in learning to count.

Commercialism or turning constantly to the textbook doesn't need to be the answer to math instruction, Jenkins said, suggesting rigid methods with all students doing their "own thing" or the same thing at the same time just don't add up.

The session was one of several Nebraska State Education Assn. meetings on math, reading, teacher-made materials and games.

The Newest Major Advances In Hospital Care

by Donald Robinson

Thousands of people with acute heart disease, kidney trouble and other grim illnesses stand a much better chance of recovery now because of dramatic new developments in hospital care.

The American Hospital Association confirms this in a just-completed nationwide survey of new methods in hospitals all over the United States. A.H.A. President John Alexander McMahon reported:

"Some of the greatest advances in predictive diagnosis and specialized therapy have been made in American hospitals in the past five years. These advances have cut the mortality rate of the leading killers, reduced the length of the average hospital stay from 8.4 to 7.6 days, and saved hundreds of millions of dollars for the American people."

Here are nine of these important advances:

1. The New Scintigram. A team of top radiologists and heart specialists at Parkland Memorial Hospital and University of Texas Southwestern Medical School at Dallas has devised an exceptional technique for looking into a patient's heart and determining the damage done by a coronary attack. A special camera takes a picture called a scintigram, which shows in detail things no X ray or electrocardiogram could possibly disclose. It is the first sure means physicians have ever had for pinpointing the location and extent of any part of the heart destroyed by a coronary attack.

In the past, doctors have had to depend on confusing cardiograms and a long series of blood tests to tell whether a person complaining of excruciating chest pains had actually suffered a coronary attack or whether the pain was due to some other cause. Often, it would take cardiologists three to four days to make a diagnosis that a patient had had a heart attack, and even then their findings might be inconclusive. They never knew precisely where the damage had been done.

By use of new nuclear technology, the Dallas team under the leadership of Dr. Frederick J. Bonte can now arrive at a definitive diagnosis in a few hours. They inject a "smart" radioactive compound, technetium 99m-pyrophosphate, into the patient. The pyrophosphate in the compound hunts out dead muscle in the patient's heart and combines with it. Radiation from the technetium 99m outlines the destroyed area.

The scintigram has already helped more than 300 patients. "By photographing the size and location of the heart attack," Dr. Bonte says, "our team can tell, without any guesswork, if a patient needs more aggressive drug treatment or open-heart surgery."

2. Cutting Down on Anesthesia Deaths. University Hospital in Cleveland has made a giant forward stride toward reducing the terrible death toll that anesthesia takes in operating rooms.

Anesthesiologists at University Hospital and Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine have developed an unprecedented program for predicting in advance whether a patient will encounter dangerous problems during anesthesia and surgery. Before an operation, the patient is given a small amount of anesthetic and an operating room computer instantly analyzes its effects. If the patient's heart shows a drop in function, the computer spots it and warns the doctor that the anesthetic is not the right one for him. The computer suggests another anesthetic and the proper dosage.

Dr. Joachim S. Gravenstein, director of the department of anesthesiology, says, "Anesthesia may interfere with breathing, depress the heart, and slow down the flow of blood throughout the body. Eventually, these changes become known, but sometimes they have progressed to a point where they are difficult to control. With our own computer helping us, we can prevent anesthesia problems before they occur."

3. Drug Alert. A number of outstanding Illinois hospitals have instituted a joint new computer system to prevent the dangerous drug interactions that cost the lives of many patients.

Jack Vesely, a director of pharmacy services at Sherman Hospital in Elgin, Ill., described for PARADE how the system runs:

"Say a patient with a critical blood disease comes into the hospital. An anxious physician prescribes two different antibiotics for him at the same time.

Dramatic advances have cut the mortality rate in U.S. hospitals. For example, Dr. Joachim S. Gravenstein, above, of University Hospital in Cleveland, says that with new computer he can prevent anesthesia problems before they occur.

The Drug Alert computer instantly will warn of a possible interaction between them. It will even cite a reference in medical literature.

"I'll telephone the doctor. I'll tell him that each of these antibiotics is excellent when it is employed by itself. But administered together, they can cause very toxic side effects. The doctor will certainly change the prescription. Gratefully."

4. Coagulation Center. A program to stop blood clots before they can break loose and cause fatal strokes has been established by Providence Hospital in Oakland, Calif. It has set up a center that can do a profile of a person's blood to see if it is predisposed to clotting.

Dr. Mervyn A. Sahud, director of this Coagulation Center, says, "We know that many, many people are walking around right now who have no outward symptoms of it, but whose blood has a severe tendency to clot."

Women using "the pill" for contraceptive purposes get particular attention at the Coagulation Center. They receive a careful "coagulation profile" before they are started on "the pill" or when they switch to a different type of "the pill" to tell if it could cause them to develop a killing blood clot.

5. Hypertension Registry. The first

States has gone into operation at Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center in Chicago. It is keeping tabs on thousands of people with threateningly high blood pressure. It sees to it that they take their medications and makes sure that they come in for regular checkups.

All patients treated for high blood pressure at Michael Reese have their names and medical histories entered into a giant computer. (Their consent is first obtained, of course.) If one of these patients misses an appointment at the hospital or fails to get a prescription for a drug filled, the computer promptly reports it to the hospital authorities, and remedial steps are taken.

Every other major medical center in Chicago is expected to participate in the Michael Reese Hypertension Registry. In all, the registry will cover more than 100,000 hypertensives.

Dr. Fredric Coe, a distinguished kidney expert who is director of the renal division at Michael Reese Medical Center, says, "Hypertension is our number one disabling disease. It is estimated that there are 20 to 25 million hypertensives in the United States today. Less than half of these are aware of it, and only half of those are receiving any kind of treatment for it. In fact, only about 10 percent of hypertensives are currently receiving effective treatment. We're trying to give some of these people a better chance for life."

6. Ultrasound. Hospitals all over the nation are now employing sonar to diagnose cancer and other diseases. It is the same system used to detect submarines. Ultrasonic frequencies—hundreds of times higher than the human ear can distinguish—are bounced into the body, and the echo computed. They can do many worthwhile things that X rays don't do. They can tell the difference between a tumor and a cyst. They can show "internal landmarks" in the brain. They can outline a fetal head to determine the size and shape of an unborn baby.

The sonar system is even being used to check blood pressure. Many hospitals are utilizing a remarkable new machine called an Arteriosonde which bounces ultrasonic frequencies off the walls of a patient's artery. It can achieve far greater accuracy than the traditional method of listening to blood spurting into an artery. Best of all, it can be used on patients in severe shock whose fading blood pressure cannot be effectively recorded by other means.

7. Colonoscopy. A brilliant Japanese surgeon, Dr. Hiromi Shinya, at Beth Israel Medical Center in New York City, has perfected a technique named colonoscopy that allows him to insert a flexible fiber tube equipped with lights and mirrors for six feet up into a patient's body painlessly. He can check every inch of the patient's colon for tumors, polyps and inflammations, and the patient feels no discomfort while he is doing it. The colonoscope is considerably more valuable than the ordinary rigid proctoscope which only extends 10 inches into a patient.

Colonoscopy is used to remove polyps without resorting to major abdominal surgery. A patient with a polyp has often had to undergo a serious operation that has laid him up for four weeks at a cost to him of more than $3000. Now the polyp can be removed in less than 30 minutes and the patient can walk home shortly after the procedure. His total bill will be about $1000.

This writer saw Dr. Shinya remove three polyps from inside a 46-year-old man's colon in 35 minutes. He snipped them off with a small wire snare at the end of the colonoscope, a device which he invented himself. There was absolutely no bleeding, and the patient told me that he had felt nothing. In fact he took his wife to a Broadway theater that evening.

To date, Dr. Shinya has performed this procedure on more than 2000 patients without any complications.

8. A Pacemaker for the Spinal Cord. Victims of multiple sclerosis who were hopelessly crippled can now walk—some can actually drive an automobile—as a result of "neuropacemakers" connected by radio to their spinal cords at the Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dr. Albert W. Cook, head of the center's neurosurgery department, implants tiny electrodes in the spinal cords of multiple sclerosis patients and hooks them up to minuscule radio receivers under their skin. The patients carry a little battery-operated transmitter that broadcasts electric stimulants to the radio receiver. It forwards them to the electrodes inside the spinal column. Originally, Dr. Cook developed this device to ease the agonizing pain that sometimes accompanies multiple sclerosis. To his surprise, he found that it also improved the patient's speech and body movements. One woman patient's speech had been so slurred that she couldn't make herself understood over the telephone. After electrical stimulation of her spinal cord, she was able to carry on a clear conversation with her children by phone. Some patients who couldn't sign their names were able to write normally. One 22-year-old girl who could only move with a walker was able to climb stairs by herself.

9. Surgical Advance. Repairing defective organs outside the body has been a goal of surgeons for many years, and now for kidneys, at least, the dream has become reality. A 23-year-old woman recently came into the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver dying of kidney disease. Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, a famous surgeon who pioneered in kidney and liver transplants, made medical history with her. Dr. Starzl removed the woman's right kidney and kept it alive for five hours and 50 minutes inside a perfusion machine that continuously irrigated it with cold plasma while he repaired a renal artery and installed a bypass. After that he returned the kidney to the woman's body, and within two weeks all of her body functions returned to normal. Dr. Starzl has performed this kind of surgery successfully with the kidneys of 13 patients. Surgeons in San Francisco, Boston and Brooklyn, N.Y., have also done it. Mending ailing hearts in this manner may be next.

Hospitals in Boston and Florida are implanting the Cook "neuropacemakers" in their multiple sclerosis patients. "Up to now, medicine has had nothing to offer people in this tragic situation."

The "neuropacemaker" is not a cure for multiple sclerosis, but it affords a level of comfort and function that the patient could not possibly achieve without it," Dr. Cook declares. "Up to now, medicine has had nothing to offer people in this tragic situation."

According to Dr. Cook, his "neuropacemaker" benefits some multiple sclerosis patients more than others. In general, the earlier the case, the more hope there is for improvement in the patient. The implantation of the contacts, electrodes and radio receiver can all be done quickly and painlessly under local anesthesia.

Dr. Hiromi Shinya has used his invention, the colonoscope, to remove polyps successfully without resorting to major abdominal surgery.

Campaign Trail Marvel: Campaign Picking Up

Grand Island (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate State Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings believes that although his campaign got off to a slow start, it is now showing new spirit and enthusiasm.

Marvel said he expects incumbent Democratic Gov. J. J. Exon and Exon's running mate, Gerald Whelan of Hastings, to spend about twice as much as Marvel and his running mate, Anne Batchelder of Omaha.

Contributions to the Marvel-Batchelder Committee have increased substantially in recent weeks," Marvel said.

"We got off to a slow start because of apathy created by Watergate," Marvel said. "But there is evidence lately of a new spirit and enthusiasm."

Outstate Folks Cordial to Me, Says Chambers

Omaha (UPI) — Independent gubernatorial candidate Ernie Chambers said Saturday his reception in outstate Nebraska has been cordial and that prospective voters have "looked past my black face and listened to the things I'm saying."

The Omaha state senator said the main objective of his campaign has been "to make personal contact with a lot of people."

Said Chambers: "I've done a lot of speaking throughout the state, and the reception has been so cordial and warmhearted I wish I had started earlier so I could have made more stops in individual towns."

"They liked what I was saying, and I think they looked past the fact I have a black face and they listened to the things I was saying. My words struck a responsive chord in them because I'm reducing all of our problems to a common denominator."

"We're all trying to survive and find happiness and find as good a life as possible for our families."

Chambers said he learned a great deal during his campaign "and I now realize people in outstate Nebraska are willing to listen."

"I don't know if I persuaded a lot of them," Chambers said, "but they listened very well, and that's all I'm asking for."

Exon Is Scored By Barrett On JADO Case

State Republican Chairman William Barrett of Lexington said Saturday he doesn't want to hear Gov. J. J. Exon mentioning "cheap political tricks" again.

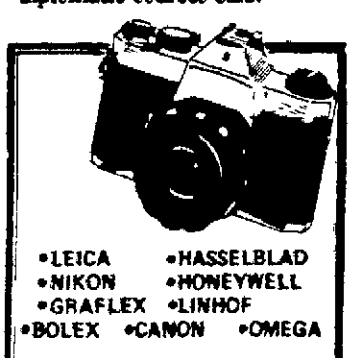

"Exon cannot stand any legitimate comment on the cronyism of his administration," Barrett said. "I don't want to hear any more about Republican tricks when the cheapest political trick Nebraska has seen in years is the JADO lease."

"I will not be surprised if his next move is to appoint Mike Jackson superintendent of buildings and grounds."

Republicans have been critical in recent weeks of JADO's leasing to the state an Omaha building owned by the corporation. Jackson, a Democratic candidate for the Douglas County Board, is part owner of JADO.

Queen's Hubbie Plans Tour

London (AP) — Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, will tour four Central American countries in March next year, diplomatic sources said.

Meeting Today

The annual fall district conferences of the north and south Nebraska districts of Sertoma International were to begin today at 9 a.m.

Members of Sertoma clubs all across the state will attend the meeting. Over 150 delegates are expected, led by Richard Brokke, of Omaha, governor of the north Nebraska district, and Charles Kroll of Lincoln, district governor for south Nebraska Sertoma clubs.

Jack Hart, Lincoln, international director for the Great Plains Region of Sertoma International, will speak. Hart, a Life member of Sertoma International and member of the Gateway Sertoma Club of Lincoln, was elected to serve a two-year term on the international board of directors in 1974, representing the Great Plains Region, including Sertoma Clubs in North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Manitoba, Canada.

The Lincoln Northeast Sertoma Club is host club for the meeting. Doug Higgins of the Lincoln Community Services organization will speak at the luncheon. Awards for 1973-74 will be presented.

Road Forcing Sun's Move

Omaha (AP) — The planned extension of Omaha's Kennedy Freeway will force Sun Newspapers, Inc., publishers of the Omaha Sun, to move to a new home, according to Stanford Lipsey, president and publisher.

The move from the current offices at 4808 So. 25th St., to the firm's new 10,000 square foot site at 4875 F St., will take place early next year, Lipsey said.

Pilots Recalled
Chicago (CDN) — United Air Lines has recalled all but 445 pilots, co-pilots and flight engineers, who were laid off a year ago because of the energy shortage.

DEPRESSION ART "FOUND" Public Offered 1937 U.S. Gov't Art Prints

Imagine, if you can, finding several thousand sets of antique prints of the world's greatest paintings that were lost for more than 35 years! It actually happened... and this is the true story of the discovery of that lost treasure.

Eleanor Roosevelt
Back in 1937, immediately following the depression years, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and a select group of a dozen nationally prominent people formed a voluntary national committee for art appreciation to create an art program that would give the public a well-needed moral lift. It was the committee's decision to select the world's most famous paintings from the 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries - the best paintings of Matisse, Van Gogh, Renoir, Picasso, Gauguin, Titian, etc., and to reproduce them in full color as perfectly as humanly possible and make them available to the public at a price within the reach of nearly everyone.

Abandoned in 1937
For some unknown reason, after a quantity of these beautiful reproductions were made, the entire project was abandoned and this collection of perfect reproductions was stored in a Brooklyn warehouse, where they remained undisturbed since 1937.

Through a series of rare coincidences, the lost collection was "rediscovered" and leading lithographers and art critics agreed that the subject matter and quality of detail and color reproduction was incredibly accurate. Over $300,000.00 was spent to make finely engraved glass printing plates. It would be impossible to reproduce prints such as these under existing methods, and for that reason these prints are literally collector's items. Once they have been sold, there will be no more available. A truly excellent art "investment" that makes a fabulous gift.

Available to Public
These authentic original 1937 prints have been appraised by the American Appraisers' Assoc. at $7.00 each print. Now, these full color 11"x14" prints are finally available to the public at $19.95 for a collection of 18 prints. Send cash, check or money order to: U.S. Surplus, Dept. P-27, P.O. Box 695, Tazana, Calif. 91356. Fully GUARANTEED. Certificate of authenticity given with each set. Mastercharge and BankAmericard OK (give card number).

my FAVORITE jokes

by dick lord

DR'S NOTE: There he was, married, living in an advertising agency and playing drums on weekends for extra money when comedy kind of tapped its way into his life. "I was playing drums one night," says Dick Lord, "and there was a waterfall behind me. There was a light and it was dripping on my head. 'Why am I doing this? I'll never be a great drummer. I want to be a comedian.' Almost at that moment the comedian, who was halfway into his act, turned around, looked at me and said, 'Look how hysterical that kid is—do you want to tell a joke?' I got up and told a joke, and they all laughed. I was stuck. I went on for about 15 minutes with less and less of an idea of what to say. But the boss offered me $50 more to learn, and I was hooked."

Dick has performed at the Tropicana Desert Inn in Las Vegas; Suttmillers in Dayton; the major resort areas; has appeared on the Douglas and Carson shows, and was a regular with Merv Griffin. He has just completed an engagement at the Westbury Music Fair, Long Island, N.Y. There are some of his stories, jokes, and comments.

She was once arrested in the public library—for speed-reading. The librarian said I was going 120 words per minute—rough nonfiction. Then she asked for my library card. I knew I was in a jam, but just to be safe I wrapped the bill around it!

Have you ever noticed that the only people resemble their passports is a hijacking?

My wife is really into sports. She said one day she came the closest ever to playing a perfect 300 game—she was out 62.

I paid my electric bill—I thought I had an offer on the house.

I have three children, but my oldest is the serious one. When he lost a coin and found money under his pillow, he thought the dentist was trying to get out of court.

I have another son, who's 11 years old and never ate. Do you have a child in your family—he just moves around on the plate to other bases. Very thin child—walks around with his arms in the air—he looks like a fork.

After owning a boat there are certain things I found out that you should know. Firstly, if you're standing on the starboard side of the boat, never spit. I learned this from the man standing in front of me.

All-night supermarkets are really fun. They're like nightclubs. The lights are low, music plays, you tip Marvin the checker and he takes you right to your aisle. I saw a couple dancing in detergent. I cut in. Then she took me to an all-night Tupperware party.

When I met my wife she was a schoolteacher. I used to write her passionate love letters—she'd send them back corrected.

I'm the only man in the whole world who returned from his honeymoon and received a report card. She said: "Dick is neat and friendly and shows a keen interest in fun and games. Unfortunately he does not work well with others, and unless there is an improvement others will move ahead of him."

When I lived in the city I was afraid that my car would get ripped off. So I got a burglar alarm system. It had a little key you placed in the fender and then you'd get in the car and start it. If you didn't put the key in the fender first and you started the car, a siren would go off. Well, my car was stolen. Some people got inside, started it, the siren went off—and all traffic pulled over. It was the fastest getaway in the history of robbery.

WHAT CAN YOU DO ABOUT YOUR MONEY SECURITY?

The past 10 years have seen a dramatic upheaval in the area of personal financial security. Living costs have hit an all-time high. Hospital, doctor and other medical costs have literally skyrocketed. According to the American Hospital Association, the national average daily cost of a stay in the hospital has now climbed to over $100 a day. In 1966, Medicare was born, and has been undergoing revisions ever since—for example, certain disabled people under 65 are now covered by Medicare. And, Social Security disability benefits for people under 65 have been increased substantially.

All these changes have been so rapid that few people have had a chance to grasp their full meaning. Yet, a basic understanding of them can be all-important to your present and future happiness and money security.

Take Social Security, for example. Few people realize the enormous benefits Social Security can now provide to eligible people of all ages. Especially in the case of younger families, benefits could add up to $100,000, $200,000 and more, and promise to go even higher in the years ahead—thanks in part to an amendment calling for automatic “cost of living” increases in benefits.

No matter what your age, with today’s soaring costs of living, and of getting sick or hurt, it’s more important than ever that you know what benefits you are or will be entitled to from Social Security. For example, if you’re under 65, this information can help you figure your present and future life insurance needs to make sure you not only have the added security you may need right now, but that you’ll also have the kind of added cash income, on top of your Social Security benefits, that you want to make your retirement years more comfortable and worry-free. That’s especially important to you in this era of record-high living costs.

In fact, the bigger benefits now available under

Social Security can now make it easier for you to get the additional retirement income you want, at a more reasonable cost than ever. For example, a new life insurance policy, the L-198, has been developed which can provide substantial retirement benefits at a premium that, on an “interest adjusted cost” basis, makes it one of the lowest-cost participating Whole Life policies in America.

For a free “Money Book” with valuable facts about your all-important Social Security retirement benefits, plus information on how you can supplement these benefits, if you need to, with “add-on” insurance protection like the L-198 from Bankers Life and Casualty Co. of Chicago—whose policies under the famous White Cross Plan trademark now protect over 7,000,000 Americans from coast to coast—simply fill out and mail the postage-free reply card below. If you have already decided not to send for the MONEY BOOK...

Dear Friend:

I’m puzzled. Frankly, I don’t understand why everyone doesn’t send for the free MONEY BOOK. It offers important information about your Social Security benefits, and tells how you can use the benefits of life insurance to supplement them for a happier and more secure life.

Perhaps you feel that Social Security is strictly for “senior citizens,” or that you can wait until you’re about to retire to think about it. But your benefits under the Social Security program are far too important to ignore, and thus perhaps run the risk of not having the kind of income you need and want at the most critical time of your life.

If you have some other reasons for not sending for the free facts, I’d appreciate it if you’d send me a letter and tell me about it.

Two 115-pound calves are guided into a holding pen from which they will be shipped to the Dubuque Packing Co. for slaughter. They were donated by the Whitewater, Wis., area farmers as part of the NFO's protest against low livestock prices.

NFO Protests Prices

Slaughtered Calves To Go to Honduras

Dubuque, Iowa (AP) — A meat packing company slaughtered 551 calves Saturday as cattlemen continued their protest over a price squeeze they claim is threatening beef producers. The 41,000 pounds of veal from the slaughter will be sent to Honduran hurricane victims.

A spokesman for the Dubuque Packing Co. said the cattle came from members of the National Farmers Organization (NFO) in Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois and Minnesota.

Earlier this month NFO beef producers slit the throat or shot 636 calves and buried them in trenches near Curtiss, Wis. They said the action was to dramatize the effects of high feed prices which cause farmers to lose money in fattening cattle for market.

Richard Wertzberger, a spokesman for the meat packing company, said workers were sent home Saturday after they slaughtered all the calves that had arrived at the plant by 10 a.m.

He said more animals, en route to Dubuque from southern Minnesota and Postville, Iowa, would be slaughtered Monday.

Jim Runde, the NFO co-ordinator of the slaughter from Cuba City, Wis., said an anticipated goal of 1,000 calves for slaughtering Saturday wasn't reached because the state NFO president, Steve Pavish, had been called to Kansas City on business, and the calf roundup in Wisconsin was not organized properly.

He said only the meat from calves killed Saturday will be trucked to Miami on Monday for shipment to Honduras. The rest will be distributed to as yet unspecified charitable organizations in this country, he said.

"We're checking on several organizations now," Runde said. "Brother John has 104 dependent children at Boys Town in the Desert at Beaumont, Calif. If it turns out he needs the meat, I imagine we'll give it to them. We're also checking groups in the Midwest," Runde said.

Runde said the NFO in Washington advised his group President Ford would visit Wisconsin beef raisers soon to discuss their economic problems.

Wertzberger said his firm did not hesitate to donate the time, labor and facilities to slaughter the calves.

"We agreed to do the processing because we believe it is morally wrong to kill and bury calves when so much of the world is going hungry."

NFO President Oren Lee Staley of Corning, Iowa, said the benefits of having the calves slaughtered and given to charity include: keeping cattle off the market in hope prices will rise,

More than 4,000 young musicians, members of 60 bands throughout Nebraska, participated in the 17th annual Nebraska High School Marching Band Festival at Pershing Auditorium Saturday.

Judges Jerry Billik of Ann Arbor, Mich., Gerald Kinney of Maurice-Orange City (Iowa) High School; and Otto Werner of Colorado State University (Ft. Collins), rated the participating bands as follows on a 1 (top) to 4 scale of excellence:

$100,000 Kiss

Portland, Ore. (UPI) — A Salem, Ore., insurance man is being sued over a kiss and its alleged aftermath.

Linda K. Pennoyer, Las Cruces, N.M., filed suit in U.S. District Court here against Raymond C. Largent, Salem, a partner in an insurance firm.

The complaint charges that on Aug. 10, 1973, Largent kissed and embraced her in his office "against her will" and when she "withdrew" from his arms she fell and hit her head. Miss Pennoyer seeks $100,000 and medical expenses.

No Oil For Some Planes?

Washington (UPI) — The Air Force may have to junk some of its older planes because oil companies say they won't make special fuels for the service anymore, according to Air Force sources.

The planes that may be discarded are older propeller driven aircraft that are used mostly for transport but not for combat purposes, the sources said.

Seminar Set

Omaha (AP) — Don Gillmor, professor of journalism at the University of Minnesota, will present a seminar on libel for newsmen at the Omaha Press Club on Friday afternoon, Dec. 6.

Gillmor is co-author of "Mass Communications Law," a book dealing with legal aspects of the mass media.

Crime Unit Okays $54,000 To Provide 6 New Deputies

By John Gleason

Despite an attempt by the County-City Implementation Commission's (CCIC) Citizens Advisory Committee to block financing, the Lancaster County sheriff's office will add six deputies to its staff.

The State Crime Commission approved a $54,000 grant to help pay salaries of the additional personnel when it overruled the recommendation of its grant review committee Friday.

Member Frank L. Koehler told the Crime Commission his committee denied the grant request because of information it received from the Citizens Advisory Committee Friday morning. The Citizens Advisory Committee requested the denial until a proposed merger of the sheriff's office and the Lincoln Police Dept. can be studied further.

However, Deputy Paul Spahn told the commission additional deputies are needed now and the sheriff's office can't wait on further study of the merger proposal. "I don't believe we can short our citizens," Spahn said as he appealed to the full Crime Commission to overturn the grant review committee's denial.

Koehler said a letter from the Citizens Advisory Committee asked that the grant be withdrawn until the committee could review the application.

Lincoln Police Chief Joe Carroll and Omaha Police Chief Richard Andersen joined the Crime Commission majority to rescind the grant review committee action and approve the grant on a 6-4 vote.

It was pointed out at the Crime Commission meeting that the grant had been processed through normal channels and been approved at all stages until the last-minute letter from the Citizens Advisory Committee.

At budget time, Lancaster County Commissioner Jan Gauger tried to block approval of matching funds for the extra deputies until the proposed merger had been studied further, but the County Board okayed the money on a 2-1 vote.

The proposal also won approval from the Region II Crime Commission and the State Crime Commission's law enforcement committee.

Some Lincoln law enforcement people have wondered why the Citizens Advisory Committee has entered areas outside its jurisdiction. The group was set up to advise the CCIC concerning CCIC task forces' final reports on how to best implement mergers of various city and county agencies and departments.

The grant approved Friday will help pay the new deputies' salaries the first year. After that, the tab goes to the Lancaster County Board.

In other business, the Crime Commission again deferred action on a legislative bill to regulate private security agencies in Nebraska. It directed member Mike Jackson of Omaha to work with the Nebraska Advisory Council on Private Security on a bill acceptable to both groups.

Mike Barmettler, chairman of the council, listed Omaha-based security firms' major objections to the legislation drawn up by the Crime Commission staff. Most are concerned with proposed fees for licensing and bonding security employees and the classification of such employees.

Barmettler said the council feels that security employee qualifications should be based on employee classifications. He said the council will draw up a classification system.

Echeverria: TV Promotes Loneliness

Acapulco, Mexico (UPI) — President Luis Echeverria Thursday condemned TV as a cause of loneliness and lack of communication between people. "Television has been an important factor in the lack of human communications and is responsible to a good measure for the loneliness of contemporary man in large cities," Echeverria told a luncheon at a World Communications Conference.

"I believe TV has helped break the interpsychic relation that is a characteristic of civilization and I think that before the shadowy screen the individual is alone, isolated and passive."

Ex-Nebraskan, Publisher Joins Hall of Fame

Brookings, S.D. — Two longtime eastern South Dakota newspaper publishers were named to the South Dakota State University (SDSU) Newspaper Hall of Fame Saturday at the SDSU Newspaper Day banquet.

Honored were the late Rachel Walradth of White, S.D., and the late Clifford Sanders of Garretson, S.D.

Elections to the South Dakota Newspaper Hall of Fame are made by majority vote of the publishers of the state.

Sanders, a native of Nemaha, Neb., graduated from South Dakota State University's College of Engineering. He worked for the Soil Conservation Service, the Army Corps of Engineers and with a Lincoln flood control program before beginning his career as a newspaperman in Garretson.

Mrs. Walradth, a native of Minnesota, was known throughout South Dakota as a pioneer newspaper woman. She spent 80 years in the weekly newspaper profession and was publisher of the White "Leader" for 44 of those years.

She was also named to Who's Who of American Women and honored as a South Dakota "Press Woman of Achievement."

Folks Proud of George Now, They Say

By Ivy Harper
NU School of Journalism

Rapid City, S.D. — A smile softens George McGovern's face. The Hot Springs, S.D., Elks Club organist had recognized him — the balding, slender candidate for reelection to the U.S. Senate — and struck up McGovern's theme, "This Land Is Your Land."

People at the bar turn in their chairs and stare, but no one moves.

McGovern approaches his fellow South Dakotans one by one and puts out his hand.

George McGovern

In 1972, Ivy Harper worked for presidential candidate George McGovern. Recently she returned to South Dakota to bring the McGovern story up to date. Her story was written as an assignment in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln School of Journalism depth reporting class.

Although McGovern asserts he has not changed his positions since 1972, there has been a change on the question of amnesty.

In 1972, McGovern favored unconditional amnesty for Vietnam draft dodgers. A month ago, McGovern said he supports President Ford's conditional amnesty.

The question of amnesty is a presidential one, McGovern says, and should not be an issue in a Senate race.

"I really haven't had to change my positions on anything," McGovern says.

"The people of South Dakota are beginning to accept a number of the positions I took in 1972."

Acceptable

"The majority now agree that the military budget should be slashed. They're ready for open government, the disclosure of campaign financing. A lot of the things that we did in '72 are now very acceptable in this state."

McGovern never mentions Watergate.

"I'm just letting the course of events make the point. There is an old Irish saying," McGovern says, "that time is a great storyteller. I've found that true in South Dakota."

"They feel bad about (Watergate) — they'd feel worse to have somebody telling them how wrong they were."

About Nixon, he says:

"My views haven't changed. I have never had a very high regard for him. It always puzzled me how Nixon got elected. I can understand younger people supporting him when they didn't know the history of his rise to power, but people who knew that story and then thought he was competent to be president..."

McGovern's voice trails off.

'Misled'

"I somehow feel the people were misled in '72 of the real character of Nixon. I don't quite know how he pulled it off. I also think they got a very distorted picture of me."

"They somehow felt that I had changed dramatically from the person they sent to Washington a few years ago. That was a kind of by-product of the Nixon propaganda. They saturated this state, as they did others, with cleverly devised television commercials, direct mail and other things, to depict me as an unstable radical, and they got away with it."

"It wasn't so much that the people were all that enthusiastic about Nixon; it's that they had frightened them about me."

"But I can see the thing turning around. The people are warming up to me once again," McGovern says.

At the Elks Club in Hot Springs, a man and his wife timidly approach McGovern. The man leans forward and confides, "I didn't vote for you last time, and I am really sorry."

10 or 12

No comment from McGovern, just a handshake and a smile.

"I average 10 or 12 people a day volunteering that kind of sentiment," McGovern says.

The Elks Club appearance ends a 14-hour day that included breakfast with Rapid City civic leaders, a second breakfast with builders, handshaking at a shopping mall, lunch with senior citizens, an address to the opening of an American Legion post in Hermosa, dinner with county Democratic candidates, a public meeting on a local water controversy and a quick visit to another American Legion post.

At Hermosa, an aide parks their car on a dirt road across from a one-time storage bin, now the American Legion hall. McGovern surveys the deserted streets, looks at the closed shops on main street and shakes his head.

As he enters the building, a woman says, "Hi, Sen. McGovern. Do you remember me? You got my son an appointment to the Air Force Academy."

"Sure I do," McGovern says. "How did he like it?"

"He never went," she says. In his address, McGovern apologizes for the absence of his wife, Eleanor, saying she was in Pierre for a children's conference. And she has been busy selling her book, "Uphill," an autobiography.

Junked Cars

The legionnaires seem more concerned with the presence of the state Legion commander than with McGovern's.

But McGovern's reception is warm. There is no mention of amnesty.

On the way out of Hermosa, McGovern asks the aide to drive past a church. The church, at the top of a hill overlooking junked cars and empty houses, has a sign in front of it that reads:

"Calvin Coolidge went to church here in 1927."

Then, heading back to Rapid City at the close of the day, McGovern stares out the window suppressing yawns. He and an aide review the day and talk about the future.

McGovern says he doesn't like to talk about the past. He has tried to put it behind him.

But it is hard because there are so many reminders. Reminders like the leftover 1972 posters taped to storefront windows. And the stream of letters he gets from 1972 supporters.

Mills: No Tax Eyed on VA Compensation

Little Rock (UPI) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the tax writing House Ways and Means Committee, said Congress had no plans to put a tax on Veterans Administration compensation.

"It has come to our attention that a veterans organization has mailed to its members a letter alleging that we are about to put a tax on VA service-connected compensation," Mills said in a prepared statement. "The kindest thing I can say about this is that it is not true."

"Benefits paid by the Veterans Administration are tax exempt," Mills said. "They have been. They are now. They will continue to be."

Mills did not identify the veterans organization making the allegation.

The voters remind him, too. Voters like the Republican rancher who said of McGovern:

"You know, I don't like a lot of his ideas. I don't always agree with him, but by God, I got to respect the guy. When I think of everything he went through in '72, the least we can do in South Dakota is send him back to Washington."

And the Rapid City woman who said, "We took a trip to California last month and when people saw our South Dakota license plates, they would honk. Everywhere we went people would say, 'That's George McGovern's state — he should have been president.' He put us on the map in '72, and we're proud of him."

With the lights of Rapid City coming into view, McGovern looks at his watch. It is 11:30 p.m. He has been meeting the people since 7:30 a.m.

And the people have been responding. Maybe not all of them, and maybe not completely, but — with the pain of 1972 behind him — this land is his land again.

Ford Salary Cut Suggested

St. Louis, Mo. (UPI) — President Ford should set an example for Congress and the nation by taking a $25,000 salary cut, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said Friday.

Symington told a news conference that such a move might inspire members of Congress to vote themselves a 10% salary cut to help curb inflation and hold down the cost of running the government.

Good Earth ALMANAC

CAMPING LANTERN BURNS on trees are a real problem in many Federal and State Parks. The burns are caused by campers hanging camping lanterns too close to the tree, often right against a tree on a short limb, or, even worse, on nails driven into the tree. These burns not only cause unsightly scars around the campsite, but the wounds allow entry of insects and disease into the tree and may result in the eventual death of the tree. The intense heat of the lantern kills the cambium layer of the tree which lies just under the bark and is the lifeline of the tree.

LANTERNS should be hung no closer than 4 to 6 inches from the tree and can easily be hung using lantern hangers purchased through camping stores. Or you can make a home-made hanger from a piece of No. 9 wire: secure it in place by a short section of light rope or wire. You can also suspend the lantern between two trees on a light rope or wire, or simply set it on a picnic table or on the ground!

Driving nails into a tree to hang clothes lines, shaving mirrors, etc. also causes a lot of damage to trees.

THE CENTER or heartwood of a tree is made up of dead or inert fibers filled with waste and resin. The heartwood provides the strength to hold up the tree.

THE OUTSIDE LAYERS of the tree -- the sapwood, cambium & phloem -- conduct water from the roots and bring food down from the leaves. With active outside layers, a hollow tree can live for years.

"At least he's brought it out in the open. He now admits that Rip Van Winkle is his patron saint."

"Why all the fuss? I did STOP, didn't I?"

BETTER HALF

by MURIEL STANLEY PARKER

"It was especially designed for do-it-yourself people."

"Forget the leaves -- I worked on the bills this morning and someone else is going to own them before they all hit the ground."

"Cut it out, funnyman, I'm only going as far as the supermarket!"

Clark Views JADO Payment

'$84,000 But Not $133,488'

By John Barrette

Sidney Sen. Robert Clark said this weekend the annual federal payment for the state's lease with JADO Investment Co. "should more realistically have been $84,000 instead of $133,488."

Clark, chairman of the Unicameral subcommittee that investigated the lease with the Omaha firm, released a copy of his panel's final report and an accompanying letter saying the $84,000 figure would have given JADO a 14% return on investment.

Gov. J. J. Exon replied that return on investment for the JADO firm or any other company or person leasing office space to the state is immaterial. The key question, Exon said, is whether square footage costs are competitive.

The JADO firm is a partnership of Mike Jackson and Richard Donnermeyer. Jackson is a friend of Exon who worked on the governor's 1970 campaign and was later appointed by Exon to the Crime Commission.

The lease was negotiated in 1971 and JADO built a three-story structure to federal specifications at 54th and Cedar Sts. in Omaha to house State Labor Dept. regional offices.

Clark said in his letter to fellow state senators that he is concerned because the lease "appears to have been negotiated in a manner which gave particular advantage to persons selected by the commissioner of labor."

Testimony before Clark's subcommittee indicates state Labor Commissioner Gerald Chizek told Jackson of the state's need of a new building and Jackson then became interested in providing it.

Exon said no political favoritism was involved and he ordered a review of the lease when he learned his friend Jackson was involved.

He said Del Maier, an employee of the State Dept. of Administrative Services (DAS), spent a day in Omaha looking for comparable property, but was unsuccessful.

Clark's $84,000 figure was based on the assumption that the full cost of the building in Omaha was $600,000. He also assumed the state would pay maintenance, taxes and other expenses.

Testimony indicated the state is liable for normal maintenance, but the JADO firm must take care of any major maintenance.

Clark recommended a special subcommittee be formed drawing membership from the Unicameral to work with the administration to draft appropriate legislation to prevent future lease questions and "to safeguard the interests of the taxpayer."

Exon said Stan Matzke, current director of DAS, earlier suggested legislative and administration cooperation to see if comparable property could be found.

Exon said the state has a 15-year lease that can be dropped any year if the Legislature refuses to appropriate federal funds.

Exon also charged again that Clark, a Republican, supports Hastings Sen. Richard Marvel for governor and that the investigation was political motivated.

Exon said the square footage cost to the state, which Jackson estimated at $6.08 was competitive in 1971 and still is today.

'Must Reduce Paralyzing Spine Injury'

Washington (UPI) — The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety said decreasing either the number or the severity of auto accidents is the key to reducing paralyzing spinal cord injuries.

The organization, in what is believed the first study of its kind, found automobile, motorcycle and other vehicle accidents caused almost 56% of the injuries that lead to paraplegia or quadriplegia.

At an average cost of $400,000 for care during the life of an accident victim, the national cost of spinal cord injury was estimated at $2 billion a year.

Blimps Help

YES,....

..I'VE HAD THE URGE MANY TIMES.

ME TOO! I WONDER WHY THAT IS?

BECAUSE IT'S THERE.

WHAT KIND OF A DUMB THING IS THAT TO SAY?

EVERYTHING IS "THERE!"

THOSE TWO ROCKS ARE "THERE!"

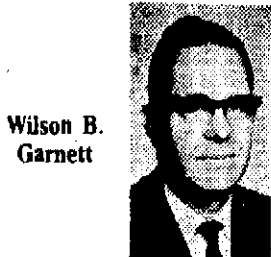

WHAT'S THAT GOT TO DO WITH MOUNTAIN CLIMBING?

...UH.... NOTHING.. REALLY....

...I HAD THIS URGE TO STICK THEM UP YOUR NOSE.

Garnett Official Of USITA

Washington, D.C. — Wilson B. Garnett, executive vice president of Central Telephone & Utilities Corp. headquartered in Lincoln, Neb., has been elected second vice president of the U.S. Independent Telephone Assn. (USITA).

Wilson B. Garnett

The association represents the interests of the nation's 1,700 independent (non-Bell System) telephone companies, which serve more than 25 million phones throughout the country. Garnett has been active in USITA for many years, serving since 1970 as a director and as chairman of the Government Communications Committee.

Garnett attended Maryville College in Tennessee before joining Central Telephone in 1942. After service in the U.S. Army during World War II, he returned to Centel as a commercial supervisor in Blackstone, Va. He held several managerial positions and was named eastern regional manager in 1966 and vice president of telephone operations in 1967. He became executive vice president in 1971.

Lincoln School of Commerce president Carl E. Privitt will assume the presidency of Nettleton Business College, Omaha, school officials have announced.

Privitt owns the Lincoln school at 1821 K St., founded in 1884 and one of the largest in the state.

Len Foster, formerly assistant to Privitt, will become LSC director.

Nebraskan Vick Given Citation By Tax Officials

Joseph M. Vick, head of the state Revenue Dept.'s property tax division, was named the International Association of Assessing Officers' "Professional of the Year" recently.

The IAAO, a group of public officials dealing with property taxation, named Vick during its annual conference in San Francisco.

Vick, a certified assessment evaluator, formerly was an appraiser with the Arizona Department of Property Valuation.

Thone To Seek Allowance Hike Resolution Kill

Rep. Charles Thone says when Congress reconvenes next month, he will seek repeal of the resolution under which the House Administration Committee has increased allowances for congressmen without submitting such increases to a vote of the membership.

Some recent press reports "have left the impression that the Congress voted itself these additional benefits for additional office space, stationery and travel. That is not the fact," said the First District congressman.

On July 21, 1971, the House passed Resolution 457, which allowed the Administration Committee to make adjustments in the allowance without further consideration or a vote by the full House.

The resolution passed 233 to 167. Thone says he voted against it.

Delay Asked

BRANDEIS

The Lincoln City Council in recent weeks has had many discussions about the status of the attorney hired by and reporting only to the Lincoln Electric System (LES) Administrative Board.

Councilman Max Denney, who raised the issue, conceded recently the real issue is not so much the legal counsel but the semi-autonomous nature of the LES board.

As Denney put it, the appointed LES board is not very receptive to the political needs and realities facing council members, who must face the voters.

Last Monday's council decision to extend by one year the date for phasing out the downtown steam heating system so the earlier LES board decision could be subjected to a fourth engineering study demonstrates what Denney was talking about.

The LES phase-out decision, which was reviewed by the board more than once, is based on a number of hard facts: environmental laws, equipment condition, fuel availability and comparative heating alternatives and costs for downtown merchants.

Those facts were summarized again for council members Monday. But the council chose not to delve into their meaning, nor the potential consequences of delaying the scheduled 1976 phase-out of the steam heating system.

Even on the key issue of environmental regulations, which more than anything else may cause problems for continued operation of the system, the council chose not to consult their own local expert.

The LES board's adherence to its phase-out decision was unquestionably hard-headed. It refused to base its decision on anything but facts and realistic alternatives.

And the LES board has stuck to that decision for nearly three years despite continued and heavy pressure from downtown merchants and others to reverse its stand.

Environmental Concern

One fact of life most everyone has become aware of is concern for the environment, particularly that proposed projects of any type do not cause unwanted or irreparable damage.

This concern has taken on concrete meaning by the fact that government agencies must prepare environmental assessments and impact statements on proposed projects.

At a recent national conference on resources planning, Hal Schroeder of Lincoln, general manager of the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District (NRD), suggested another type of environmental impact study is needed to give planners and citizens a better perspective of likely effects of certain projects.

Specifically, said Schroeder, research is needed on land and water projects that have been completed for 10, 20 or more years.

Such research should determine whether the projects have resulted in an improvement of water quality, reduced eutrophication of lakes and impoundments and the overall landscape beautification, he said.

It also should determine whether there has been an improvement and increase in wildlife habitat and recreation opportunities and a general enhancement of the environment, he said.

Such research would provide the added perspective of being able to weigh known effects of certain types of projects, rather than being limited in some cases to only educated guesses.

College Notes

Chadron Gophers — The common pocket gopher is the target of a research project being conducted by Jay Druecker, assistant professor of biology at Chadron State College. The goal is to determine how much damage gophers do to crops and grassland and whether it is economical to kill them to prevent that damage.

Peru Scholarships — The Peru Achievement Foundation of Peru State College has reported a $1,000 increase in scholarships and grants to students this fall over 1973. This year, $5,146.13 was awarded.

Midland Queen — Jacque Remmers, 20-year-old music and drama education major, was crowned queen of Midland Lutheran College homecoming festivities at a campus pep rally. Homecoming theme was "Hillbilly Hoedown."

UNO Fellow — William B. Rogers, who has more than 14 years' experience in community planning and development, has been appointed senior research fellow at the Center for Applied Urban Research at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Bellevue Prof Picked — Professor Del Stites, assistant professor and chairman of the Bellevue College philosophy department, will participate in the National Science Foundation

Behavior Of Executives to Be Discussed

Executive behavior will be explored in a Nov. 1 workshop at the Holiday Inn in Omaha sponsored by the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute, University of Nebraska Medical Center.

The relationship of executive behavior to motivation, productivity, sanctions, discipline, challenges and management of time will be discussed under the leadership of two speakers.

These are Andre L. Delbecq, professor of management in University of Wisconsin's graduate school of business and the Industrial Relations Research Institute, and Ronald Gibbins, a Ph.D. candidate in business-management and organization behavior at University of Wisconsin.

short course program for 1974-75. He will attend regional sessions on "Ethical Issues and the Life Sciences."

Scholarship Winner — Carol Sue Spurrier of North Platte, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln sophomore, has been awarded a $500 scholarship from the United Transportation System.

Concordia Royalty — Donna Sieck of Beatrice was named queen and Mark Kernosi of Libby, Mont., king of homecoming festivities at Concordia Teachers College in Seward.

Doane Duke, Duchess — Louan Moody of Norfolk reigned as duchess of the 1974 Doane College homecoming. George Ruffin of Dixon, Ill., was elected duke in a vote of the student body.

Lincoln Man Found Dead Near Capitol

Benjamin Geier, 67, of 1330 J. was found dead in his automobile, parked near the State Capitol Saturday morning, according to the Lancaster County Sheriff's office.

Deputy George Lahners said a woman noticed a man seated in his car, which was parked just south of J St. on the east side of 14th, shortly after 8 a.m. Saturday. He said the woman saw the man in the same position two hours later, and notified a state trooper at the governor's mansion about one block away.

Lahners said Mr. Geier had apparently parked his vehicle, and died of a heart attack.

AUF Aids Honduras

Members of the All University Fund presented $1,000 for disaster victims in Honduras to Lancaster County Red Cross.

The money will help the 63,000 disaster refugees being sheltered in "tent cities" by the Red Cross.

Donations to AUF are made during a fall drive at the University of Nebraska, and are designated for organizations voted upon by the students. Blaine Camp, second vice president, said one fourth of the money collected is put into a special fund for emergencies. The gift to Red Cross for Honduras was made from this emergency fund.

It was a happy birthday for Nancy Osborne (right), wife of Husker head coach Tom, as she and Mrs. Bill Myles watched Big Red defeat Oklahoma State, 7-3.

Husker Win—Cake's Candles For Nancy Osborne's Birthday

You might say Saturday was Nancy Osborne's day in more ways than one.

First, she had a birthday and second, perhaps even more important, her husband Tom and his Cornhusker team put on a fourth quarter show which defeated Oklahoma State, 7-3.

"We need to win this one," Nancy said at halftime when both teams were scoreless.

After the game Nancy said, "This is my very, very best birthday ever. I just stood there for a few minutes after the game and let it all sink in."

Asked if she had asked Tom to win this one for her, Nancy replied, "I only said you know how you can make this day." Mrs. Osborne recalled only too well last week when the Kansas Jayhawks wanted to give the game to coach Don Fambrough for his 52nd birthday. Not that she's superstitious or anything. KU lost 56-0.

During the halftime ceremonies, the Nebraska card section sent her birthday greeting and Mrs. Mike Corgan, wife of Husker offensive backfield coach, sitting a row behind, said "Today's Mike's birthday, too."

Nancy's birthday celebration got off to an early start. The Osbornes and friends went out for dinner Thursday night and then went to see "The Longest Yard."

And Friday night Tom and children Mike, Ann and Suzi sang to her and gave her a present.

Saturday night Tom and Nancy went to the Californians for Nebraska dinner and then spent time with their families. Nancy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stan Tederman of Holdrege, and Tom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Osborne, of Hastings, were on hand for the celebration, along with Tom's brother Jack and his family, also of Hastings.

Saturday was a day when Nancy could have her cake and eat it, too. The victory had to be the third birthday cake.

"I baked one for myself and then Mom brought me one," she said.

Statehouse Perspective

By John Barrette

Nebraska's evolution into a new era of politics is obscured somewhat by what on the surface appears a lackluster Nov. 5 election.

The new era pits the two major parties against each other in an increasing confrontation due to both new strengths and new weaknesses.

Democrats have Watergate, Gov. J. J. Exon's political skill, and the trend in Nebraska — as well as the nation — toward a more urbanized citizenry in the 1970s.

Republicans have a Watergate rebound effect, raging inflation and a new brand of conservatism that stems from disaffection with government by programs atop programs.

And yet both parties face the problem of scrapping for the ever-increasing independent voters who take their political philosophy from candidates rather than parties.

Shifting Alignments

Some of these factors are national and some peculiar to Nebraska. In an emerging state with an agriculture-based economy but a growing urban (town as well as city) trend, these factors mean shifting political alignments and unpredictable results.

To the casual observer, some ho-hum features of the current election make the political iceberg's tip seem rather unimportant. Below the calm of Nebraska's political waters, however, are signs of change that make the iceberg take on significant dimensions.

A sampling:

—Democratic registration moved to within 25,000 of the Republican majority in recent figures and the number of Independents continued growing.

—Ernest Chambers, an Omaha black and a state senator, is taken seriously as an articulate spokesman in his petition candidacy for governor even though Exon seems unshakable.

—A woman is running for Congress in Nebraska's Third District and most observers rate the race a tossup. If Mrs. Haven Smith goes to Washington, it might shock some Easterners who think only cowboys live in Western Nebraska.

—One candidate for attorney general is spending $50,000, an unheard of amount in that race, and the other is a former governor. This shows the growing significance of that office.

—The Democratic nominee for Congress in the Lincoln-dominated First District is running a campaign showing obvious organizational wizardry and bankrolled at $100,000 plus. Lose or win, this is big-time politics.

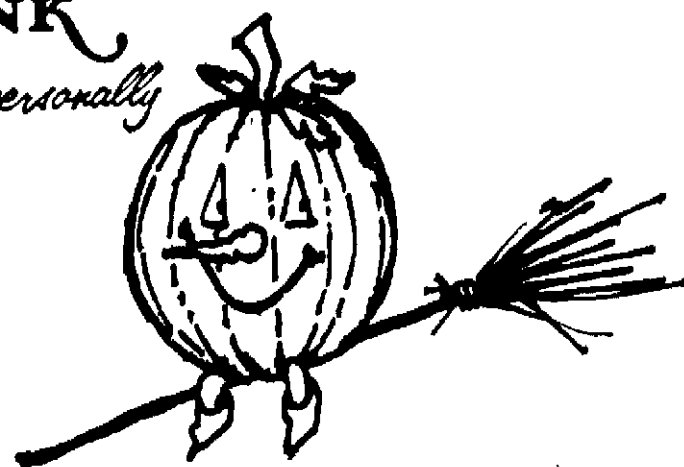

—Referendum Measure No. 300, the so-called state aid issue, has pollsters saying voters may approve a $100 million increase in state support to public schools. Even if repealed, it is doubtful the law will be rejected by a landslide vote.

—Republicans running for the statehouse offices below the gubernatorial level show signs of being the leaders in their races, indicating that despite Watergate the GOP base of support still exists for strong candidates in Nebraska.

—Democrats have been talking of a possible sweep of the three congressional races. While they are probably kidding themselves, such talk at any point since the days of Roosevelt would have evoked hoots of laughter.

Politics may be the No. 2 spectator sport in Nebraska, taking a back seat to "Big Red" football, but the next decade is bound to bring some fascinating contests off the gridiron as well as on.

Business Votes Nebraska's Senators Score High

Washington (UPI) — The National Chamber of Commerce gave 18 senators — 17 Democrats and one Republican — a zero rating Saturday, concluding they sided against business interests in 10 key votes.

Two of the Democrats were Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson and majority leader Mike Mansfield of Montana. The only Republican among the 18 was Clifford P. Case of New Jersey.

Sixty-three House members also received zero ratings from the Chamber for their votes on the 10 bills.

Twelve senators voted for Chamber positions, the survey said.

Hilton Davis, who produced the report, said the Chamber "did not seek to categorize legislators as pro or anti-business on the basis of only 10 votes, since actually hundreds of votes are cast in each session."

He concluded, however, the survey "shows a substantial bloc of congressmen and senators with what appears to be a pretty unfavorable attitude toward business. They come from both parties."

The Senate votes used in the survey included the oil price rollback provisions of the Emergency Energy Act, which the Chamber opposed; an attempt to limit food stamp distribution to strikers, which the Chamber favored; and a Chamber-approved strategy which killed the proposed Consumer Protection Act.

In the House, the Chamber favored reducing mass transit aid, approved an unsuccessful attempt to weaken the strip mining bill, and opposed the House version of the Consumer Protection Act.

Joining Jackson and Mansfield on the list of senators voting against the chamber on all 10 issues were Haskell of Colorado, Ribicoff of Connecticut, Biden of Delaware, Illinois' Stevenson, Iowa's Hughes, Muskie and Hathaway of Maine, Kennedy of Massachusetts and Michigan's Hart.

Also Humphrey of Minnesota, Williams of New Jersey, Pastore and Pell of Rhode Island, Frank E. Moss of Utah and Wisconsin's Gaylord Nelson.

Eleven Republicans and New York conservative-independent James Buckley had unblemished records voting for Chamber positions, although some did not vote in all 10 roll calls.

The Republicans getting high Chamber scores were Fannin of Arizona, Dominick of Colorado, Gurney of Florida, McClure of Idaho, Hruska and Curtis of Nebraska, Cotton of New Hampshire, Bellmon and Bartlett of Oklahoma, Thurmond of South Carolina and Brock of Tennessee.

Gerontologists To Hear Talk By J. A. Gaida

Papers representing outstanding work in biology, medicine, the psychological and social sciences, and social research, planning and practice will be presented at the meeting.

Gaida will speak on "A State Unit on Aging View of Area Planning."

Apel: Don't Let Italy Fall To Pieces

Bonn, Germany (AP) — West Germany's finance minister says the United States and Japan should join in a concerted effort to guarantee that Italy does not "fall to pieces" under the impact of quadrupled oil prices and its other economic woes.

"The United States and Japan and the Western world should see that there is an Italian problem and that they have to guarantee via the International Monetary Fund that Italy remains intact and will not fall to pieces," Hans Apel said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Health Board Questions Antabuse Use

Are some judges "practicing medicine without a license" by prescribing antabuse as an alternative to jail for Nebraskans charged with drunk driving? Is it valid for judges to order either the drug or go jail without knowing the offenders' tolerance to antabuse? Not every person arrested and charged with drunk driving is an alcoholic and arbitrarily needs to take antabuse.

These and other points about the drunk driving program and the underlying problem of alcoholism prompted some State Health Board action Saturday on the issue.

The board instructed its director Dr. Henry Smith to have alcoholism experts at its next meeting to explore the reported difficulties more.

"Alcoholism probably is the biggest health problem in the state," said board member Dr. Frank Colon of Friend.

Board members agreed they need to know more about the various state programs and services and the extent of "dangerous" antabuse practices.

Colon and Dr. Clarence Davis of Osceola, the other medical board member, said they feel the antabuse medication ordered by judges is a minimal practice in Nebraska.

But they said some judges ordering its prescription by physicians to violators apparently do not realize it can be toxic to some persons.

"I told one judge about a patient who cannot tolerate antabuse and took another person off it who was taking it faithfully every day as ordered by the judge but regularly getting as sick as a dog, too," said Colon.

The discussion was initiated by Smith's report on a survey of the department's mandatory education program for first time drug abuse offenders.

Smith said statistics showed the in-jail program effective, though the State Drug Commission director, Jeff Kushner, apparently thought otherwise in his report last week.

Also, reports that the University of Nebraska Medical Center may lose some of its Family Physician (FP) residents because of lack of staff were shared with State Health Board members Saturday.

The reports prompted the board's unanimous vote to urge NU Board of Regents to support and implement a NU Rural Health Care Task Force's recommendations even though reminded regents already have accepted this report.

However, health board members felt further emphasis on the recommendations, particularly three major ones, was necessary in view of reports given at the meeting.

The three recommend the Medical Center establish a clearing house for jobs for physicians and for communities who need doctors, state aid to medical students willing to commit themselves to rural practices and an expansion of the FP residency program.

The third actually is a part of a bigger proposal for more state funding for all house (residency) officer programs. This is justified on the basis doctors remain in the state in which they receive graduate experiences.

Health board members were informed about reports that the NU Medical Center FP program could lose some of its residents because of reduced staff.

Colon said he has been told there is more than an additional dozen residents this year but no increased faculty to provide the proper training.

Homing Vulture

Nashville, Tenn. (AP) — Greep, a vulture who apparently knows when he's on to a good thing, has taken up permanent residence at Nashville's Children's Museum.

"He's sort of a homing vulture," said Miss Ann Winquist, a museum employee who has become Greep's patroness.

Greep came to the museum in May as a chick after some boys found him and were unable to locate his nest.

"We take in animals and birds like this sometimes when people bring them to us, and keep them until they're big enough to fend for themselves," said Miss Winquist.

"Greep is big enough now, so we freed him, but he won't go away."

Greep acquired his name because he flaps his wings and cries "Gre-e-p!" when excited.

He is a black vulture, sometimes called a buzzard, and his natural fare is carrion.

Since the museum isn't ordinarily stocked with dead animals, Greep has thrived on a diet of chicken wings provided by museum employees.

Dr. Margaret Faith, a FP department faculty member, is acting chairman since Dr. Francis Land resigned to join former NU Dean Robert Kugel on the University of New Mexico medical campus this fall.

This is one of the key positions NU Medical Chancellor Robert Sparks recently told the Lincoln Health Forum should be filled soon.

Legislative proposals which the board said should be drafted for official consideration include one abolishing the basic science board as other states are doing.

This would eliminate basic science examinations for medical students since most of the material involved now is included in the Flex and National Board examinations future doctors must pass for licensure.

Three other proposals would permit increase of licensing fees for cosmetologists, veterinarians and physical therapists.

New members of examining boards approved include Bill Adams, North Platte, to the Funeral Home Directors board; Dr. J. R. Callahan, York, chiropractic; Dr. Ralph Ebers, Lincoln, Veterinarians, and E. M. Swanda, Cozard, Pharmacists.

Davis said Bob Leslie of Grand Island, the veterinarian board's first recommendation, was not appointed because of geographic and small animal representation. Leslie's appointment would have left east Nebraska without representation. Dr. Ebers was second on the board's list.

Health board members approved their State Advisory Council on Hospital and Medical Facilities' recommendation that the new Box Butte County Hospital project in Alliance be allocated another $250,000 in federal Hill-Burton funds.

Inflationary construction costs and bids above the earlier-estimated cost dictate the special need, the board was informed.

U.S., Cambodia OK Food Pact

Phnom Penh, Cambodia (AP) — U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean and Acting Foreign Minister Hou Hong signed an agreement Friday giving Cambodia $42 million worth of rice, wheat and cotton yarn.

The agreement increases the total American economic assistance to Cambodia to nearly $160 million for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

The agreement provides for 100,000 tons of rice, 10,000 tons of wheat and 2,000 tons of yarn.

LES Proposal Rejected by NPPD Board More Legal Action Seen in Power Tiff

The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) board's recent rejection of a proposal from the Lincoln Electric System (LES) leaves existing problems unresolved and raises the possibility of further legal action concerning disputes between the two parties, according to an LES spokesman.

NPPD directors last week turned down an LES proposal that LES become an independent utility rather than remain a customer of NPPD. However, the board resolved to determine whether a new contract could be developed to aid LES in becoming independent from NPPD eventually.

The resolution adopted at the meeting says NPPD will seek an agreement with LES to "assure the continuance of an adequate supply of electric power for the citizens of Lincoln . . . until LES has determined its future source of power supply."

LES Administrator Walter Canney said there may yet be legal action against NPPD "if that's the only way to obtain (desired) rates." A trial on the issue of alleged wholesale power rate overcharges to LES by NPPD is scheduled for Jan. 6-17, 1975 in Lancaster County District Court.

"Discussion of LES' becoming an independent utility is a complete strawman set forth by NPPD," Canney said. "We're not trying to become separate as such, as has been suggested by NPPD. All we're trying to do is implement the contracts as written.

"We're concerned about continued (NPPD) attempts to turn back or set aside (existing) contracts. We're not asking for anything not contracted for in 1965. If anybody's trying to change, it's NPPD."

In Sarpy County

Campaign Signs Are Torn Down

Papillion (AP) — The campaign signs for the office of Sarpy County sheriff are being torn down almost as fast as they are erected.

Incumbent Republican Patrick J. Thomas said about 70% of his campaign signs have been torn up or stolen.

Democrat John W. Earnest said about 65% of his signs are missing.

Between them, the candidates had placed about 4,500 signs. Thomas said that on Thursday all of his signs on the main street of Papillion, Earnest's home town, were gone.

The same day Earnest reported a batch of signs missing in Bellevue, the home town of Sheriff Thomas.

Thomas, 34, was appointed sheriff in September of last year when former Sheriff Richard Whitted was ousted. Earnest, 45, had been a deputy under Whitted for several years.

Boys Town Phases Out Crisis Center

Boys Town (AP) — Boys Town has phased out its seven-month old Crisis and Re-entry Center.

The center was established to house and counsel youngsters who couldn't be controlled at the home or who got into trouble with the law.

The Rev. Robert Hupp, Boys Town director, said "We felt the center didn't prove as satisfactory as we thought it would.

"The original concept was that no boy would spend much time there . . . then go back into original cottages or leave Boys Town," Father Hupp said. "Some spent much more time there with no promising results."

He said staff members will counsel boys in their cottages.

Food Meet Presents Problems for Senators

Washington — Democrats Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Dick Clark of Iowa and Republican Pete Domenici of New Mexico are three perplexed U.S. senators in search of a role for themselves and their government at the upcoming United Nations World Food Conference.

They reason they should be able to make a sizable contribution but only if the White House stops treating the congressional delegation to the Rome forum like so many unwanted stepchildren.

They're also disturbed over the failure of the Ford administration to develop a cohesive world food position, arguing that the U.S. must assume the conference's leadership in any concerted action to deal with growing global scarcities.

They contend continued delay and indecision will only compound the problems, especially for the American farmer who constitutes the backbone of U.S. food policy.

"We need to face up to the need for a long-range development effort which addresses basic problems such as food production," Humphrey remarked in commenting on the Nov. 5-16 parley which is expected to attract representatives of 140 nations.

But, the Minnesotan asserts, "the United States has little in the way of hopes or plans" for the conclave.

What's more, "there has been little interest on the part of the administration in receiving ideas from private or congressional sources" in preparing for the conference, he insists. "In fact, the message has been given to the congressional delegates that they are to be observers rather than active participants."

"In light of the lack of a food policy on the part of this administration and its paucity of ideas," Humphrey says, "one would expect that help from any direction would be welcomed."

Grain Stockpiles Key

(Humphrey unknowingly put his finger on the reason the congressional delegation's role is being downplayed this year in contrast to other years, one U.S. Department of Agriculture source indicated. A major topic in Rome will be the question of domestic and international grain stockpiles: Humphrey, Clark and others favor them; Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, who will head the American contingent, is adamantly opposed.)

Iowan Clark also is unclear as to what role members of Congress will play, expressing concern that the delegation "has not been asked to participate more directly in the formulation of policy positions" for the conference.

Domenici of New Mexico charges, "I do not believe they are going to seek from congressional leaders and others in America inputs into what is the American position, why it is the American position, and what should we seek from other countries by way of equal commitments . . . with reference to the food crisis."

All three suggest the U.S. position must be based on the interdependence of all 140 nations, warning that those acting on their own without regard to others will only intensify the problems and make more difficult the search for solutions.

Mindful of the international ripple impact (including disruption of American markets) two recent Soviet grain purchases had, the senators underscore that neither the U.S. nor any other country can any longer ignore the repercussions of their actions or inactions.

But despite the recent drought, fertilizer shortages, the energy crisis and other complex farm-oriented problems, the U.S. "as yet (does) not seem to have a clear-cut policy, or a clear-cut set of policies, relating to what we will advance as the American position," Humphrey contends.

Ambassador Edwin Martin, the American coordinator, concedes as much, acknowledging that the U.S. does not have a fixed position because it prefers instead to be able to negotiate freely at the conference.

But the senators feel this is a cop-out, emphasizing that the U.S. must demonstrate it is a major force if it doesn't want its interests undermined.

Clark, like Humphrey a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, warns "the current world food situation makes this conference crucial and the United States is expected to — and should — make a major contribution to it. The administration should realize this and get down to business."

He underlines that "it's become increasingly clear that these policies can no longer be developed in isolation from the policies of other nations, as they have tended to be in the past."

"The world food-supply situation is a serious international concern, and every nation is going to have to recognize this and account for it in its policy development if anything approaching a stable world community is going to be developed and maintained."

Clarks Going Out of Business

Lincoln Liberty Life To Be Using More Space

Space occupied by Clarks Clothing, 11th & O Sts., since 1941 will soon become more office or work space for Lincoln Liberty Life Insurance Co.

Jerry Wakefield, vice president of Lincoln Liberty said Clarks Clothing would be the last tenant to move out of the six-floor Lincoln Liberty Life Building, 113 No. 11th St.

Wakefield said architects were being consulted to draw plans for revamping of the street level floor. Construction will begin as soon as the retail store vacates the property, he said.

Morris Sweet, president of Clarks Clothing Co. Inc., said no definite date has been set, but he expects to be cleared out within the next six weeks. Clarks Clothing which is going out of business, has a 48-year history in Lincoln.

Robbins Is Polishing Those Crown Jewels

By Gene Kelly

"Remember going to King's for a cheese Frenchee after the Friday night game? Every booth was packed. Waitresses rushed everywhere carrying trays of onion rings and brownie sundaes. You were too excited to eat before the game, but after a tromping victory, you were starved. And King's was the place to go."

If you REALLY do remember, then you're the ideal target for this ad message in a campaign that gets under way next week in the 17 states where King's Food Host USA restaurants are located. The campaign offers a special challenge against the background of Food Host's recently-revealed financial trauma.

Mike Collins, account executive for Bozell and Jacobs agency, said the campaign is geared to rebuild customer traffic in the outlets and increase sales volume. Its special tools will be coupons and nostalgia.

The theme of "Come Back to King's" will show up in next week's Sunday Journal and Star in the comic section.

Bicknell Robbins, who became King's president in July, said the campaign will "play with nostalgia... try to reestablish allegiances, with customers who've wandered away."

"Come back home, we want to tell them... come on back to the good times. Remember when you brought your girl here in that '65 Ford?"

"Come on over now with your kids, do what you used to do. Create some new traditions."

"We're on our way back."

A prime goal is to attract the family, Robbins says. "King's has always been family-oriented, but maybe it wasn't promoted enough the past few years."

When a chain grows to the point where it loses closeness, "perhaps you lose the family image," he mused.

Coupons will be used because they're "probably the quickest way to generate traffic," Collins said. "Then it's up to King's to maintain it, through quality service and food."

King's management, in filing a petition last week to reorganize under Chapter XI provisions of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, seeks permission to straighten out its financial affairs. Food Host will continue to operate all facets of its business.

No Illusions

Robbins says he has no illusions about the task ahead of King's. "The road to recovery will be a long and rough one," he concludes. Sales volume has continued to drop in the chain's fiscal 1975 operations.

But every employee has been urged to answer inquiries from the public with the phrase "we're on our way back."

Although fast-food franchisors like McDonald's Corp. and Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp. are currently successful, they've had their financial problems too, Robbins said.

Under Chapter XI, King's can operate "like a brand new company," Robbins says, while a plan is worked out to pay its 5,000 unsecured creditors (those without liens on property).

According to its petition, King's owes such creditors in at least 20 states some $4.98 million.

A Chapter XI proceeding is viewed in a positive way, in legal circles, because the firm or person voluntarily pays all or nearly all of its debts.

A business that successfully pursues such a court-approved plan is not considered a bankrupt, but rather a "debtor in possession."

The firm has a chance to salvage the healthy framework of its operations while cutting out the cancerous (unprofitable) parts.

But there is no liquidation. The firm has court protection while strengths and weaknesses are weighed.

While it is technically a bankruptcy under federal law, it is not the kind of action that should send chills along the sensitive backbone of creditors.

Robbins says firmly that reorganizing is "absolutely the most positive action that could be taken. In the long run, everyone will benefit, including the creditors."

'Candid' Approach

Except for a few instances, he noted "our creditors appreciate a candid, honest, positive approach... we want them to know why Food Host has had some serious problems."

What steps will Robbins take to halt losses and improve cash flow?

Robbins is, above all, very positive.

On It's Way Back?

Big Food Host Losses Hinted At Court Action

In capsule form, here are some recent actions and figures that indicate the scope of the financial problems of King's Food Host:

• A Chapter XI petition of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, seeking permission to consolidate its debts, was filed by King's on Oct. 15 in U.S. District Court in Lincoln.

The petition said the corporation is unable to pay its debts as they fall due. Assets were listed as $9,831,800, with debts of $9,597,900.

• A federal tax lien (unpaid withholding and related taxes) totaling $29,609 was filed against Food Host Oct. 16 with the Lancaster County Register of Deeds.

• Early this autumn, Food Host renegotiated a $3 million loan it has with 10 banks involving restaurant equipment. Second mortgages on Lincoln property owned by Food Host were listed as additional security for the 1972 loan, technically in default (certain ratios of net worth and working capital had not been maintained).

The National Bank of Commerce of Lincoln was the lead bank in the restructuring, in mortgages filed with the Lancaster County Register of Deeds.

• In its fiscal report for the year ended April 30, King's detailed a loss of $1,985,744.

The year before it lost almost as much — $1,948,987. During the past four years, it has reported losses of nearly $5 million, with 1972 showing a profit of $29,484. The 1971 loss was $997,325.

• Food Host sales volume declined from $21.9 million in 1973 to $21 million for fiscal 1974. During fiscal 1972 it reached $23.1 million.

• During 1974, Food Host operated 84 restaurants, of which 32 were listed as profitable; 42 more were franchised. This contrasts with fiscal 1973, when company restaurants totaled 83, with 47 making a profit.

By this autumn there were 79 company-owned outlets and 32 franchises, with the profitable nucleus still located in Nebraska.

What Went Wrong in King Circle?

What went wrong at King's Food Host?

During 1969, Food Host offered nearly a half million shares of stock to the public at $14 a share, to expand the chain. By March 1972 it was selling for about $4, and now brings only 50¢ to 75¢ a share.

This rapid expansion — the opening of more than 100 outlets during 1969 and '70 — has been cited by several management teams as perhaps the main source of problems.

Ultimately franchisees of 35 units backed out of their commitments, leaving Food Host to take over the stores.

For fiscal 1971, King's reported a $997,000 loss, of which much was attributed to the sale (at a loss) of 17 unprofitable outlets.

Although the first Lincoln restaurant labeled King's was opened by Larry Price and Jim King at 1340 No. Corner in 1955, Price ran his first hamburger stand at the 1934 State Fair.

The Bethany King's innovated with a telephone ordering system, the first of several Larry Price firsts.

Larry Price

During the American Graffiti decade the chain grew and grew —

But in March 1972 Price and his wife, Esther, sold 50.2% of King's common stock (775,000 shares) to a group of Lincoln investors for $2.8 million. Food Host was to be the base of a Midwest "multicorporation conglomerate," stockholders were told. It then had 100 company and 36 franchised outlets.

Price has said that too many changes were eventually made in the menu and operations. "They changed everything but the name... the basics, like customer service, were sometimes neglected."

Cigarette machines were installed after Price, then board chairman, sold control (he felt they would tempt youths to smoke illegally).

'The Way We Were'

And when he returned to the chain briefly last January as an unpaid consultant, the new hamburger with soy meal added was removed from the menu.

Little things? Not to Price.

Price used the phrase "as we return to the way we were" on his new All-American menus: they spoke of "a blend of modern methods and old-fashioned qualities... the original recipes."

And, of course, "the world's best hamburger."

But neither phrases on a menu — even those of Larry Price — nor transition to a blue, white and red color scheme, seemed to shove King's into the basic black beloved by bookkeepers.

Price dropped out of the consultant role in March, apparently disillusioned.

"Perhaps too many of his ideas could never be recaptured. Things are never as they once were," observes Bicknell Robbins, the new King's president.

Larry Price is still trying to view the Chapter XI filing by King's Food Host as a "good, positive step." It's rough, he admits, to be "part in any way of a loser... but it shouldn't be a loser now."

Much of the Food Host loss the past two years "has been a paper loss," Robbins says, "caused by an Internal Revenue Service change in accounting methods."

The change requires King's to project lease liabilities on closed units and establish a reserve for unit closing.

During fiscal 1974 Food Host increased this reserve from $2.1 million to $2.95 million. The annual report notes 22 outlets have either been closed or subleased at a loss.

Price is still said to be the largest King's stockholder, with almost 10% of the shares.

Inflation Hits at Essentials

Inflation is hitting hardest at the essentials of life. And it's doing the most damage to those who can least afford it.

You nod. You've thought this for some time. Now a study by the savings and loan industry adds figures to the fire.

William A. Fitzgerald of Commercial Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Omaha says the study reinforces his belief that most families "just can't live with double-digit inflation... but since we must all painfully balance our family budget, Congress must be pressured to do the same. Their overspending of our tax dollars is a big factor in inflation."

Fitzgerald is on the anti-inflation committee of the Savings and Loan Foundation that came up with the study, in cooperation with the United States League of Savings Associations.

"Families that are not cutting back are actually borrowing against the future," Fitzgerald says. "It's going to take lots of discipline, but the American consumer has to shop the bargains more, find substitutes for highly-inflated items, and try to maintain his savings account."

One of the most demoralizing things about inflation, the study shows, is that prices of goods and services that people need the most tend to go up the most.

This study focused on the Consumer Price Index.

A major conclusion was that many items that have gone up the least in price are things the consumer could do without if he had to.

1967, base year for the index and roughly the start of current inflation, there were 268 items in the index for last July which had gone up in price and only seven which went down.

The 10 items which increased the most in price included six foods, two housing expenses and two hospital charges, all items associated with the essentials of life.

Topping the list were four food staples very important to people on limited budgets. The quantity which jumped the most in price since 1967 are dried beans, up an astounding 318.1%; potatoes, up 178%; sugar, up 166.2%; and rice, up 144%.

Nebraska Crops Potatoes, dried beans and sugar are grown extensively in the Nebraska Panhandle.

Rounding out the fastest-rising 10 were home heating oil, up

117.1%; grapes, up 117.6%; fresh or frozen fish, up 116.4%; semi-private hospital rooms, up 102.6%; the cost of resingling a roof, up 100.3%; and hospital operating room charges, up 99.5%.

Which items best resisted inflation?

While some important drugs are on the slowest-rising list, most of the items could not be classified as essential.

The seven items which actually declined in price since 1967 are anti-infective prescription drugs, down 31.1%; super 8 movie cameras, down 8.1%; nylon hosiery and panty hose, down 7.8%; hormones, down 5.1%; portable tape recorders, down 4.6%; multiple vitamin concentrates, down 2.4%; and portable console and television sets, down 1.4%.

Rounding out the bottom ten were television picture tube replacements, up 1.6%; portable and table model radios, up 2.1%; and bank service charges on checking accounts, up 3.1%.

Better Buy In Butter

There's good news and bad news about the price of butter.

The good news is that since 1967, butter's price has been the slowest-rising of any in the Consumer Price Index: up a modest 9%.

But many people use margarine as a butter substitute, and over the same span margarine's price has nearly doubled. It jumped 94.4%, a rate of increase exceeded only by eight other food items.

Stocks Decline Is Substantial

NEW YORK (UPI) — A darkening economic outlook sent investors back to the sidelines on the New York Stock Exchange last week, and gave the market another substantial decline.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 18.69 to 636.19. The widely followed average of 30 selected blue-chip stocks lost 33.63 points after climbing 14.94 Monday in a session marked by short covering.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, a broader indicator than the Dow, plunged 2.16 to 70.12. The NYSE common stock index lost 1.01 to 37.07.

The loss was a broad one. Declines far outnumbered advances, 1,207 to 563, among the 1,996 issues traded. Only 20 issues made new highs, while 92 registered new lows for the year.

Volume lightened on the decline. Turnover totaled 75,178,480 shares, compared with 82,887,875 the week before and 80,738,252 during the same week a year ago.

On Tuesday, the Commerce Department reported durable goods orders fell 6.4 per cent in September, the sharpest drop in six-and-one-half years.

The same day, the Labor Department reported the Consumer Price Index rose 1.2 per cent in September, or 12.1 per cent higher than a year ago.

The week before, the government reported the Gross National Product declined in the third quarter by 2.9 per cent and inflation rose to 11.5 per cent on an annual basis. It marked the third consecutive quarterly decline.

Many define a recession as two consecutive quarterly declines in the GNP, but the government insisted the nation was not in a recession. The Ford administration said it was "stagflation" and the economy was "waffling" sideways.

However, Paul McCracken, an unofficial presidential adviser and former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said this week it was time to call "a spade a spade." He said the nation was in a recession which would become sharp and last through mid-1975.

There was other news—some encouraging and some discouraging. It left investors perplexed.

They may be even more cautious after analyzing the plight of the automobile industry which reported sales down a larger-than-expected 28 per cent in mid-October.

Heifer top was 40.00 with this on some high choice kinds, other choice and prime heifers at 38.75-39.25 but some 1,200 lb offerings went at 36.00, choice heifers mostly 38.50-39.75, mixed good and choice 37.00-38.25.

The average price of steers last week in Omaha figures 38.85 compared to 39.11 the previous week and 41.46 a year ago. Average weight last week was 1,126 against 1,102 and 1,103.

Cows drifted 1.00-2.50 lower with some better kinds taking the most decline. Utility and commercial cows 18.00-20.50 with a few to 21.00, canners and cutters 15.00-18. Bulls were steady to 1.00 higher at 24.00-27 with a few on up to 29.00.

Butcher top last week 41.75, paid early as the bulk sold at 36.50-41.50. Sows moved the opposite direction and closed steady to 1.50 higher with the best on sows at 37.00 ticket and the bulk at 34.25-36.75.

Fed steers and heifers were mostly 50-75c higher last week although that would probably be only 25c higher than the improved close the previous week.

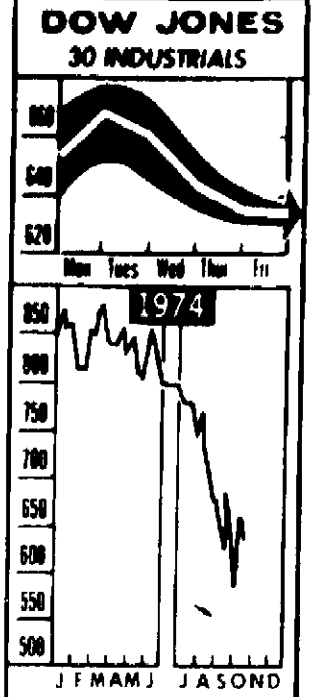

Steer top was 41.25 with this paid late. A long string of close up sales at 40.25-41, a number of loads of 1,320-1,376 choice and prime steers drew 39.00 and a load of top quality kinds of 1,527 went at 35.00. Choice steers anywhere from 38.50-41 and a couple of loads on Canadian account at 41.50. Mixed good and choice 38.50-39.75 and there were Holsteins last week at 36.50-37.

Omaha (UPI) — The Omaha Livestock Foundation's weekly summary referred to the fat cattle trade in Omaha last week as "a pretty touchy affair."

Omaha (UPI) — The trading of feeder cattle and calves over the nation last week produced a market trend that showed considerable unevenness, while ruling on the strong side of steady for yearling cattle, and unevenly lower on calves.

Seven river markets complex — Choice and prime 330-800 lb steers 33.00-35.00. Choice City to 36.25 on 400 lbs and Omaha to 36.50 on 500-600 lb steers. Choice 300-350 lb steer calves 28.00-33.00. Choice 700-900 lb steers generally 30.00-33.00 with St. Louis to 34.00 and Sioux City to 34.50. Choice and prime 350-580 lb heifers usual 26.00-30.00 with St. Joseph down to 25.50 and Omaha up to 31.75. Choice heavy 700-900 lb heifers 27.00-28.00 with Omaha to 29.10.

News of an interest rate fall failed to shore up the stock market and the Dow Jones industrial average closed Friday at 636.19, down 18.69 from the previous Friday.

Roxanna Wollen, an inspector at the new $2 million Jantzen Inc. warehouse north of Lincoln, has been involved in the hanging for reshipment of a half million ladies sportswear items.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, a broader indicator than the Dow, plunged 2.16 to 70.12. The NYSE common stock index lost 1.01 to 37.07.

Wheat Prices Higher

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat was substantially higher. Corn, oats and soybeans were substantially lower last week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was up 9 1/2 to 15 1/2c, corn off 10 to 17 1/2c, oats off 10 1/2 to 12 1/2c, and soybeans off 5 1/2 to 6 1/2c.

Builders Say $1,000 T-Notes to Strip S&Ls

Lewis Cener, president of the National Association of Home Builders, has sharply criticized the Treasury Department's announcement that it will return to a $1,000 minimum denomination in its new offering of $1 billion in notes.

"This is bound to cause a renewed outflow of funds from thrift institutions at the very time that their funds are so desperately needed to provide the mortgage money to house American families," Cener said.

Lutheran Credit Union to Expand

The Nebraska Lutheran Credit Union received a boost recently when Lutheran Brotherhood Insurance Co. of Minneapolis presented it a $3,000 check to extend services to other Nebraska Lutherans.

The union has 500 members, $140,000 in assets and almost $100,000 in loans — mostly at Immanuel Medical Center, Lutheran Medical Center and among other Omaha Lutherans.

Wheat advances were based on strong export influence and confidence the government will not interfere in foreign sales so long as exporters remain within prescribed guidelines.

Corn traded cautiously from the beginning of the week with some harvesting pressure taking its toll, and the stocks-in-all positions report showing more of this grain than had been anticipated by most observers, giving this market a final nudge downward.

Only spotty speculative buying during Friday's session prevented initial losses, sources said.

Soybean prices dove to limit declines on the final two days with harvesting pressure and end product weakness as main considerations.

Wheat was up 9 1/2 to 15 1/2c, corn off 10 to 17 1/2c, oats off 10 1/2 to 12 1/2c, and soybeans off 5 1/2 to 6 1/2c.

Douglas: Vogler Probe Being Wound Up Gilbert Death Case Closed

Investigations into the deaths of Marcia Gilbert, 17, of Guide Rock and Jeffrey R. Vogler, 19, of Lincoln have been officially closed.

Webster County Atty. Jerry McDole said the case was closed Saturday, noting that while circumstantial evidence indicated that Mr. Vogler "may have had personal knowledge of the circumstances surrounding Miss Gilbert's death," no "concrete physical evidence" was obtained linking Mr. Vogler "or anyone else" to the direct cause of that death.

In Lincoln, Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas said Saturday that the Vogler death investigation also was being closed, with the ruling that the young man committed suicide.

Douglas said he talked with McDole by telephone Saturday morning, and that both prosecutors agreed in the dual decisions and announcements.

McDole said he was satisfied that the investigation into the Sept. 15 death of Miss Gilbert, who was found in a county road ditch some eight miles southeast of Red Cloud, was thorough.

That investigation was conducted by the Webster County sheriff's office and the Nebraska State Patrol.

McDole said the investigation showed that Miss Gilbert died where she was found.

Her body was discovered by a farmer on Sept. 20, while Mr. Vogler, a Guide Rock native, died of a gunshot wound in the head on Sept. 19.

His body was discovered by his wife in the couple's Lincoln home at 3210 Starr.

McDole said it was the opinion of all officials involved in the case that nothing further could be learned or gained by continuing the investigation.

The attorney noted that a coroner's jury ruled that the girl died of a massive skull fracture, although the manner in which she received the injury never was determined, and "no criminal charges will be filed."

Candidate Would Live in Hotel

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — Robert H. Simpson, 94, California's self-proclaimed "Muckraker-in-Chief," says he's running for governor as a write-in candidate.

It's not because he wants the job, or expects to win it, but because "I'm dedicated to clean government and I won't give up if it exhausts my last ounce of strength." His statement declared that Californians have been "gulled and swindled" by both Democrats and Republicans. He's a dedicated nonpartisan and independent.

Simpson said, "I want nothing. No pay. I don't need the damn mansion. I'll live in a hotel."

Whew! The Cowboys came this close! Oklahoma State was within a half yard of a touchdown late in the game Saturday, but the Nebraska defensive unit came up with the big play necessary to preserve a 7-3 advantage. OSU quarterback Charlie Weatherbie (15) begins to sweep the Huskers' left side (1) from the Nebraska five-yard line. As he approaches the goal line, Weatherbie is smacked by Wonder Monds (26) and the ball, although still in Weatherbie's grasp, dangles in tempting view. As John Lee (69) also arrives on the scene, Tom Ruud (45) sticks a shoulder (3) right into the spot where the ball was being held. The pigskin is now loose (4) and it's the extended right arm of Ardel Johnson (29) that's about to haul it in for the Black Shirts. The key play comes to an end when the official signals a Nebraska recovery (5).

Monte Kiffin knew all along his Black Shirt defense could stop Oklahoma State at the goal line.

During a mid-week practice session, the Scout Squad, running Cowboy plays, tested Kiffin's specially designed goal line defense.

Oct. 27, 1974 Lincoln, Neb. 1D

When the Black Shirts held, Kiffin leaped with excitement. "I hope they get down here," he hollered, "because if they do, that's exactly what they'll try and that's exactly the way we'll stop them."

In the closing moments Saturday, Kiffin saw his theory put to the test. And the Black Shirts responded.

Sparked by two superlative defensive plays by senior cornerback Ardel Johnson in the last three and a half minutes, Nebraska turned back stubborn Oklahoma State, 7-3, in Memorial Stadium.

It was his recovery of a fumble by Cowboy quarterback Charlie Weatherbie a yard away from the Husker goal line with 3:22 remaining that kept OSU from scoring an almost certain touchdown.

And it was his quick hands that flicked the ball away from would-be pass receiver Ricky Taylor at the seven-yard line with 1:22 remaining. Had Taylor caught the ball it could have been disaster.

Johnson also blocked a field goal attempt in the first quarter and with 7:28 remaining in the game nearly had an interception that would have made his fumble recovery unnecessary.

Johnson, thus, was the hero of an outstanding defensive effort by the Huskers on an afternoon when super defense was needed against a very fine Oklahoma State team.

The Cowboys went into the game ranked the eleventh best team in the nation in rushing offense and started out like they meant to prove it by gaining 104 yards on two drives in the first quarter.

The Black Shirt defense, however, made some adjustments and the game settled into a classic defensive struggle. Nebraska was second and Oklahoma State third nationally in total defense going into the game.

The Huskers were able to put together only one sustained drive all afternoon as 76,476 fans watched in unseasonably warm fall weather.

That drive went 79 yards in 11 plays with fullback Tony Davis carrying the last three times for the game's only touchdown. It came 6:16 into the third quarter.

Oklahoma State scored on a 32-yard field goal by Abby Daigle with 12:01 left in the game for its only points.

The victory pushed the Huskers to 5-2 on the season and set up next Saturday's battle against Colorado in Boulder as a key one in their hopes for both a Big Eight Conference championship and a post-season bowl bid.

"We felt it was important for us to win a close one," said Coach Tom Osborne, who had called the game "dead even."

"We're in good shape now to really make a run at the Big Eight championship. We've got a real shot at it."

Athletic director Bob Devaney, in the dressing room to congratulate Osborne and the squad, called it a great victory.

"In the Big Eight it's a question of whether you win, not by how much," he said. "The bowl scouts are just as impressed when you beat a good team 7-3 as they are when you win by a big score."

Scouts from the Liberty, Cotton, Sugar and Sun Bowls watched the game and had to be impressed.

"It was a defensive masterpiece, especially since we had not faced a wishbone team this season," Osborne said.

Defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin credited Oklahoma State with good execution on offense and admitted that statistical-wise the Huskers didn't do so well, but he added, "Statistics don't win games. We learned a lot about the wishbone and we have a lot of young kids who hadn't seen it before today."

Following the first two OSU drives, the Huskers made some minor adjustments on defense and limited the Cowboys to 100 yards on the ground in the final three quarters.

"We can play just as well against the wishbone as we can against the veer-T or any other offense," Kiffin said.

In addition to Johnson's key plays, all other Huskers had fine defensive performances. Especially tough were linebacker Tom Ruud, who was credited with 18 tackles, middle guard John Lee, who had 11, and end Bob Martin, who got 10.

The play that ended OSU's final scoring threat came with 55 seconds left when Jimmy Burrow intercepted a Weatherbie pass at the 15 and ran it out to the 33.

The Cowboys made poor use of their timeouts in the second half and it stymied them in their closing scoring bids. They used up their last one two plays before Daigle's 32-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter.

Daigle's first field goal try came with 58 seconds left in the first quarter when Johnson blocked the 42-yard effort.

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — Iowa State Coach Earle Bruce said it was a "great, great effort" by his defensive unit that produced a 22-6 football victory over Kansas Saturday.

Iowa State gave up only 72 yards rushing and 119 passing, including KU's one scoring thrust of 82 yards on a pass.

In the Kansas dressing room, Coach Don Fambrough could only shake his head. "It's so hard to understand how through five games you can move the ball all over the field — then nothing," he said.

Through five games, Kansas was one of the nation's leaders in total offense and averaged over 400 yards a game. Only the long scoring play kept the Jayhawks from being shut out for the second week in a row.

Bruce gave special plaudits to defensive back Barry Hill, who set an Iowa State record with four pass interceptions in one game.

"The interceptions were the key," Bruce said.

He also praised the efforts of one of the Big Eight's premier running backs, Mike Strachan, who had 86 yards on 29 carries. "I don't know how many yards he got," Bruce said, "but it was enough."

He said kicker Tom Goedjen's three field goals and the Iowa State punting were "pretty good."

"Our attitude is getting better," Bruce said. "We're getting tougher and tougher. We're beginning to believe."

The Iowa State coach said the victory was an important one for his football program but ranked behind the Cyclone victory last season over Missouri.

Fambrough said the second-quarter injury quarterback Scott McMichael suffered was "the big thing" in the Kansas loss.

Although McMichael reentered the game in the fourth quarter, Fambrough said the sophomore quarterback could not grip the ball. "He may have a broken hand," the Kansas coach said.

Kansas also was without its senior fullback, Robert Miller. "That left us with two freshmen in the backfield," Fambrough said.

Iowa State didn't pull anything unexpected on Kansas, Fambrough said, "but they did it well."

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Tony Galbreath was very modest to say the least.

Galbreath, the Missouri tailback, made three touchdowns in the Tigers' 30-24 Big Eight Conference football victory over Colorado Saturday and summed up his performance by saying:

"I got good blocking up front. It was a whole team effort."

However, Galbreath's 36-yard run in the fourth quarter for the winning touchdown was very much Tony Galbreath's effort. He broke tackles galore and when it appeared he was trapped at the three, he jerked loose and fell across the goal.

Galbreath was the game's best runner, running 23 times for 146 yards. He also had touchdown runs of four and 14 yards.

Missouri Coach Al Onofrio was lavish in his praise of Galbreath.

"Galbreath had a great day," Onofrio said. "Galbreath is the kind of runner you need against the kind of teams we play. I can't remember a better run than the one he had on that 36-yard touchdown run."

Onofrio said he was "proud of our offense," which gained 331 yards and of sophomore Steve Pisarkiewicz, who until two games ago was a reserve quarterback.

"We had too many mechanical errors," Onofrio said, undoubtedly recalling that the Tigers had two intercepted passes and four lost fumbles, two of which helped the Buff to a 10-0 lead before Missouri ran a single play from scrimmage.

"I'm proud that the team was able to play above the errors and come back," Onofrio continued. "It's tough when you play Colorado. They have a good running and passing attack."

Bill Mallory, the Colorado coach, was dejected over the game in which the Buffs had led three times.

"We were on top but we couldn't keep 'em down," Mallory said. "They kept coming back."

"I would compare Missouri to Iowa State because, after Oklahoma, they're all pretty close."

Gambling is a subject about which almost everybody has an opinion.

The reason for discussing it today is that voters in New Jersey on election day Nov. 5 will be asked whether to permit state-operated casino gambling at Atlantic City, which until now has been most noted for its Miss America Pageant.

If it is approved, New Jersey would join Nevada as the only states with legalized casino gambling. That's such games as blackjack, dice, roulette, poker, slot machines, off-track horse race betting, and, naturally, football, baseball, basketball, hockey, and other sports.

Already 13 states run lotteries, more than 30 states allow parimutuel betting at race tracks, and three permit off-track betting on horse races.

Yet, at the same time, all states but Nevada make it illegal to place a bet with a friendly bookmaker, have a slot machine to help pay club expenses or even have a bingo game at your church.

I imagine quite a few Nebraska football fans place a wager now and then if they think the pointspread is right. That's not legal, but it is legal to go to the Fairgrounds and bet on the horses when they're running.

The state collects money for horse betting, but doesn't get a penny from your bookmaker unless he's caught and arrested and fined.

NFL Getting Into Politics

Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League will campaign against the casino issue in New Jersey Sunday when a taped statement is aired during broadcasts of the Giants, Jets and Eagles games.

He'll say "pressure will build fast to place sports betting right next to roulette wheels, crap games and slot-machines" if casinos are approved.

He's joining baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn and National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell in the fight against casinos.

"We never want to see the day when a whole new generation of fans existed which would sit in a stadium and boo a winning home team just because the fans were losing their bets," he says in the statement.

Maybe Rozelle ought to find out what's happening already by attending a few of his league's games. I think I've heard a boo or two already. I don't know if it's poor play or the pointspread, but there are quite a few teams that haven't been doing very well against the spread.

"We have stood together against legalizing sports betting for many reasons, not only because of the bad economic, social and law enforcement implications, but because we think it would dramatically and adversely change the character of sports teams," Rozelle said in the tape.

Wall Street Journal Comments

The Wall Street Journal, which covers the biggest American gambling scene of them all — the stock market, commented editorially early this week on the question of gambling.

"Legislators increasingly view gambling as a relatively painless way to raise revenue without directly raising taxes," the paper said.

"But money alone does not explain why so many states, by going into the gambling business for themselves, have overcome past objections to gambling as an illegal and undesirable activity. Much of it has to do with the growing feeling that since people will gamble whether or not it is illegal, the state should derive educational and other funds from gambling proceeds much as they derive revenues from taxes on alcohol and tobacco.

"Others claim that legalizing gambling removes it from underworld control and removes a prime source of police and political corruption. Often they dispose of the moral arguments by pointing to games of chance sponsored by religious organizations."

The Journal points out that state-operated gambling costs a lot of money to promote and that the revenues aren't all that great and that lotteries have had very limited impact on illegal gambling.

The paper says it would be well to reexamine closely the whole idea of removing penalties on gambling, "which is after all essentially a victimless crime."

It adds, it is an abrupt change of thinking from saying states should not penalize gambling to saying they should promote it, even to the point of operating casinos.

The paper asks: "Is there really no danger in governments raising false hopes of instant wealth and happiness? Are misleading advertising, exaggeration and appeals to impulse buying deplorable in the private sector but defensible when employed in the service of the state? Is the way to remove the criminal element from gambling for states to go into competition with the criminals?"

Third-ranked Lincoln Northeast resorted to some razzle-dazzle on the last play of the first half Saturday night at Seacrest Field to register a 19-14 Trans-Northeast Conference win over Grand Island before 2,231 fans.

A double reverse pass, which produced a 37-yard touchdown strike from split end Jack Swanda to halfback Steve Elikor with six seconds left in the first half, proved to be the winning difference in the Rocket's seventh win of the season against a single loss.

On the play, Northeast quarterback Bruce Kuhn handed off to Elikor, who in turn handed off to Swanda coming around from his end position.

The left-handed Swanda, a 160-pound senior and standout long jumper in track, then drilled a perfect pass back to Elikor, who outraced two Grand Island defenders into the end zone.

Steve Elikor TD Reception

The effort gave Northeast a 19-7 halftime lead. A 22-yard pass from Grand Island Mike Hansen to halfback Al Lubeck with 46 seconds remaining in the game accounted for the only scoring in the second half after the game was out of reach for the Islanders.

Grand Island, however, had battled the Rockets to a 7-7 deadlock until Elikor shook loose for a 17-yard touchdown scamper with 2:03 remaining in the second quarter.

That effort capped a 56-yard, 10 play Northeast scoring drive highlighted by a 9-yard keeper by Kuhn and a 9-yard Kuhn to Larry Larsen pass.

After falling behind, Grand Island tried to get on the board again in the waning moments of the first half. But Northeast's Doug Votava intercepted a Hansen pass on his own 44 and ran it back 19 yards to the Islander 37-yard line with 17 seconds remaining.

Northeast coach Bob Els then called the Couch reverse pass, catching an otherwise solid Grand Island defense by surprise for the decisive points.

Votava, a senior split end, shared Northeast heroics with Elikor. In addition to intercepting the pass to set up the Rocket's third touchdown, he caught a 46-yard touchdown pass from Kuhn with 5:52 remaining in the first quarter.

Jack Swanda Throws TD Pass

The touchdown came on Northeast's second offensive possession of the game. On the play, Kuhn faked deftly into the line and found Votava wide open on the right sidelines where he hauled in the pitch and rambled the remaining 20 yards for the score.

Grand Island bounced back with 6:44 remaining in the second quarter on Hansen's 1-yard quarterback sneak. Teammate

Steve Schweiger had intercepted a Kuhn pass on the Northeast 27 and ran it back 14 yards to the Rocket 13 to set up the touchdown five plays earlier.

The Rocket defense, led by linebacker Steve Singleton, shut the Islanders down the rest of the way except for Hansen's touchdown pass to Lubeck after the issue had been decided.

Northeast was driving for its fourth touchdown in the last three minutes of the fourth quarter when halfback Dan Cass fumbled on the Islander's 24 yard line. A four yard run, followed by a 50-yard pass from Hansen to Lubeck, set up the final touchdown.

Both teams finished with 11 first downs. Northeast out-yarded Grand Island 277 to 217. Northeast travels to Ralston next Friday for an Eastern 1-80 Conference contest. The loss dropped Grand Island's record to 3-5 and was its fourth straight setback.

Hastings — Nebraska Wesleyan held Hastings College quarterback Rod Schultz, sixth-ranked nationally in small college passing, to only 99 yards and the Broncos established an unstopable ground game to blank the Plainsmen, 19-0, here Saturday night.

Behind the 146 yard performance of running back Jim Doty, the Broncos jumped to a 19-0 first-half lead and made it stand up for the final count.

While Doty was running rampant through the Wesleyan defense, his own defense was holding NWU to a minus 7 yards rushing in 33 carries.

The Plainsmen were able to account for only three first downs the entire game. And after a first series first down, Wesleyan went for 51 minutes and 55 seconds before they could get another.

Hastings coach Wendell Maupin took pride in the defensive showing against the frustrated Plainsmen. "Our defense really played exceptional," Maupin said following the game. "It's by far the best they've played all year."

The veteran Hastings coach was also happy with the support given him by Doty in the backfield when the pass combination of Schultz to Bob Squires wasn't clicking. Prior to the game, Squires was ranked seventh nationally as a receiver.

Squires caught only two passes for 18 yards against the stingy Wesleyan pass defenders.

"We always knew we had a rushing game," Maupin said. "We thought we had a pretty good rushing game, but until now we didn't need to use it. The way Wesleyan was dropping so many people off the line for the pass forced us into a running game."

The only point of concern to Maupin was the ability of the Wesleyan pass defense to pick off six errant Bronco aerials, three from Schultz and three from sub Dan Dudley.

All total, Wesleyan forced eight Bronco turnovers, but failed to capitalize on any. "We are really hurting," Wesleyan coach Harold Chaffee said after the loss. "We just broke fundamentally on offense and couldn't move the ball."

Chaffee had planned to pull a surprise and start the game with quarterback Larry Schmitt, a little used reserve who has shown great potential. Chaffee worked all week with Schmitt guiding the No. 1 unit and the junior from Lansing, Ill., slipped a kneecap in pre-game warmups.

Hastings' Schultz finished the third quarter with an 8-17-3 effort for 99 yards and two touchdowns. The total was well off his 170-plus average.

But Doty took up the needed slack with his ground game. The 6-2, 195-pound native of Houston, Texas had 100 first half yards including a six-yard scoring scamper for the Bronco's final tally.

Squires and Sam Rennick accounted for the other Bronco scores on receptions from Schultz. Squires caught the first for four yards and Rennick hauled two NWU defenders into the end zone with his 26-yard second quarter reception.

The NIAC win put Hastings at 2-2 in the league and 4-4 overall while Wesleyan dropped to 1-3 in NIAC play and 2-6 overall.

Hastings will host Dana College next Saturday afternoon in the season finale while Wesleyan will travel to Midland and tangle with the league leading Warriors.

Seward — Concordia absorbed a sound thrashing Saturday night, as Midland rolled to a 65-0 whitewashing.

With two backs averaging over 12 yards a crack on the ground Midland accumulated 594 yards on offense while choking the CTC offense off with a $3 yard total.

Rick Klug carried up 114 yards on eight picks and two touchdowns for Midland, while Spencer Gilbert complimented him with 101 yards on eight carries, and two more touchdowns.

Concordia was totally unable to move as they could not get inside the Midland 25 yard line, while the Midland offense was ripping off on the average ten yards a play.

NU: Nice to Win Close One

By Virgil Parker

The vote was unanimous. "It was great to win a close one."

That was the consensus statement from an unusually excited Nebraska dressing room after the Cornhuskers heart-stopping 23-21 victory over Oklahoma State Saturday afternoon.

Nebraska players, who have grown accustomed to winning over the years, are normally happy but calm about a victory.

Not Saturday. They whooped and boistered. There was back-slapping and shouts of joy. While the four previous triumphs this fall had been lopsided affairs, the only two close games had ended on the debit side of the ledger.

"I thought maybe they'd be a little more subdued for not having blown them out," Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne observed. "But really, I guess we're all more pleased to prove we can win the close one."

Osborne noted that the Huskers played far from perfect football with two lost fumbles, a pass interception, three penalties, a dropped touchdown pass and a field goal miss from close range.

"We were killing ourselves with mistakes. But the pleasing thing was the fact that for once things didn't go right and we still won."

The entire 'Black Shirt' defense shared in the praise, but cornerback Ardell Johnson had the busiest afternoon. He was involved in four separate crucial—and sometimes controversial—plays.

First, he blocked a field goal try. Then came the much-boosted 'simultaneous catch' (separate story on Page 4-D), the recovery of OSU's fumble at the Nebraska one (Cowboy quarterback Charlie Weatherbie thought it came after the whistle—see Page 5-D), and his last-second diving save of a Cowboy pass at the NU seven.

"After I was over-ruled on that simultaneous catch," Johnson said later, "I just kept telling myself to 'keep your poise.'"

"As far as the fumble recovery was concerned, my kid sister could have fallen on the football."

Wonder (monster Wonder Monds) really stuck him and there was the ball sitting on the ground. My adrenalin was up. It was just a reflex action and I had it. Everything happened so fast. But it was Wonder's hit that made it possible."

Wingback-split end Ritch Bahe summed it up. "They had a lot of breaks throughout the game, but we got the big one at the end that counted the most with that fumble recovery."

Cornhusker coach Osborne agreed.

"We missed a short field goal (Mike Coyle from the OSU one), had a touchdown pass dropped (a Dave Humm to Chuck Malito aerial was 'that' close) and lost two fumbles—one at their 20-yard line. Maybe it was our time to have a break go our way."

Osborne admits that after the Huskers gained possession at the one he gave some thought to a purposeful safety on fourth down.

"But they've got that guy (Abby Daigle) who can kick 60-yard field goals. Even if we get a good free kick away after a safety, they don't have to move the ball very far. Trailing only 7-5, they could then beat us with a field goal. That's what happened to Florida State against Alabama a couple of weeks ago."

"Even with the big rush I thought we could get the punt away. We practice kicking out of our end zone every day."

Osborne says he expects to be "roundly criticized" for some of his decisions during the game.

"But that's a part of being a head coach," he reasoned. "Last year (against OSU) when we were close we went for the touchdown and failed. This time we tried the field goal. I thought it best at that stage of the game to take the sure three points. It just didn't turn out to be 'sure.'"

"Fans don't really want the correct decision, anyway," Osborne added, "they want the one that works."

The NU coach had unending praise for the work of defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin and the other assistant coaches who direct the defense.

"It was our first test this year against a wishbone team. That caused a complete realignment of our defensive strategy in one week."

Osborne called Oklahoma State "the best football team we've played this year. We expected to pass more than we did, but we didn't have the ball enough." Nebraska only had seven plays and one punt in the entire first quarter.

"But the defense was just great. The last three quarters," Osborne added with a sigh of relief.

Kiffin noted that "like most wishbone teams, Oklahoma State didn't have very many different plays but they had a lot of different blocking schemes for each one."

"We had to make some adjustments after their first two drives. After that, I thought we had them in check pretty well."

It was the poise of his Black Shirt wrecking crew at the end which gave Kiffin his greatest satisfaction.

"I was really proud," he admits. "They never gave up. I keep telling them, they don't award any points for yards. They gotta cross the goal line before it counts anything."

Kiffin felt his defensive troops gave up too many yards. "We bent quite a bit, but at least we didn't break."

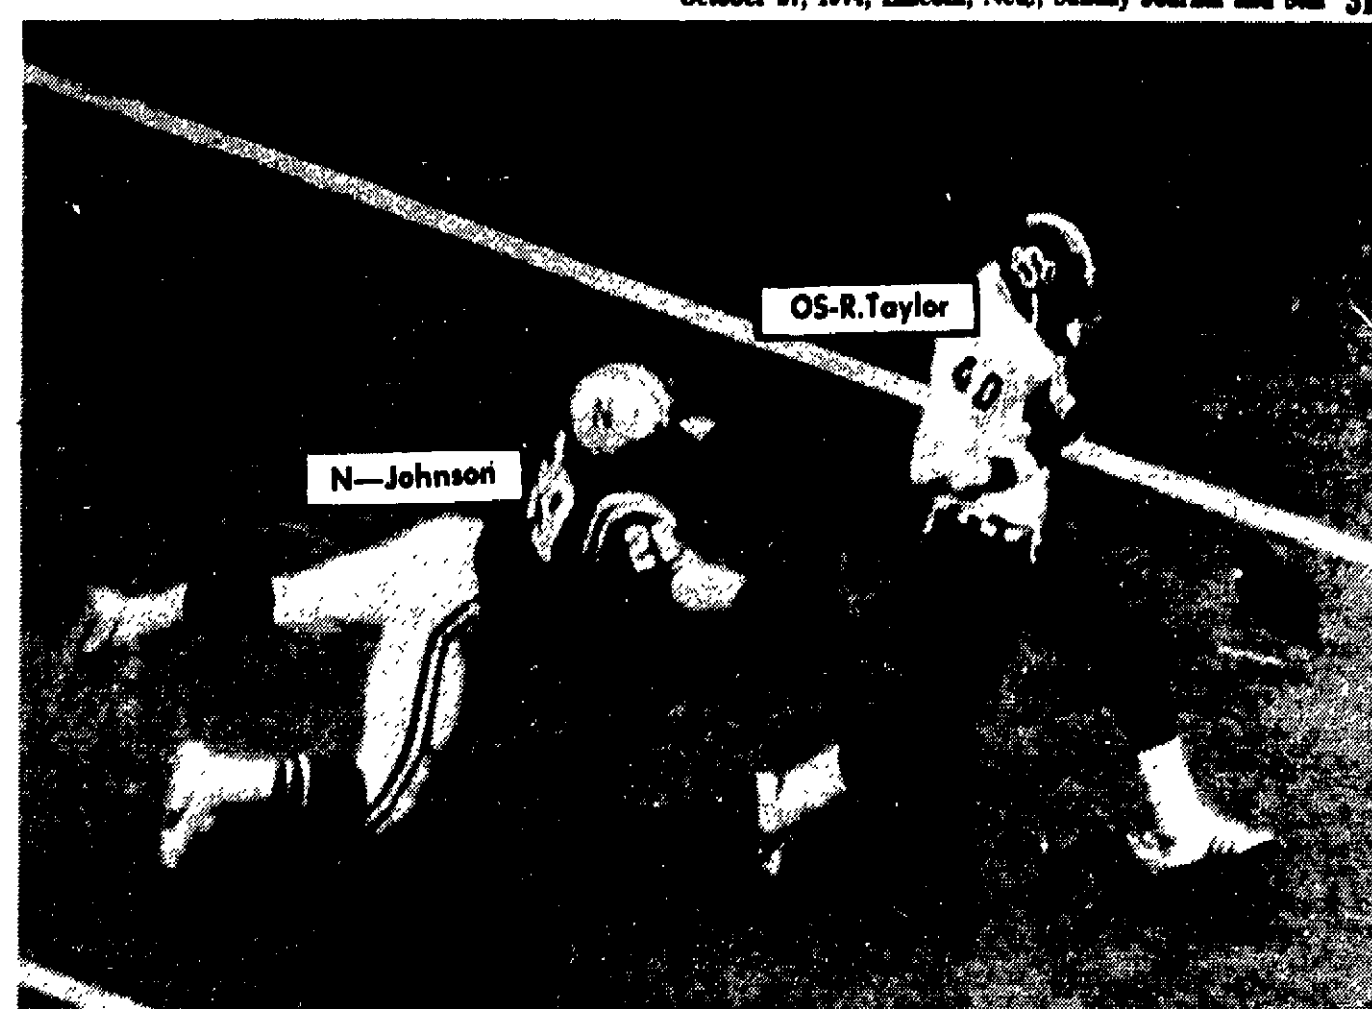

Saturday marked the birthday of both Osborne's wife Nancy and backfield coach Mike Corgan.

"The thought crossed my mind several times," Osborne admitted, "that last Saturday was (Kansas coach Don) Fambrough's birthday and they got beat 56-0. We didn't want that kind of a present for Nancy and Mike."

Trainer Paul Schneider reports that reserve offensive tackle Dennis Pavelka suffered a sprained ankle and linebacker John Starkebaum came away with a knee strain.

"But neither is considered serious," he added. "John Lee came through fine with his bad ankle. There were a lot of bumps and bruises. It was a hard game. But it's when you're sitting back that you get hurt. A hard-hitting game like this and we came out fine."

The Huskers can expect more of the same next Saturday. It's always a hard-hitting day in Boulder.

Cornerback Ardell Johnson (29) was in the right spot just in the nick of time when he batted away a pass an instant before it reached the arms of OSU receiver Ricky

Taylor (40). The Johnson-caused incompletion came on the first play of the Cowboys' last series of plays in the game.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — "Those guys demoralize you. Oklahoma is the best team I've ever seen—ever!" said Kansas State Coach Vince Gibson.

Gibson made his comment in the dressing room Saturday after Oklahoma walked over his Kansas State Wildcats 63-0, using a reserve backfield after rolling to a 35-0 score before intermission.

"They have so many good players and Joe Washington is unreal," Gibson said. "He's just a great player."

Across the field, Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer tried to quiet his elated charges by warning them the season is far from over and that they faced a tough test next week at Iowa State. And he talked about the game they'd just played.

"I didn't want to score as much as we did, but you can't keep the score down under these conditions," Switzer said. He said he talked with Gibson after the game and explained he did not try to run up the score. "Gibson acknowledged that those things happen," Switzer said.

The Sooners came through the game without any serious injuries, but quarterback Steve Davis and split end Billy Brooks suffered bruised shoulders. Switzer said neither would be out of action next week, though.

Washington, the nation's leading all-purpose runner who went into the game with an amazing 8.8-yard average per carry, raced 133 yards in 17 carries and scored one touchdown in the two periods he played. And he added 79 more yards in three punt returns.

NU Nips OSU, 7-3

Early in the second quarter, the Huskers moved to the OSU one only to see Mike Coyle miss an easy field goal attempt from 18 yards out.

Oklahoma State got another scoring chance after linebacker Jesse Hudson pulled the ball loose from Monte Anthony's arms and tackle James White recovered at the NU 44. Six plays later a 48-yard Daigle field goal attempt went wide to the left.

Nebraska moved swiftly to the OSU 25, but the threat died when quarterback Dave Humm's pass was intercepted by Cowboys' safetyman Mike Terry at the six-yard line one play before the end of the scoreless half.

Humm's passes to Don Westbrook for 14 yards and to Ritch Bahe for 30 yards keyed the Husker scoring drive on their second possession of the third quarter.

Davis, who led Nebraska rushers with 58 yards on 10 carries, punched it across from the four, getting a key block from Anthony at the goal line. Coyle converted and it was 7-0.

It looked like the Huskers might be on their way again the next time they had the ball, but Westbrook, who picked up 54 yards on a pass from Humm, fumbled and end Tony Buck recovered for OSU on its own 21.

A Weatherbie-to-Leonard Thompson pass for 38 yards, the first successful aerial of the day for the Cowboys, was the big play leading to Daigle's successful field goal that made it 7-3 with 12:01 left in the game.

Nebraska got a break after the kickoff when the Cowboys were offside on a punt, giving the Huskers a first down at their own 36.

They took the ball all the way to the OSU 22, thanks in part to a 25-yard run by Davis, but a motion penalty, a delay of game violation and an incomplete pass forced NU to send in Coyle for a futile 49-yard field goal attempt.

At this point, the Cowboys went to some razzle-dazzle plays and had the Huskers reeling before Johnson's fumble recovery at the one.

First, Skip Taylor went 13 yards on a double reverse. Then halfback Wes Hankins threw a pass to split end Sam Lisle for 37 yards to the NU 30.

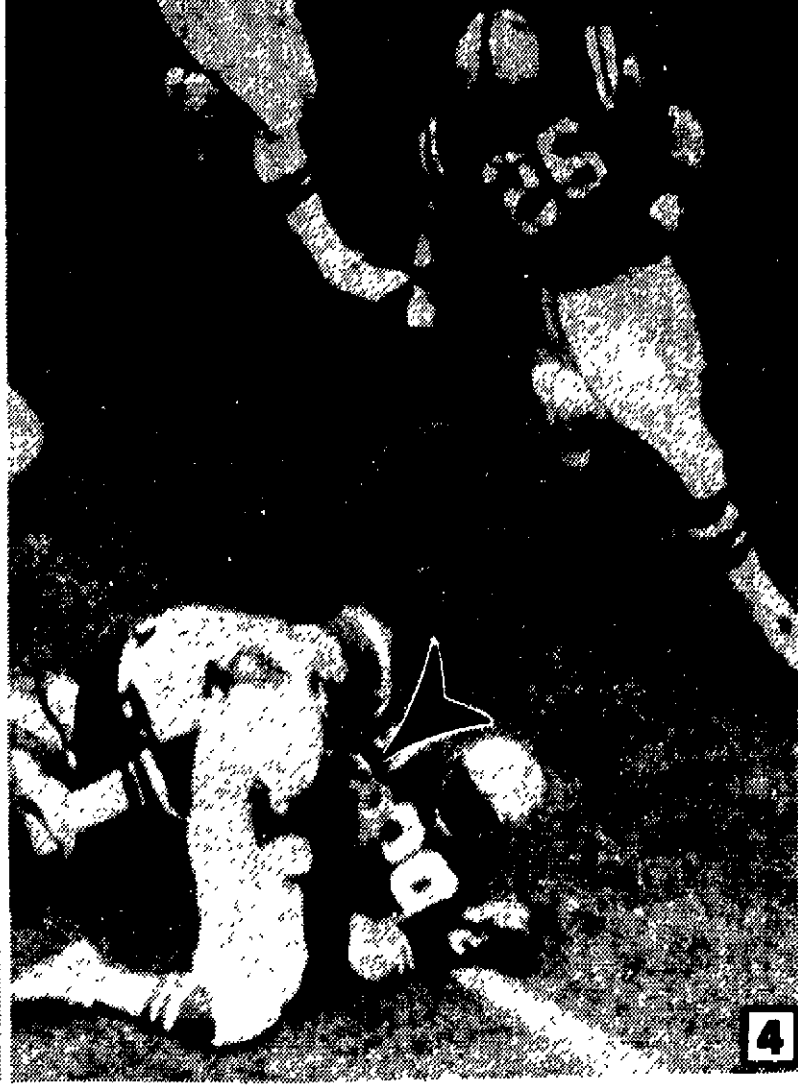

On the play, Johnson moved in front of Lisle and apparently had an interception, but Lisle got his hand on the ball as the pair fell to the ground and it was ruled a simultaneous catch, which the rules say automatically gives the offensive man possession of the ball.

A third-down pass for 21 yards from Weatherbie to Alfred Nelms advanced the ball to the NU five and Husker victory hopes were fading fast in the minds of the huge crowd.

On that play, however, many might not have noticed that fullback George Palmer limped off the field with an injured right knee, which may require surgery.

On second down, Weatherbie took the snap from center, turned to his right and sprinted off toward the goal. He was hit hard by monster back Wonder Mounds, causing the fumble that Johnson pounced on at the one.

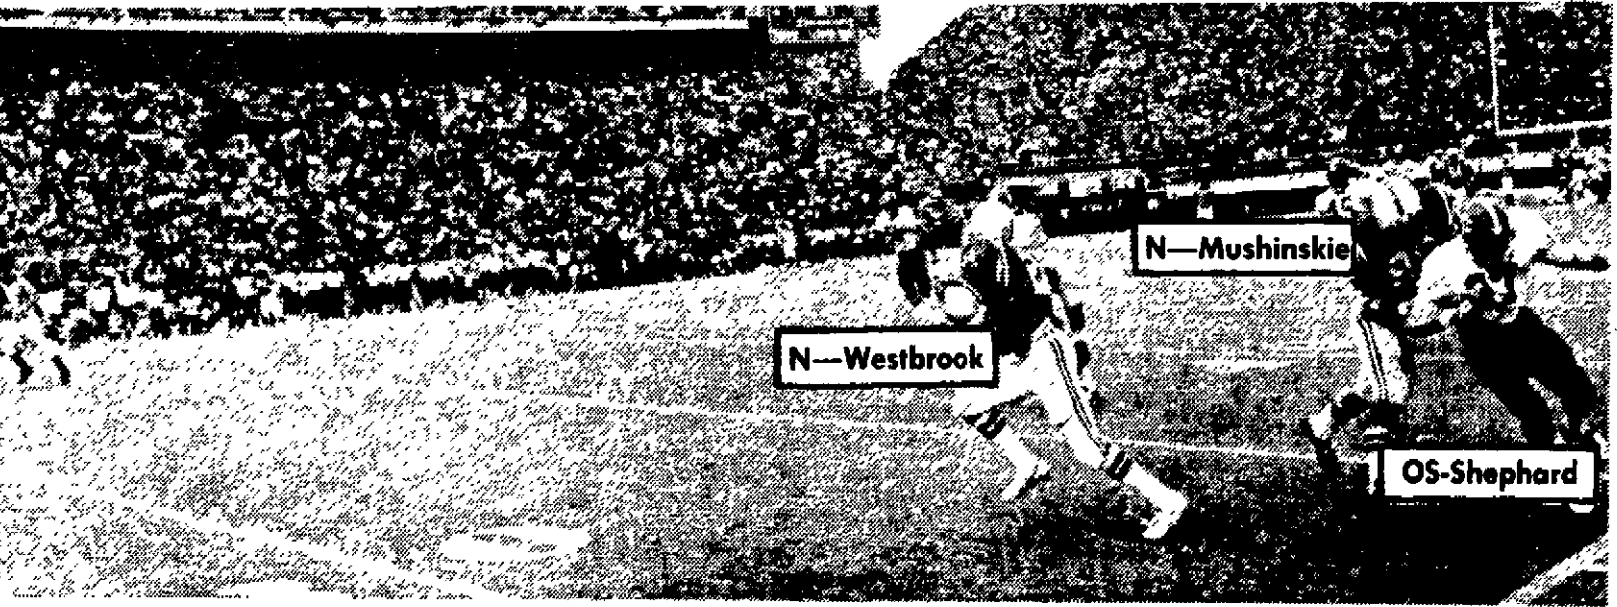

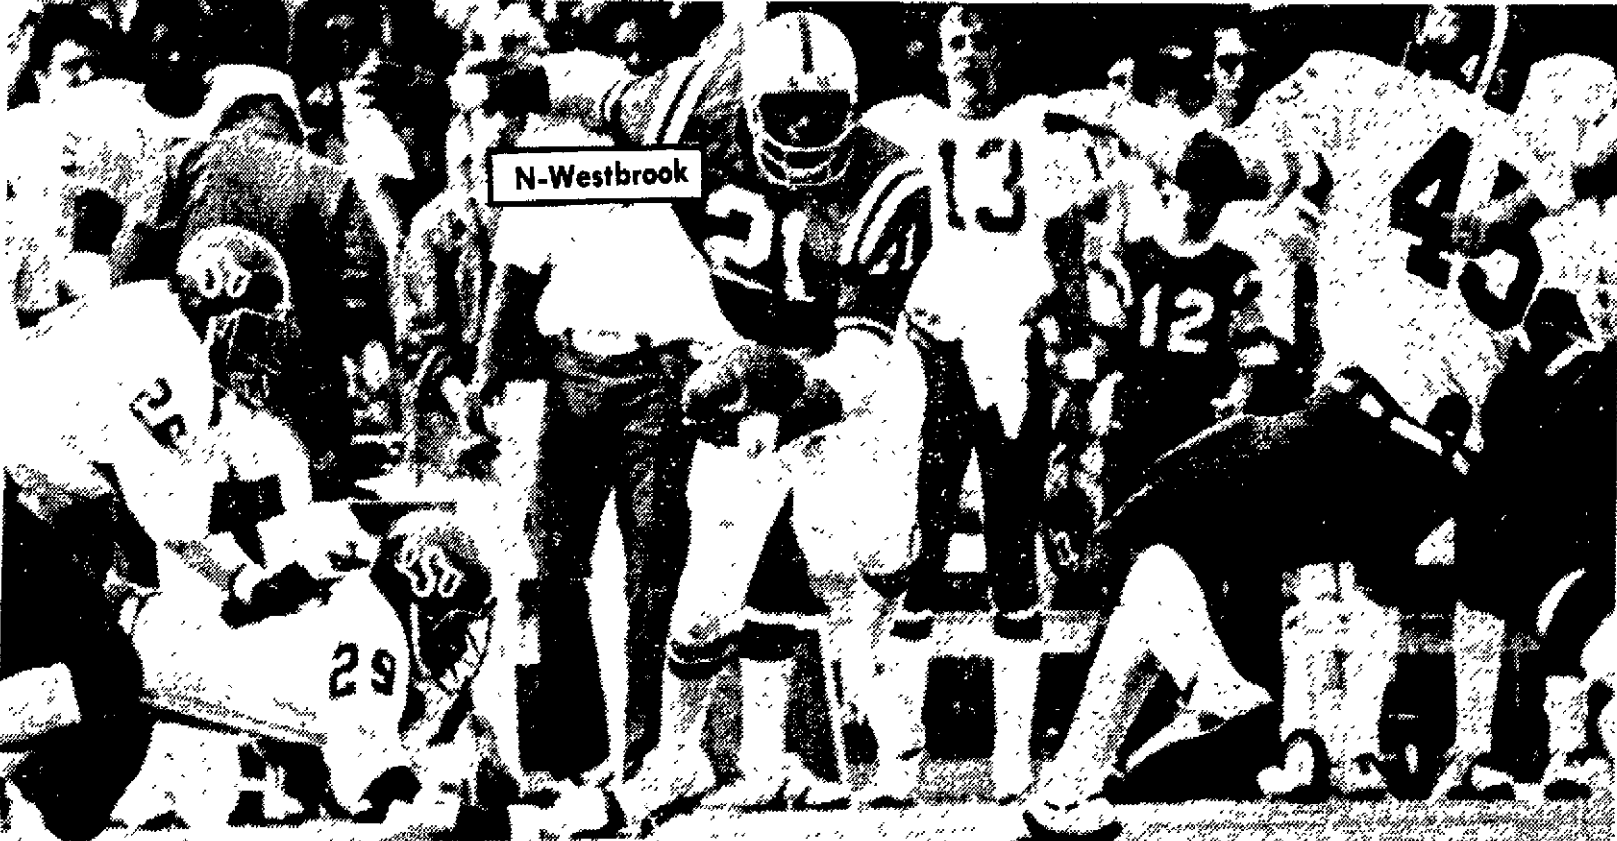

The sigh of relief was heard all the way from Omaha to Scottsbluff.

The play that had everybody wondering . . . this is the pass play that aroused fans, players and coaches from both sides during a fourth quarter Oklahoma State drive. As the ball is in the air, Ardell Johnson (29) jumps in front (1) of the Cowboys' Sam Lisle (84). It appears that Johnson has a clean interception (2) as the ball arrives, but on the way down, Lisle wraps his arms around Johnson's grip (3). Now on the ground (4), the opponents wrestle for control. Officials ruled the play a simultaneous reception and awarded the ball to the offensive player, resulting in a 47-yard pass completion.

Westbrook Top NU Receiver

After making one of his four pass receptions of the day, Don Westbrook (21) darts for daylight (above) and finds plenty of open running room (below) as Larry Mushinskie (88) knocks Oklahoma State's Bob Shepherd (37) out of the action.

Official's Ruling Raised NU Brows

By Virgil Parker

The fans booed. Nebraska coaches stomped the ground. But the official decision stood.

Oklahoma State, after reaching into its bag of tricks, was credited with a 47-yard pass completion on a razzle-dazzle reverse to halfback Wes Hankins who threw a pass to split end Sam Lisle.

The controversy arose because Husker cornerback Ardell Johnson had inside position on Lisle as the ball came down and appeared to make an interception.

As the two tumbled to the ground a tugging match ensued and the 6-2, 190-pound Lisle came up holding the ball. The 5-10, 180-pound Johnson made a frantic, but futile, appeal to the official covering the play but lost the one-sided argument.

After the game Johnson refused to criticize the official, despite claiming Nebraska should have been awarded the ball.

"It's a judgment call for the official," Johnson admitted. "The rule says that if the ball is simultaneously caught by both players, it should be awarded to the offense.

"But, when I went up he was behind me. I had both hands on the ball securely. As I was coming down he reached in and grabbed ahold. He was just too strong. I couldn't take it away from him."

Johnson, a senior from Chillicothe, Mo., said he and Lisle had equal control of the ball by the time they hit the ground, "but I had already made the interception by then."

About 4½ minutes later, Johnson recovered an OSU fumble at the Nebraska one-yard line, thwarting a possible Cowboy touchdown to help preserve the narrow 7-3 triumph.

Emotion Plays Big Game Role

Although Saturday's Oklahoma State-Nebraska football game had plenty of the physical confrontation Big Eight fans have come to expect, the closeness brought out another, more emotional aspect. For example, how about the big hug Tony Davis (25) gives Jim Burrow (2) after the latter's pass interception; or Husker head Coach Tom Osborne urging his players on; or Davis raising the ball in salute as he crosses the goal line after the game's only touchdown. And then there's coach Monte Kiffin who went right out onto the field to join Bob Nelson (57) in tango for two after the Huskers' late-in-the-game fumble recovery.

Cowpokes' Running Star May Need Surgery

Palmer Wanted One Last Chance

By Dave Sittler

George Palmer couldn't help it — he was crying.

And probably not one of the 76,476 football fans who watched the brilliant Oklahoma State fullback in action against Nebraska Saturday would have blamed him.

Trying to fight back the tears after suffering not only a heartbreaking 7-3 loss to the Cornhuskers but also a knee injury which very likely ended his season, an emotionally-drained Palmer discussed the defeat.

"We had them (Nebraska) on the ropes all day and just couldn't go ahead and kill them," Palmer quietly explained as he cradled his baby daughter in his arms. "It seemed like Nebraska was just standing back and saying 'go ahead and finish us off,' but we couldn't do it."

Palmer, who gained 127 yards against the Cornhuskers before he was "blindsided" and injured while blocking on the pass play which carried the 'Pokes to Nebraska's four-yard line, blamed himself for the defeat.

"I should have been in there at the end," he noted. "I was having success against Nebraska's defense because their linemen kept standing up on every play and I could run through them."

But instead of "running through them" Palmer was lying on the Cowboys' bench when quarterback Charlie Weatherbie fumbled the ball and the game on the Cornhusker one-yard line.

"I didn't see the fumble," Palmer admitted. "The trainers were working on my knee (his right knee) and I guess they're going to have to cut (operate) on it."

Oklahoma State coach Jim Stanley said he wasn't in a position to see Weatherbie's crucial fumble either, and would only say, "It's their (officials) job to make the correct call. If they did fine, but if they didn't they should be fired."

Weatherbie thought the play was already blown dead, but took the fumble and the loss with a mature manner not expected from a 19-year-old sophomore quarterback.

"When I was hit at the line I thought I heard the whistle," Weatherbie said. "Then someone grabbed the ball and pulled it out of my arm."

"I really thought the play was dead, but won't really know until I see the films. I'm probably wrong. The officials are usually right on those close calls."

Stanley expressed overall satisfaction with his team's performance — except for the mistakes.

"We had several chances to win but did not cash in on them," he said, "but that's what life and football is all about. You try to take advantage of the good opportunities which happen and also take advantage of the mistakes by others. We didn't do that today."

Stanley said he didn't try to do anything new against the Cornhuskers except to mix up his team's defensive secondary coverage and pass rush.

"I thought we played well," he said. "On their long pass play (Dave Humm's 30-yard completion to split end Rutch Bahe on Nebraska's touchdown drive) our safety just made a mental error. He was supposed to go deep on the play but curled in instead. He just wasn't thinking."

"Anytime you lose by four points you can think of 100 things you could have tried," Stanley continued. Tom Osborne is to be commended for his team's great effort."

Stanley said his team played with "a great deal of pride," and now must put the loss out of their minds.

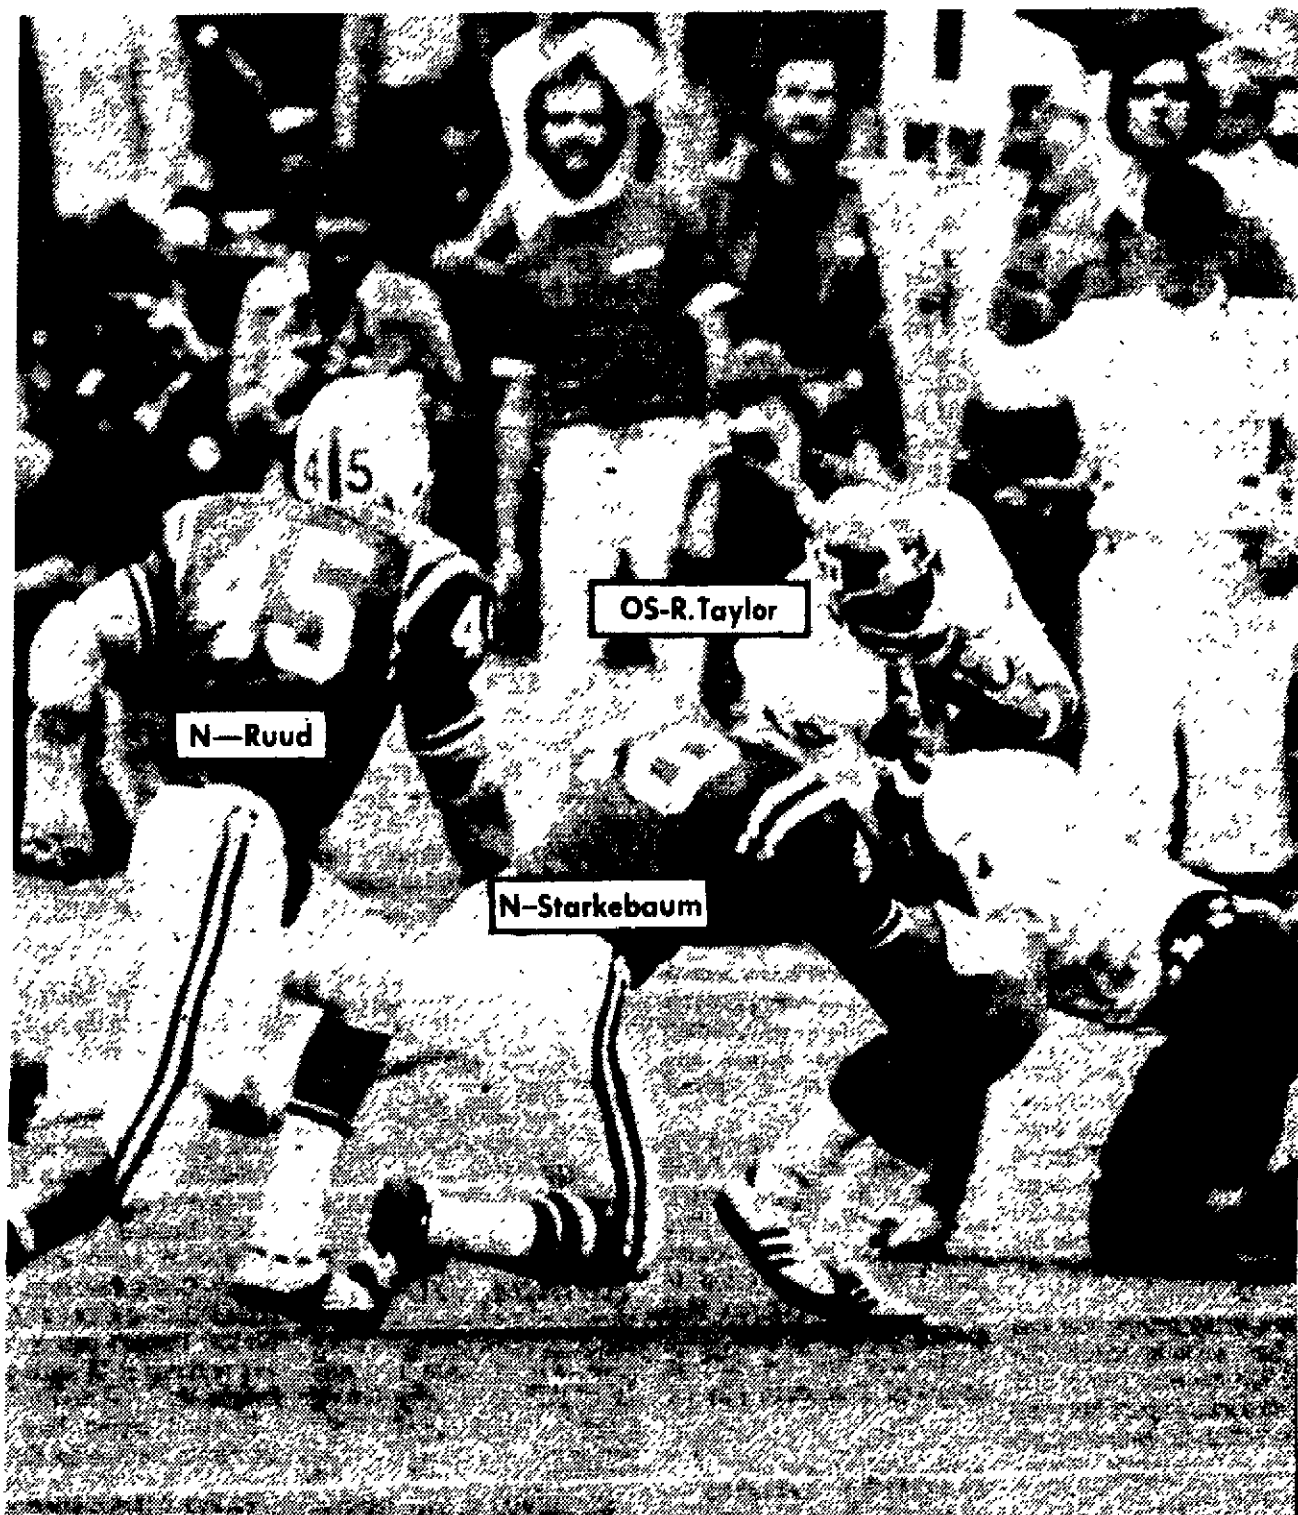

"This is a tough league . . . we just have to start over next week and not feel sorry for ourselves," he said.

"I'm proud of this team and this conference. We like playing in a tough league instead of some bush league."

Oklahoma State fullback George Palmer (35) rushed for 120 yards against the Huskers Saturday, but Husker defensive end Bob Martin (87) found about the best way to stop the big guy was to meet him head on.

With Tom Ruud (45) coming up fast to help out, linebacker John Starkebaum (48) makes a solid hit on the Cowboys' Ricky Taylor (40).

Starkebaum had seven tackles in the game, four of them unassisted.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Heisman Trophy candidate Anthony Davis set a Pacific 8 career touchdown record by clearing off his 41st and 42nd scores Saturday as fifth-ranked University of Southern California roared back from a 10-0 first-half deficit to beat stubborn Oregon State 31-10.

Favored by 27 points, the Trojans had to tally two touchdowns in the final five minutes of the first half to take a 14-10 intermission lead after the Beavers, now 1-6, appeared headed for a gigantic upset.

Davis, who also became the third Trojan rusher to surpass 3,000 career yards, scored on a 13-yard run in the second quarter for USC's first touchdown. Davis gave the Trojans a 24-10 lead on an 11-yard scoring romp with 1:43 gone in the fourth period.

Pat Haden, who had completed only 20 passes for 216 yards and two touchdowns in USC's five previous games, hit tight end Jim Obradovich with an eight-yard scoring pass with 21 seconds left in the opening half and passed 38 yards to John McKay in the end zone for the final Trojan score at the 9:54 mark of the fourth period.

Davis, a talented 5-9, 185-pound senior tailback, broke the Pac-8 career record of 40 touchdowns set by California's Duke Morrison from 1920 to 1922. Davis equalled the mark in a 16-7 win at Oregon last weekend.

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — Sophomore Mike Cordova threw for 190 yards and two touchdowns Saturday to lead Stanford to a 20-18 Pacific-8 Conference win over Washington State in a game in which the Cougars staged a desperate but unsuccessful fourth-quarter rally.

Down by 14 points with just over four minutes left in the game, WSU scored a pair of TDs just two minutes apart, but were unsuccessful in both attempts to score two-point conversions.

The win, left Stanford 2-0-1 in the league and Washington State 0-3.

Cordova guided the Cardinals on 67-yard, seven-play scoring drive early in the fourth quarter. It was capped by his 12-yard pass to flanker Eric Test in the end zone in what appeared to be the clincher for Stanford.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Cool Tom Clements, utilizing the bootleg pass to perfection, threw for a pair of touchdowns and ran for one more Saturday in a convincing 38-7 victory for fifth-ranked Notre Dame over No. 13 Miami of Florida.

Notre Dame took the opening kickoff, marched 79 yards to a touchdown in just five plays, and did all of its damage in the first 21 minutes.

Then the Irish held on to deal the Hurricanes their second loss against four wins.

Miami, after giving up the first touchdown of the game, grabbed the ensuing kickoff and marched all the way to the Notre Dame 10, but a field goal attempt was wide.

From that point, it was all Notre Dame as Clements, hitting end Al Demmerle and halfback Al Samuel, riddled the Miami defense.

A 47-yard pass from Clements to Demmerle gave the Irish their first touchdown. Clements scored on an eight yard keeper play and then threw a four-yard touchdown pass to Ken MacAfee.

Notre Dame got a break when Miami's Clarence Latimer fumbled a punt on his own 15 and the ball was recovered by Doug Becker on the nine. On the first play from scrimmage Wayne Bullock went the distance for the TD.

The Irish completed their scoring in the first quarter when Dave Reeve kicked a 28 yard field goal.

DALLAS (UPI) — Tommy Cones' block of a Southern Methodist punt early in the fourth quarter Saturday gave Texas Tech the lift it needed to rally to a 20-17 victory over the Mustangs.

Texas Tech's defense, despite giving SMU two big breaks in the final two minutes, held off the Mustangs to keep the Red Raiders in the Southwest Conference race.

Texas had trailed going into the final quarter, 17-13, but Cones' block of a punt by John Blackburn set the Raiders up at the SMU 28. Larry Isaac, who gained 125 yards on 20 carries, scored the go ahead Raider touchdown four plays after the blocked punt, and it was then left to the Raider defenders to fight off two last SMU attempts.

Tech had taken a 13-7 lead at the half on an 11-yard touchdown run by backup quarterback Don Roberts and field goals of 23 and 27 yards by Brian Hall.

The Mustangs, who got a five yard touchdown run by David Bostick in the opening quarter, had moved in front in the third period on a five-yard scoring pass from Ricky Wesson to Oscar Roan and a 26-yard field goal by David Thompson.

Kinney Gains Starting Job

San Diego (AP) — Jeff Kinney, former Nebraska football star, has been tabbed to start at fullback for Kansas City when the Chiefs play the Chargers Sunday in San Diego.

Kinney got the job when bruised ribs continued to bother Wendell Hayes and Willie Ellison was sidelined with a cracked rib.

Coach Hank Stram said rookie Woody Green will be the other running back and Mike Livingston will be at quarterback.

Stram said running back Ed Podolak is not completely recovered from a foot injury but probably will play some. John Matuszak, defensive tackle obtained in a trade with Houston on Tuesday, also will get into the San Diego game, probably as a backup defensive end.

After Isaac's touchdown early in the final quarter, Texas Tech halted one Mustang rally attempt when Randy Olson intercepted a Wesson pass at the Tech 47 yardline. But after Tech failed to convert a fourth and one situation at the SMU 12 with three minutes remaining, the Mustangs had one final chance.

The last desperation effort by SMU was kept alive when Tech roughed the passer on a fourth down incompleteness and also when Red Raider defensive back Selo Ramirez fumbled the ball back to SMU after intercepting a Wesson pass.

But the Mustangs, out of time out, could not advance past the Red Raider 25 before time ran out.

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Washington crushed Oregon 66-0 Saturday as the Huskies avenged a 58-0 drubbing handed out by the Ducks a year ago. It was Washington's first Pacific-8 football victory since 1972.

Six different Huskies participated in the touchdown parade that delighted a partisan crowd of 52,900. Washington broke it open with three touchdowns in the second period.

Dennis Fitzpatrick scored from the Oregon two to cap a 5-2 yard drive early in the second period.

Robbin Earl crashed over from the Ducks' two to make it 17-0, then Chris Rowland passed 12 yards to Scott Phillips for the third Husky TD of the quarter.

Steve Robbins booted a 39-yard field goal in the first period to open the scoring.

The rout continued in the third quarter as Earl scored his second touchdown on a oneyard plunge over center.

The Huskies were on the scoreboard again after linebacker Cory Chenevert intercepted Duck quarterback Normal Turner's pass on the 27 and returned it 12 yards to the Oregon 15.

Rowland scored three plays later from the Webfoot three.

Backup fullback Mike Vicino scored the first of his two touchdowns later in the third period to make it 45-0.

Defensive back Al Burleson made it 52-0 when he intercepted another Turner pass on the Oregon 23 and ran it in for a touchdown.

Rowland scored his second touchdown early in the fourth period when he slipped over from the two.

Vicino then scored on a 22-yard break over center and moments later the debacle mercifully came to a close.

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — Quarterback Marty Atkins ran for 188 yards Saturday night and led the 10th-ranked Texas Longhorns on two long scoring drives in the third quarter for 27-6 Southwest Conference victory over the Rice Owls.

Rice took a 6-3 lead in the second quarter on a 42-yard scoring pass from Tommy Kramer to David Houser, then Texas placekicker Billy Schott booted his second field goal with two seconds left in the half.

Despite rushing for 241 yards in the first half, Texas went into halftime with a 6-6 tie. The second half was different.

Atkins directed his team 80 yards with the second half kickoff, carrying 34 yards himself but handing to Raymond Clayborn for a two-yard touchdown run and a 13-6 Texas lead.

Atkins scored from one yard out capping the Longhorns' 72-yard drive on their second possession of the third quarter, and he added another touchdown on a nine-yard run before leaving the game with nine minutes left.

For the game, Atkins got his 188 yards on 23 carries and his performance overshadowed a fine passing game by sophomore Kramer, who threw for 254 yards, hitting 16 of 28.

Rice had possession of the ball less than four minutes in the Texas-dominated third quarter and never got close to scoring during the second half.

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — Texas A&M's Carl Roaches scooped up a bouncing fumble and raced 56 yards for a touchdown Saturday night to spark the seventh-ranked Aggies to a 20-0 victory over Baylor and give them the outright lead in the Southwest Conference.

The Aggies, now the only undefeated team in the SWC, crushed Baylor's offensive effort with an unyielding defense, and got booming field goals of 42 and 41 yards from Randy Had-dox to kill the Bears' hopes for the league lead. Defensive tackle Warren Tarahan batted an attempted Baylor screen pass into the air, then grabbed it and stepped into the endzone for a touchdown in the final period to guarantee the victory.

A&M faced a third and five at its own 34 yardline when Roaches' alertness and a stroke of luck turned a miscue into six points. Halfback Bubba Bean lunged into the Baylor line and the ball popped out of his arms and into the secondary.

Roaches, a 185 pound wide receiver, caught the ball on the first bounce without breaking stride and streaked 56 yards down the middle untouched by the stunned Baylor defense. The Aggies drove from their own 15 yardline to the Baylor 25 just before halftime, and Had-dox booted a 42 yard field goal with 42 seconds remaining to give A&M a 10-0 halftime lead.

The senior kicking specialist was accurate again in the third period, this time hitting from 41 yards after the Aggies had moved from their own 20 to the Bear 24 on the power running of fullback Ronnie Hubby and halfback Skip Walker and Bean.

Baylor, playing before the largest crowd ever to see a collegiate game in Waco, could never penetrate the rugged Aggie front line. The Bears crossed midfield only twice in the first half and never moved any deeper than the Aggie 45 before intermission.

Quarterback Neal Jeffrey attempted to move Baylor through the air in the second half, but poor field position hampered the Bears' hopes for a comeback.

Datsun wins the EPA mileage test. Again.

39 mpg on the highway

27 mpg in town

On September 20, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency published the results of its mileage tests of 1975 domestic and imported cars to be sold in the United States.

The Datsun B-210 came in first for best highway and city mileage. Hardly a surprise. Our Datsun 1200 placed first in 1973, and the B-210 is first in its weight class for 1974.

Datsun's great engineering made this track record possible. But gas economy is only part of our economy story. There's Datsun's low maintenance plus high resale value. Also the long list of features you get as standard equipment at the low sticker price. See your Datsun Dealer for an enjoyable test drive.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Gil Chapman scored two touchdowns and Bob Lytle rushed for 158 yards to pace a Michigan total offense of 626 yards and a 49-0 shellacking of Minnesota Saturday.

It was the third shutout of the season for the defense of the No. 2 ranked Wolverines who held Minnesota to a total offense of just 144 yards.

Michigan also hobbled Minnesota's offense with 114 yards a game heading into the contest, to just 24 yards.

Lytle picked up 144 yards in the first half to set up two of Michigan's three touchdowns. The junior tailback spearheaded a pair of 60-yard scoring drives, rushing for 27 yards after the opening kickoff and then for 48 yards during the team's first possession of the second quarter.

Chapman capped the first drive with a 20-yard scamper and scored again in the opening minutes of the second half on a five-yard sweep.

Chuck Heater scored Michigan's second touchdown of the first half with a one-yard run, and Gordie Bell finished off the scoring in the first 30 minutes with a one-yard plunge of his own.

Bell finished the game with 135 yards rushing. Michigan scored its fifth touchdown of the day on a 22-yard pass from Dennis Franklin after a Tom Drake interception and a Minnesota rushing penalty moved the ball to the Gophers' 22.

Reserve quarterback Mark Elzinga scored the sixth Michigan touchdown on a 50-yard run and backup fullback Scott Corbin closed out the scoring with a two-yard run.

The win was the sixth straight for Michigan over Minnesota and gave the Wolverines a 7-0 record for this season.

Jones' first touchdown play was a one-yard pass to Reggie Holmes and the other a 12-yard aerial to Trent Smock.

Jones connected on 11 of 18 passes for 175 yards, including the three touchdowns. Gregg Bohlig hit on 10 of 16 passes for 160 yards and had one throw intercepted by defender Bill Atkinson in the third period.

Ron Pollard scored Wisconsin's final touchdown in the fourth quarter on a one-yard run. Dennis Cremins scored Indiana's other touchdown on a 20-yard run with 16 seconds left in the first half, following a 40-yard pass from Jones to Smock.

Indiana's Courtney Snyder, the Big Ten rushing leader, gained 121 yards in 28 attempts while Starch added 99 in 10 carries for Wisconsin.

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Quarterback Gary Sheide threw five touchdown passes as Brigham Young rolled over 14th ranked Arizona 37-13 in a regionally televised game Saturday.

The victory put BYU, now 30-1 in Western Athletic Conference play, back in the thick of the race for the title and a spot in the Fiesta Bowl. The loss dropped Arizona to 3-1 in league play and 5-2 overall.

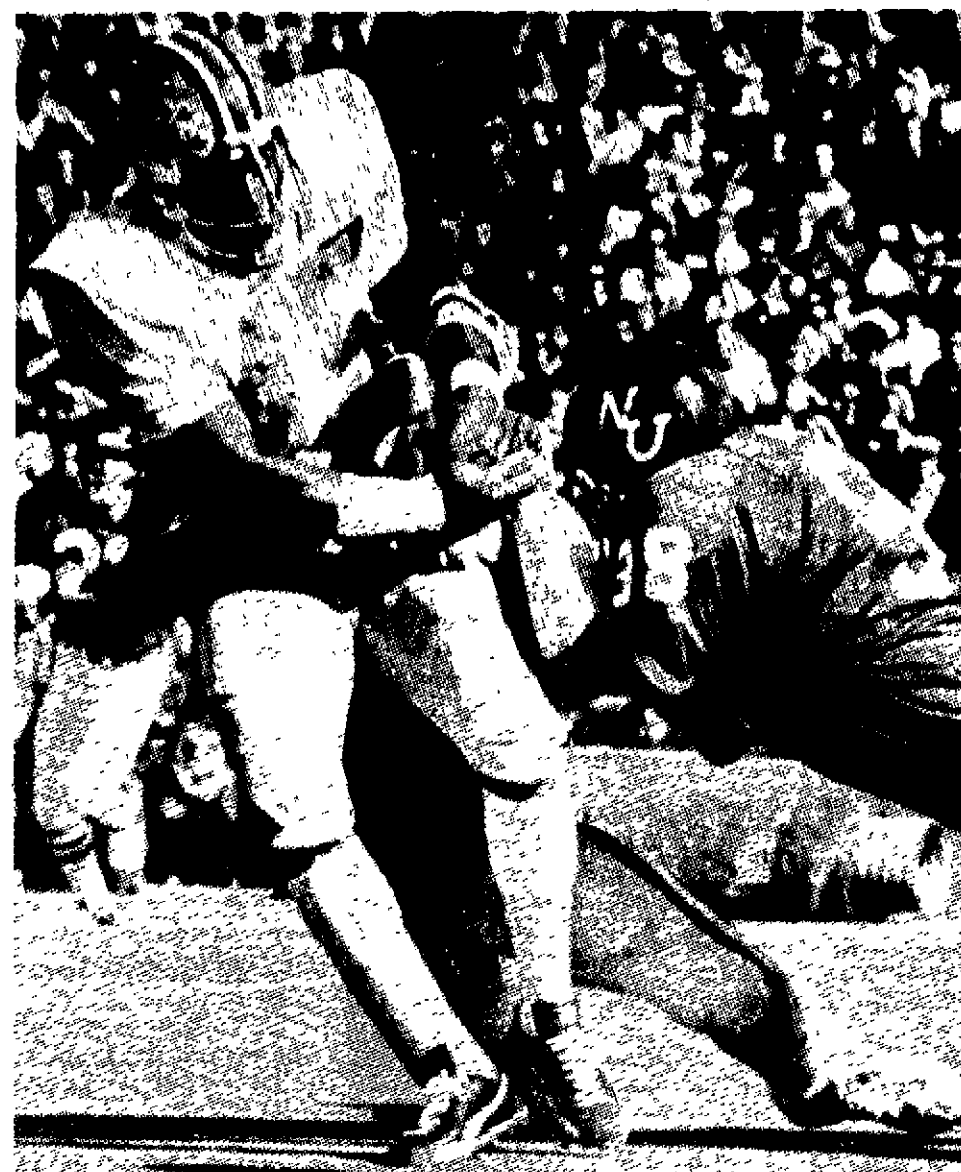

Three of Sheide's touchdown strikes went to wide receiver John Betham and for the game he completed 19 of 35 aerials for 268 yards.

The Cougars took advantage of crucial Arizona turnovers to build a 28-7 halftime lead.

Arizona quarterback Bruce Hill got Arizona off to a quick start with a 50-yard scoring strike to Scott Piper on the Wildcats' opening series. But, Arizona's receivers were unable to hang onto Hill's tosses after the initial drive and the Cats suffered three interceptions before intermission, each one bouncing off an Arizona receiver. For the game, Hill suffered five interceptions.

Sheide, meanwhile, hit four touchdown tosses in the first half, evenly divided between Betham and running back Jeff Blanc. Blanc did not play in the second half because of a rib injury.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Junior Quarterback Robert Fraley, who won his starting berth with a 28-6 victory over Tennessee a week earlier, ran for one touchdown and passed for two others as 3rd-ranked Alabama rolled over Texas Christian 41-3 Saturday.

Running the Crimson Tide wishbone flawlessly, Fraley scored on a four-yard run with the game only three minutes old. He hit tight end George Pugh with a five-yard scoring pass near intermission, and opened the third period with a 15-yard pass to wide receiver Ozzie Newsum.

Running back Rick Watson added another touchdown on a one-yard plunge, and substitute quarterback Jack O'Rear passed 15 yards to Jerry Brown for another.

O'Rear finished off TCU with a 21-yard scoring run with less than two minutes left in the game.

Kicker Danny Ridgeway converted on all five attempts. One try for a two-point conversion failed.

TCU's only score, a 30-yard field goal by Tony Biasatti, came with 3:58 to play in the first half.

Alabama, now 7-0, led TCU 21-7 at intermission.

Under sunny skies, the 63,000 fans at Legion Field watched Alabama methodically dismantle an already crippled TCU offense, intercepting two Lee Cook passes and virtually stopping the TCU running game.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Quarterback Don Gaffney passed for two touchdowns and halfback Larry Brinson ran for two more Saturday as 11th-ranked Florida trounced Duke 38-13.

The Gators did all their scoring in the first half, taking their sixth victory against one loss this season, before a homecoming crowd of 56,251.

Duke is now 4-3 on the season. Under pressure on a left end sweep with just over one minute gone in the game, Gaffney pitched out to running back James Richards for 68 yards and the opening score.

Duke was unable to mount a drive on the next series and punted to Tyson Sever, who fumbled deep in Florida territory. But Florida recovered and a 15-yard clipping penalty put the ball on the Gator 38.

Ohio State Tramples Over Northwestern, 55-7

Thereafter Coach Woody Hayes used second and third team personnel.

Griffin carried 18 times for his 173 yards, the 17th straight game in which he has gained a 100 games or more to tie the national collegiate record set by Steve Owens of Oklahoma in 1969-70.

The production gave Griffin 1,050 yards this year, to become the first Ohio State runner to ever cross the 1,000-yard barrier in two consecutive years.

Griffin was one of 13 ball carriers who rushed for a total of 441 yards for the Buckeyes. One of them was his freshman little brother, Ray, who carried four times for 43 yards and caught two passes for 23 yards, including one touchdown.

Greene carried the ball nine times for 55 yards and completed four of five passes for 53 yards, including a fiveyard touchdown throw to Ray Griffin and a 11-yard scoring pass to Pete Johnson. Johnson also scored Ohio State's first touchdown on a one-yard run.

Other Buckeye scores were by Griffin on an 11-yard run, Brian Baschnagel on a fouryard run, Harold Hemson on a one-yard run, Louis Willott on another one-yard burst, and Leonard Willis on a 92-yard kickoff return.

Willis' return came after Northwestern's only score by Jim Pooler on a seven yard run which wound up a 21-play, 65-yard drive and pulled Northwestern into a tie at that point.

The Buckeye defense bugged Northwestern passer Mitch Anderson, intercepting three of his 18 passes and scoring after each interception. Anderson completed six throws for 89 yards.

Alert Johnson Nails Fumble, Stops Cowboy TD Drive

Nebraska cornerback Ardell Johnson made a key defensive play in the final three minutes to halt Oklahoma State drives and preserve a 7-3 victory for the ninth-ranked Cornhuskers in a Big Eight Conference football game Saturday.

With Nebraska holding a 7-3 lead, Johnson recovered Cowboy quarterback Charlie Weatherbie's fumble on the one-yard line with 3:22 showing on the clock to stop an Oklahoma State drive that had covered 79 yards in 10 plays.

The Husker offense could not sustain a drive on the next series and had to punt. Oklahoma State started its final drive on its own 38 yard line. Weatherbie threw three incompletes and his fourth aerial was picked off on the 14 by Jim Barrow who returned it to the 33 with 35 seconds remaining in the game.

Nebraska's lone touchdown came in the third period when fullback Tony Davis popped over from the four-yard line. His tally capped an 11-play, 79-yard drive highlighted by quarterback Dave Humm's 30-yard pass to Ritch Bahe on third down.

Oklahoma State's only score came with 12:01 remaining in the fourth period, when Abbie Daigle put the Cowboys on the board with a 32-yard field goal.

That tally was set up when Weatherbie hit Leonard Thompson with a 38 yard pass on the Husker 39. But the Cowboy drive was stymied on the Nebraska 10.

'Everything Popular Comes Up Short'

Hunters Find Guns, Ammo Scarce

By The Associated Press
Hunters are hunting—for scarce guns and ammunition—before going after ducks and deer this year. Sporting goods dealers across the country report shortages of rifles, shotguns and ammunition.

The shortages resulted from limited supplies of steel for gun barrels, choice woods for rifle stocks and plastic and brass for cartridge cases, dealers said.

Officials in many states reported increases in both poaching and legal hunting of game birds and animals. The price of meat is a factor, some said, but others said it still is cheaper to go to the supermarket.

With hunting season about to start in many states, gun dealers from Maine to the Mexican border are looking at thinly stocked rifle cases and ammo bins.

"There's a shortage of everything popular," said Dave Giles of Coast-To-Coast Stores in Fargo, N. D.

Dan Hicks, owner of Hicks Trading Station in the Southern Illinois town of Pickneyville, said he has been waiting 10 months on some gun orders. "I'll be out of deer rifles in another week or two," Hicks said.

Gun dealers in Wisconsin said lack of inventory was holding down sales. "We can't get guns," said Jim Haraughty of Cappel's Sports Center in Madison. "They say it's a material shortage. It's the same old story with everything."

Steel shortages have affected production at the Ithaca Gun Co. said John Hrana, marketing manager for the upstate New York gun maker. "Most of the effect was in the first part of the year," Hrana said, "but our production forecast is being met almost 100 per cent now."

A shortage of top quality walnut for gunstocks has caused delays for some manufacturers. A few have turned to birch and other woods to fill the gap.

Most dealers reported little difficulty getting inexpensive guns, but the demand is for mid-priced and quality firearms and they are in short supply. "We have a waiting list for certain guns," said the manager of a Dallas sporting goods store.

Despite price hikes of 30 per cent and more during the past year, some dealers blame the shortage of hunting guns on manufacturers waiting for still higher prices.

"There's a lot of talk about shortages of raw materials, but you have to wonder if they are not just holding back until the next price increase," said Judd Kirkham, sporting goods buyer for a J.C. Penney store in Kansas City.

The ammunition situation is about the same.

"The price of ammunition is out of sight," said Virginia Cartner, owner of Ozark Tackle and Supply in Eldo, Mo.

"Manufacturers aren't delivering," said Leory Brown, manager of a shop in Buffalo, N.Y. "Ammunition has been tight."

In short supply are cartridges in the calibers most often used for deer hunting, .30-.06 and .30-.30.

"We bought five or six cases of ammo in the popular cartridges this summer so we're not out yet," said Andy Raiba of the Pend Oreille Sports Shop in Sandpoint, Idaho. "I don't know what will happen when we're out."

Game management and wildlife officials in many states said they expect a moderate increase in the number of hunters in the field this year because of larger herds and flocks and the growing popularity of outdoor recreation.

The high price of beef produced a boom in hunting license sales last year, but officials generally are looking for 3 to 5 per cent increases now. Montana sold 20,700 big game licenses to out-of-state hunters this year, up from 19,600 last year.

The cost of putting beef on the table may still be a factor in getting people into the field. "You seem to find more and more guys who are going out meat hunting this year," said Paul Landry of Haggett's Sports Shop in Concord, N.H.

But while venison steak may be part of the deal, most people said sirloin at the supermarket would be cheaper.

surge in poaching violations in recent months. In August, there were 69 violations for killing or possessing deer out of season, up from 41 last August. There also were 49 violations for hunting at night, compared to 17 a year ago.

"When inflation is up to your eyeballs, they feel that the free meat can save them money unless they get caught," said Henry Burkett, director of the department's law enforcement division.

Antelope Rates High Success

Nebraska riflemen had another good antelope season this year, with 79 percent of the permit holders bagging pronghorns.

The North Sioux Unit provided the best success of the major hunting areas, with 450 permit holders taking 399 antelope for an 88 percent success ratio. Other units, and the percent of success, include: Banner, 84; Box Butte, 82; Brown, 73; Cherry, 73; Cheyenne, 72; Dismal, 63; Dundy, 90; Garden, 79; Rock, 61; and Wildhorse, 41.

Quail Survey Needing Help

Quail season is just around the corner, and the Game and Parks Commission is looking for hunters to assist in the annual quail harvest survey, according to Jack Sinn, game supervisor for the Commission's district office in Lincoln.

"Past cooperators have provided valuable data on quail populations, reproduction, hunting pressure, and other important management information," Sinn said.

"Each year the Game and Parks Commission sends cooperators hunting report cards and envelopes for returning quail wings to the Commission. The report cards are filled out by the hunter, detailing specific information on quail bagged, coveys seen or flushed, and other useful management data."

The cooperators are also asked to send a wing from each quail harvested to the Commission, which will be used to help determine age and sex composition of the quail population, he added.

"Each survey cooperator will be making a direct contribution to improved quail management and quail hunting," Sinn said.

Quail hunters interested in taking part in the Commission's survey should write to Jack Sinn, Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, Box 30370, Lincoln, Nebr. 68503.

Duck Stamp Investment

The Nebraska Wildlife Federation has endorsed a call from the Dept. of the Interior for citizens interested in conservation to buy duck stamps.

Jim Prechal, Federation Board member from Norfolk, said, "The $5 duck stamp available at your local post office is one of the best conservation investments on the market today. The Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp is one of the largest and most successful single efforts in North America to insure the future of wildlife."

Prechal noted that all revenue from the $5 stamp, required of duck hunters over 16 years of age, goes directly into purchase of land for waterfowl nesting, resting and wintering areas. Since 1934 the program has purchased over two million acres of wetlands and other habitat upon which more than 160 species of birds and many mammals and fish depend.

It's All Outdoors
By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

For thousands of Nebraskan hunters, next Saturday is the day of days. The one which comes around only once a year and is viewed with the anticipation of a four-year-olds birthday or better.

Nov. 2 is pheasant and quail season opener. At 15 minutes before sunrise, the booming of shotguns and the yelling at hunting dogs will echo across the farmlands.

But don't get too excited. The birds aren't going to be so plentiful this year. Spotty concentrations will prove me wrong to some, but the majority of the upland game bird hunters aren't going to limit out without considerable effort and/or some good dogs.

Bird numbers are down statewide, but Game and Parks Commission officials have remained optimistic. Having done a little field checking on my own, I haven't been all that impressed with the five rooster pheasants seen all summer long.

Part of the reasoning for poor bird numbers would have to be credited to the harsh winter weeks we experienced last year. The remaining blame will have to go to the dwindling cover as more and more wooded draws, weedy fencerows and waterways are tilled for crop production.

Efforts Being Made

One state and several regional organizations are picking up the ball for a head-knocking fight to save what wildlife habitat we can.

The Game and Parks Commission, making much of its bread and butter through wildlife interests and pursuits, will be sponsoring a statewide Habitat Conference Feb. 15-16 in Lincoln. Federal, state and local agencies, groups and clubs will be invited to attend and participate in the two-day workshop on ways to save and improve wildlife habitat.

Three of the state's Natural Resource Districts, Middle Missouri, Lewis and Clark, and Lower Elkhorn, are already involved with programs to provide financial incentives to farmers who will leave wildlife plots untouched.

And through the assistance of those three NRDs, the Northeast portion of Nebraska was labeled the only region in the state to record an increase in pheasant numbers through spring and summer call counts. The NRD programs have taken over for federal set-aside acre programs which are now defunct due to lack of Congressional support.

Several other NRDs are viewing similar set-aside acre programs for future implementation. This may be the only means of saving wildlife habitat on private lands in the future, that is, providing the farmers volunteer for the program.

Another Conservation Measure

Another conservationist measure to keep in mind come Nov. 2 is Conservation Day at the third annual Silver Creek Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt.

Dr. Bruce Cowgill, a past winner of the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Conservationist of the Year Award, initiated the three-day affair at Silver Creek to impress upon the public that hunting and conservation do go hand-in-hand.

The townsfolk of Silver Creek open their doors on the Thursday before pheasant opener and provide art exhibits, youth poster and essay contests, special luncheons for teams of celebrities, and host trapshoots, archery contests and all else imaginable for the hunting/conservationist public.

The Grand National kicks off Thursday night with a racoon hunt, and ends Saturday night with the closing banquet. This year the Nov. 2 hunt for pheasants and quail will also be open for the first time to four-member teams from the public. Hunters must furnish their own shells and pieces to hunt and entries must be picked up prior to the Saturday hunt.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — Lou Carter ran for 180 yards and a crucial fourth period touchdown to lead 12th ranked Maryland past North Carolina State 20-10 Saturday to make the Terps first Atlantic Coast Conference title a virtual certainty.

Safety Bob Smith's second interception of a pass by the Wolfpack's Dave Buckley at the start of the final period set up a game-deciding Maryland scoring drive highlighted by a 35 yard Bob Avellini to Alan Bloomingdale pass and Carter's six yard TD run to make it 20-10.

State had tied the game 10-10 after an 80-yard drive at the outset of the second half when Buckley passed to his brother, Don, for 46 yards to put State at the Maryland 14 and then passed one yard to B.J. Lyttle for the score.

Maryland, 5-2 overall but undefeated in the AAC, would have to lose two conference games and the nearest challenger, North Carolina, would have to win three to prevent the Terps from winning the title and an undoubted bowl bid.

Prep Panorama

By Randy York

You want to host the Nebraska high school football playoffs next year? Try building a domed stadium. You'd be a cinch to lure them.

As preposterous as it sounds, that's the luxury Iowa preps will enjoy next year with all 1975 state championship games scheduled at Northern Iowa University's new Uni-Dome in Cedar Falls.

According to Iowa High School Athletic Association executive secretary Bernie Saggau, prep fans will welcome 70 degree temperatures inside the new facility.

"People may complain about the 100-mile or so drive up there," Saggau admitted, "but by the end of football season, it gets mighty darn cold in Iowa. Besides, football attendance is usually down by November anyway."

That's precisely what scares Nebraska officials most about launching into its playoff system next year. No matter how super the matchup in a state championship game, inclement weather could spell attendance and corresponding financial doom.

Nebraska School Activities Association executive secretary Les Chamberlin predicts his group will vote to split Cornhusker state playoff sites.

Could Clash With Cornhuskers

"This would follow the pattern which seems to work best in other states," Chamberlin observes. "If you would set them all up for Lincoln, your dates might end up clashing with a Nebraska home game and that would be disastrous."

Actually, Iowa's Saggau prefers a centralized playoff site although his state's playoffs next month will be conducted at four different sites.

Previous Iowa championship contests were staged at the University of Iowa's stadium in Iowa City. But the Hawkeyes are scheduled at home this season on the same weekend of the Iowa playoffs.

Drake's stadium in Des Moines also is being used that weekend and Saggau ruled out the possibility of using Iowa State's Clyde Williams Field, in its last year as home of the Cyclones.

"Sure, we'll get less people to the games at four different sites, but what can we do?" asks Saggau. "It's a bad situation."

Chamberlin expresses concern that a city such as Lincoln would not support lower class football playoff games as well as it does state basketball tournament games.

The feeling here though is that Lincoln would be an excellent host for a state championship football week. Eight-man and Class D games on a Thursday, the two Class C games on a Friday and the Classes A and B games on Saturday could make an interesting playoff package.

If that particular Saturday should collide with a Nebraska home game, the 3-day schedule could be moved up to a Wednesday-Thursday-Friday championship event. Granted, it could fail, but if it were promoted as the basketball tournament is, it's worth a chance.

Finishing up with observations on high school cross country from Don Morran, former Creighton Prep and Nebraska standout half-miler now assisting in coaching the Cornhusker track team:

Cross Country Changes Needed

Morran believes a structural change for cross country across the state is in order.

"The season's far too short," he maintains. "I think the season should be lengthened about a month, but the early competition should be scrapped in favor of more training."

"The way it is now," he points out, "kids are starting one week and the next week running in some rather major meets. I'm in favor of using dual meets as development meets and not running in major meets until you've had a chance to train for them six or seven weeks."

"You want to maximize training and rest, too," adds Morran. "Lengthening the season would also create less layoff between cross country and the start of outdoor track season. A lot of states are lengthening the season for those reasons."

Morran, who attended Friday's state cross country meet at Kearney, calls Class A winner Pat Colburn of Creighton Prep "the best distance prospect ever to come out of Nebraska."

"His cardio-vascular system is fantastic. His leg speed is also superior. He doesn't waste much. He's awfully smooth," Morran says of Colburn.

Although Morran is reluctant to predict Colburn times for track next spring, he allows "a 4:12 mile is certainly not out of the question. He's also capable of a 9:10 in the 2-mile, maybe even 9 minutes. The problem is he'll be running alone all season. No one's going to keep up with him."

The Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets, forced to play the entire second half without injured starting quarterback Rudy Allen, turned in their finest defensive effort of the season Saturday to upset previously unbeaten Tulane, 27-7.

Allen ran and passed Georgia Tech to a 13-7 lead before leaving the game five plays before the end of the first half when he was hurt while making an 11-yard run. While he was in the game, Allen gained 140 yards rushing and passing and scored the Jackets' only first half touchdown on a two-yard plunge on the second play of the second period.

Georgia Tech, now 4-4 for the season, took the lead early in the game on a 29-yard field goal by Danny Smith but Tulane, now 5-1, jumped ahead late in the period on a two-yard plunge by Steve Treuting.

Patricettes Grab Season Opener
Wahoo — The John F. Kennedy women's basketball team swept a weekend doubleheader from the Cathedral Falcons of Gallup, New Mexico Friday and Saturday to open their season.

Gail Altrenholz and Dea Martin led the Patricettes with 12 points each, as JFK raced to a 57-30 victory Saturday night.

Cathedral, which had dropped a 53-40 decision Friday night to J.F.K., was led by Julie Simpson's 19.

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Rob Fick threw an eight-yard screen pass to halfback Ed Donovan with 17 seconds left in the game Saturday to lift Iowa to a 14-12 upset of Illinois.

The winning pass came on a fourth down and goal situation after the Hawks began a drive from the Illinois 49 with 4:08 left. After two unsuccessful plays from the three-yard line and a five yard penalty against the Hawks, Fick hit Donovan in the left flat.

NATIONAL

The victory boosted Iowa's record to 3-4 over all and 2-2 in the Big Ten. Illinois, which whipped Iowa 50-0 last year, fell to 4-2-1 on the year and 2-1-1 in the Big Ten.

Twice earlier in the last quarter, Illinois turned back Iowa drives deep in their territory and appeared to have the Fick-to-Donovan touchdown. Illinois, after spotting a 7-0 lead, cut the gap to 7-3 on a 50-yard field goal by sophomore Dan Beaver with 5:44 left in the first half. The field goal broke the stadium record of 49 yards set by Dirk Krypt of Michigan State in 1973.

Illinois went ahead four minutes later when quarterback Jeff Hollenbach hit tight end Joe Smalzer on a 19-yard scoring pass. That score was set up by a 26-yard pass from Hollenbach to end Jeff Chrystal.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Versatile quarterback Charlie Baggett ran for his fifth and sixth touchdowns of the season and tailback Rich Baes scored two more Saturday to propel Michigan State to a 31-7 Big Ten victory over Purdue.

It was the Spartans' first win in their last five outings, as the offense overcame a bad case of fumbleitis and managed to get on the scoreboard in the first quarter for the first time all year.

The first quarter jinx was broken just 3:12 into the game as Baes scored on a five yard run. The 5-foot-9, 180-pound sophomore scored a second touchdown in the third quarter on a three yard pitchoff play, to give him six for the season.

Baggett, who completed three of five passes for 63 yards and gained a total of 74 on the ground before he was replaced in the fourth quarter, scored on runs of 17 and four yards.

Chess Game Ends in Draw

Moscow (AP) — Anatoly Karpov and Viktor Korchnoi agreed to a draw in the 16th game of their world chess challengers finals Saturday after 67 moves.

Karpov leads in the 24-game series 2-0 and there have been 14 draws. The winner gains the right to play Bobby Fischer of the United States for the world title.

The 16th game was adjourned Friday night with Karpov, playing white, holding a pawn advantage. When the game resumed Karpov captured another black pawn and then exchanged his bishop for Korchnoi's rook.

That left Karpov with a two-pawn advantage and a rook to Korchnoi's knight and bishop. Some experts thought he had winning chances, but Korchnoi was able to equalize the game and a draw was agreed.

The next game is scheduled for Monday.

Flag Finals This Week

Flag Football heads into its final week of action with semifinal games on Monday and the Husker Bowl, the championship tilt, set for Tuesday.

The City Recreational program is divided into two leagues. The winners of those two leagues play in the Husker Bowl for the city championship and that game will be at 7 p.m. on Tuesday at Elks Field.

League champions will be determined Monday, also at Elks Field.

University Place League playoff game will start the action Monday with Lincoln Electric System meeting Misty Lounge at 7 p.m. Misty Lounge recently won the Misty Lounge tournament.

The Elks Field League playoff will follow at 8 p.m. with the Salem Oilers playing Red Rooster.

Jr. Olympic Harrier Program Set

Hastings (AP) — The Midwest Association of the AAU will sponsor a Junior Olympic cross-country program for boys and girls this year.

It will be held in November and not be in conflict with the high school cross-country program, according to the Rev. Patrick O'Byrne, Midwestern chairman.

"I have checked this out with the Nebraska School Activities Association and as long as the athlete competes unattached wearing no school equipment or representing no school there is no problem," said Father O'Byrne.

The age group events are: Nine and under boys and girls, one mile; 10-11 boys and girls, 1 1/4 miles; 12-13 boys and girls, 1 1/2 miles; 14-15 boys and girls, 2 miles; 16-17 boys, 3 miles; and 16-17 girls, 2 miles.

There will be seven qualifying areas for the event. For more information concerning the area meets, athletes are asked to contact the chairman in the area nearest them.

Area chairmen are: 1, Dean Talbot, Ainsworth; 2, Jerry Hepp, Beatrice; 3, Ike Friend, Hastings; 4, George Haun, Kimball; 5, John Stevens, Omaha; 6, Verne Parmelee, Sioux City, Iowa; and 7, Jim Tenopir, McCook.

Milford, Cooke Work Together

Los Angeles (UPI) — When Jack Kent Cooke hired genial Jake Milford as general manager of the Los Angeles Kings last Dec. 1, he didn't get a yes man.

Milford asked for — and received — a one-year contract from the Kings' flamboyant owner before the National Hockey League season got underway.

"I'll have to admit that we don't agree on everything," Los Angeles' general manager disclosed, "but maybe that's a healthy situation."

"He is very dominant and he's probably more difficult than most people in sports. He does have a good knowledge of hockey, though. So when he does argue with you on hockey, you have to listen."

Milford helped engineer a trade with his old club, the New York Rangers, last season, which brought the Kings wingers Mike Murphy and Tommy Williams and defenseman

NU Spikers Win Three

Lawrence, Kan. — Nebraska's girls' volleyball team won three of eight matches here Saturday morning in the Kansas University Invitational Tournament.

Paced by Vicki Ossenkop and Jan Zink, the Huskers beat Missouri, 15-11 and 15-9; split with Drake, 10-15 and 15-9; and lost to Southwest Missouri State, 15-10 and 15-2 and to Kansas University, 15-8 and 15-5.

The Roberts girls' volleyball team, a top City Recreation team, downed the University of Nebraska Junior Varsity girls in exhibition play Saturday.

Roberts came from behind to take the first game, 16-14, and won the second game easily, 15-6.

Sheldon Kannegiesser.

The Kings made the NHL playoffs for the first time in five years and they're off to a fast start this year.

Milford was a scout for the Rangers before he joined the Kings as Cooke's assistant general manager. He moved up after Larry Regan resigned.

Milford was the general manager of the Omaha Knights while the Knights were under the sponsorship of the New York Rangers.

"I did have second thoughts about working for Mr. Cooke," the Kings' GM said. "I discussed it with people I'd worked with before and they assured me I was probably the type of person who would get along with him."

"And I can't complain. They've treated me well at the Forum."

During World War II, Milford flew bombing missions over Nazi Germany with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

"Maybe that's why I roll with the punches so well now," he smiled. "What the heck, I had a lot more problems than I have now during the war years. Losing a hockey game is real hard on you but it's not the end of everything."

"I know I have my ideas and I assert what I have to say with Mr. Cooke. I am never nervous with the man. If I was nervous, I would have a terrible time."

Milford said he works closely with the Kings' Coach, Bob Pulford. Pulford is in his third year at the helm of the Los Angeles hockey team.

"We're good for one another," remarked Milford. "He's not outgrowing and I am. But don't let that fool you."

"People may think he (Pulford) doesn't talk too much but he talks plenty between periods. The big thing is he likes to win and he's fair with everybody. I hope we continue on for many years."

Mrs. Martin, above, makes up pages as sun rays glint off type. Right, she takes a few quiet moments in her office to skim advertising mat books.

Alma — The Adams Weekly Globe's Mrs. Everything

By Jan Sack

Adams — In this small town newspaper office, lit with bare bulbs and stacked with old newspapers, proofs and galleys of lead, the Linotype clanks under the hands of Alma Martin.

Mrs. Martin has been involved with newspapers about as long as she can remember.

Her grandfather, L.A. Varner, a lawyer and surveyor in Johnson County, took over the mortgage of the Sterling Sun in 1887 and was editor until 1900.

Her father, E.W. (Ed) Varner, learned the printers trade at Sterling and bought the Adams Weekly Globe in 1907.

She started helping her dad with the Globe in 1933 and leased the paper from him in 1946. Since the first week in May of that year, Alma Martin has been The Adams Weekly Globe.

"That's Me"

She does everything: sells ads, sets type, proofs galleys, makes up pages, runs the press. Alma chuckles when someone from a larger paper calls and asks for the sports editor. "That's me," she replies. Another will want the advertising manager. "That's me," she repeats. Or a caller will want the society editor. Again, "That's me."

She does have help from her husband Kenneth and another man who lift the cases, the frames holding ready type, from the makeup area to the press. Kenneth, who is assistant to the director of Green Thumb, also helps fold and mail the papers in his extra time.

But The Adams Weekly Globe with its letterpress operation is becoming a part of American history. Hot metal has given way to cold type or photocomposition. The Globe is one of 43 letterpress operations left in Nebraska. She has to order engravings from Ord.

Mrs. Martin talks about the Globe with enthusiasm, but getting her to talk about herself is about as easy as trying to catch a fish with bare hands.

Instead, one of her favorite subjects is her father, an avid sportsman who won the national trapshooting championship in 1912 and took the state title several times. Ed Varner became the 30th member of the Nebraska Sports Hall of Fame in September 1960.

The late Ed Varner had a strong influence on all his children. Mrs. Martin likes to tell the story about her four brothers. "Dad made them all learn the printing trade and they all vowed they'd never use it. Would you believe all of them were printers in Colorado? That's where the money was," she laughed.

Of the four boys, only Keith survives. He's with the Jefferson County Herald in Denver.

But it was her dad's only daughter, who chose to stay at home and carry on in his footsteps.

Says the peppy woman who doesn't look 62 plus, "I love to operate a linotype if it works well." Not only can she operate the machine but services it most of the time.

When there's something she can't fix, she calls Bob Fuller of Lincoln, formerly a linotype operator with the Journal-Star Printing Co. "Fortunately, I don't need him very often," she says.

"No woman would do this unless they were born and raised in it," she remarked. Mrs. Martin has known only one other woman linotype operator. She was in Colorado. But there have been several women linotype operators at the Journal-Star Printing Co. over the years. She chuckles when referring to their only child, Marilyn. "She never did help me. She didn't want to get her hands dirty. I don't think she even helped fold papers."

The Association

Asked what she likes best about being editor, publisher, Mrs. Everything of the newspaper, Alma replies: "The association with people. People are so good about bringing in their notes." But she adds, "When somebody new moves into town, I have to educate them."

She relies on her correspondents for much of the news but makes some calls of her own on Monday mornings. Alma compliments the business people in Adams for their good support. "I don't hound them for advertising." She really doesn't have time for that.

"I'm so proud of Adams. It's a prosperous community. There are few run-down houses and there are many new homes," she says.

As much as Mrs. Martin enjoys being a newspaper woman, it's getting to be too much for one person and she would like to retire. "Kenneth has been after me for years to give it up. And maybe for my own sake I should do it."

Although she's had several prospective buyers, what they really want is her subscription list.

Each week she prints 725 papers and that's hard work when the 1925 Babcock press will print only two pages at a time. The average Globe runs four pages and several times this year she has put out six pages.

Tight Rein

Alma runs her newspaper with a tight rein. "When a subscription runs out, they're cut off. It doesn't take them long to come in and pay the bill," she says.

"Ninety-five per cent of the people in town take it and those who don't go to the neighbors and read it," she says matter of factly. That's pretty good circulation considering Adams has a population of 463, based on the 1970 census.

In the 28 years she's been running the Globe, two stories stand out in her mind. One was when a man was killed at the railroad tracks in town a number of years ago. "That really shook me up," she says.

The other occurred last December when a fire broke out in the barber shop and damaged the building next door. "It didn't look like much and I was surprised at the amount of damage," she said.

Most of the news in the Globe wouldn't be printed in a daily paper. But Mrs. Martin knows her readers and says they get the world and national news elsewhere. If something really outstanding happens, she will note it with a paragraph, usually on page one. She mentioned the moon landing and the resignation of former President Richard Nixon.

Mrs. Martin is leaving a legacy to the people of Adams. She has given the Adams library bound volumes of the Globe since 1907 and will do so until she retires. "There's one restriction," she says. "They are never to leave the library."

But time is running short for The Adams Weekly Globe under Alma Martin. The machinery is old and securing parts is increasingly difficult.

She could retire and find other things to occupy her time. But the Globe would probably die. It has been published for 81 years, 67 of them by her family. Undoubtedly, that's the reason Alma Martin, six times a grandmother and twice a great-grandmother, stays on the job.

Step by step, the weekly Globe takes shape. Left, Mrs. Martin molds lead lines on her Linotype. Middle, the lead lines are placed in the chases and, right, the nearly 50-year-old Babcock press prints the finished product.

Nan Graf Teaches Life Appreciation

By Linda Ulrich

Nan Graf loves life. If you love life, you will love Nan Graf. That's bad logic but good sense if you have an appreciation of those who possess a strong life force. And Nan Graf does.

You know that because she once began a sentence, "If I ever have to die..."

And because she recently wrote her father to thank him for giving her an appreciation of life.

And because she knows that one of her "flaws" is that she is sometimes intolerant of intolerance. But she's working on that.

And because her master's thesis in 1964 was on the women in Beowulf but she isn't active in the women's movement since she is, as she says, too busy living it.

'Zooming Un-Yogic'

And because she zooms around — without a car — teaching English at Nebraska Wesleyan University and yoga at the YMCA, YWCA and First National Bank. ("Zooming is," she laughs, "a very un-yogic thing to do.")

And because she reads with the same intensity that she lives, turning herself a "karmic book salesman." Which means she doesn't get much of a commission but she tries to sell people on books as a means of "opening your windows to the world."

If she has an ideological mother, it is Simone de Beauvoir.

If she has an ideological father it is the late Saul Alinsky.

She got to know — and love — them through their books, such as Alinsky's "Reveille for Radicals" and Beauvoir's "Prime of Life."

She got to know Alinsky even better when she attended an Industrial Areas Foundation Training Institute headed by him two weeks before his death.

Nan and a group of Chicanos from San Antonio, Texas, worked with Alinsky to discover "how we could change San Antonio to benefit the Chicano."

Of Alinsky, Nan says, "I admired him for years. He was a dedicated American. His way of showing love for America was to criticize and change, trying to make ideals fit reality."

Untapped Diversity

Alinsky reinforced Nan's belief that "there is a marvelous diversity in the U.S. that we don't fully tap... we need to unify through diversity and difference."

Although his name was practically synonymous with radical, Nan said, "his aim was trying to change within the system. He genuinely loved all people."

Nan believes that "everything has carryover value." Thus, Alinsky's classroom has carried over into her own as she endorses his idea of student and teacher learning by exploring and discovering together.

She tries to create a classroom atmosphere in which students feel free to express themselves, to stretch their minds, to learn beyond the boundaries of the course.

If she has a teaching philosophy it's this: "I like to see students come to grips — through books — with 'what does it mean to be a human being?'"; "what does it mean to me?"

Above all, Nan hopes her course has a catalytic effect so students read literature way beyond the end of the literature course.

Learned More

"When I first started teaching I thought I had all these things I was going to teach my students but really I've learned a whale of a lot more from my students," she observed.

She teaches yoga, in addition to English, because yoga has the ability to give one "a heightened awareness of life," she said.

There are 149 definitions of yoga in an old Sanskrit dictionary, she said, but to her it means "union of body, mind and spirit... relating all body parts to the whole body."

There are three types of yoga, Nan explained. The first, hatha, is basically exercises; and is what she teaches, the second, raja, is meditation, which she is studying; and the third is karma, the yoga of selfless giving.

Yoga has made her, Nan says, "quieter and gentler than I once was."

Not only that, her four children, ages 13 to 21, have a mother that can do yoga headstands in the kitchen. As far as mothers go, you could do worse.

Quotable Quotes

By The Associated Press

"My life is supposed to be quieter now that I'm not doing the weekly show, but I'm busier than I have ever been." Lucille Ball, who gave up her weekly television series in favor of specials this year.

"If I can just keep myself active and stay well, I'll be doing this for a long time. Sometimes, I feel God was thinking about all the lonely elderly people and He said, 'I guess we'll get Cora to do something about that.'" Cora Dudley, 84, who runs a volunteer program for senior citizens in Miami.

"Sometimes I think that the past is much more interesting than the present." Hannah Joyce Massie, who spends 40 hours a week in a security vault doing research at Wright Patterson Air Force Base.

"I read a lot. Books. Yeah, got a whole bunch of junk in here. I just don't like it in here. All that medicine I have to take which I don't like and I have to take." Bobbie Archer, a 9-year-old, on leaving the special plastic-enclosed hospital room in Albany, N.Y., where she spent five months.

"Evidently it is meant for me to be a singer. It probably never would have happened if I had not had to really get myself together. Things have a habit of working out, even things that are tragic." Syreeta, former wife of singer Stevie Wonder, now launching her own singing career, in a New York interview.

Times Have Changed, But Basic Philosophies Stand Tried, True

Change: Not All Good, Nor All Bad

By Susan Krelfel
"You've come a long way, baby," must have been coined with people like Bertha Jensen, Goldie Thorpe and Rose Flynn in mind.
Quiet-spoken, yet determined, these three educators must be among the early backers of women's liberation.

Times have changed since Mrs. Thorpe earned $90 a month as principal of Panama schools and her husband earned $120 as superintendent.

Times have changed since they were among a minority working women to a time when the majority is in the job market.

These women aren't the "footstomper," as Mrs. Thorpe labeled some liberation supporters. She says they're the supporters always there to lighten the burden.

Mrs. Thorpe and Miss Jensen both feel the footstomper have performed a service to women. As Mrs. Thorpe said, "They have gotten a lot done. They have attracted attention and gotten results."

Equal Opportunity

Because of their interest in equal opportunity for women, the three are active members in the three local Business and Professional Women's (BPW) clubs. Mrs. Thorpe is a member of the Lincoln BPW, Miss Jensen, the Lincoln Axis BPW, and Mrs. Flynn, the Capital BPW.

The national group, boasting 180,000 members and internationally 250,000 in 50 countries, is noting its 50th year.

Strong backers of the Equal Rights Amendment, the BPW has allocated $251,000 toward its passage and sponsored lobbyists, and the national president has spoken to legislative sessions and hearings.

Also, Miss Jensen noted, Mrs. Ford and Anne Armstrong have both expressed support of ERA.

Miss Jensen, who holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and a master of arts degree from Columbia University at New York, said, "Change is neither all good nor all bad. You just have to choose what is right for you and do something about it."

Motherhood

And that's what they've done. Mrs. Thorpe and Mrs. Flynn both chose rearing a family and then pursuing careers as the children grew older. Both felt it important to perform the duties of motherhood during the children's younger years. "That's an important part of being a mother," Mrs. Thorpe stated. Times weren't always too easy staying home with the kids. Short on finances, Mrs. Thorpe said, "I made blouses out of shirt tails."

Goldie Thorpe

Bertha Jensen

Rose Flynn

Mrs. Flynn added, "I felt that it was very important to stay at home while the children were young. I can't ever remember having a babysitter come in."

In another observation, Mrs. Flynn said, "Parents give their children too much money. I believe in children working and being busy . . . learning to work early."

"You miss so much if you're not around when children are little . . . They can be a laugh a day," Mrs. Flynn continued. She frowns on the idea of some women seeking jobs to get away from their children.

Many Changes

Mrs. Flynn reflected there have been many changes since she began her career the most notable — more women working. "I believe that if a woman has a lot of ability she should pursue it," she observed.

Times have changed, but not the philosophies of Mrs. Thorpe, Miss Jensen and Mrs. Flynn. They continue their careers and their lifestyles. They believe strongly in the BPW and its purposes as do well-known members such as Shirley Marsh, Anne Armstrong, Sarah Cunningham and Martha Griffiths.

And they believe in the BPW collect which begins:

"Keep us, O God, from pettiness; . . .
Let us be large in thought, in word, in deed."

Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking . . ."

Birth at Home Fits Lifestyle Of Movement Back-to-Nature

By Linda Kramer

San Francisco (AP) — The midwife carried her satchel into the rough-hewn cabin in the northern California hills. A woman in labor lay on a bed. Her husband heated water in the kitchen.

As the labor progressed, the midwife started to belly dance while her assistant beat a drum.

The husband came to soothe his wife, helping her breathing and contractions fall into rhythm with the dancing midwife.

Slowly the child was born, without the help of drugs or forceps or any trappings of modern technology. They named him Bam-bi.

This experience, described by a midwife who was present, is part of a growing home birth revival. Those involved attribute the renewed popularity of home birth to the back-to-nature movement and to a desire for a birth experience free of the routine and sterility of hospitals.

Needless Risk

Although home birth is legal, most doctors consider it a needless risk and refuse to attend women at home. So young couples seek out lay midwives, who aren't legal.

Midwifery has been illegal in California since 1949. Most midwives can be contacted only through the underground grapevine of counter-culture youths. Last month, however, Gov. Ronald Reagan signed a bill which will permit registered nurses to be certified as nurse midwives. Lay midwives will remain outlawed in California as in 16 other states which permit nurses to be midwives.

Northern California has become the center of the nation's home birth movement with lay midwives in attendance. Sixteen other states permit midwifery under colonial or early 19th Century laws never removed from the books. But in most of these states — among them New York, Oklahoma, Texas and Washington — few lay midwives are found.

Seventeen states prosecute both lay and nurse midwives.

Eliza and Steve Robinson tried unsuccessfully to find a midwife in San Francisco. Then friends told them about the Berkeley Birth Group across the bay. The group includes a lay midwife, nurse-midwife, an apprentice midwife and a pediatrician, all operating out of a one-story bungalow.

Robinson, sitting with his arm around

Bill and Annie Holmes pose with son, Jason, who was born at home.

Eliza during a recent visit to the birth group, said they never considered going to a hospital "because hospitals are places for sick people and they don't do babies right."

Open Way

"Having a baby at home fits in with our whole life-style," Robinson said. "There's no reason to depend on the capitalistic system if you can do something outside it and can do it in a more relaxed and friendly, open way."

On a couch near Robinson in the wood-beamed living room used as a waiting room, Annie and Bill Holmes waited to see the pediatrician for their new son's first checkup.

"We wanted the baby right after he was born," said Mrs. Holmes, 21, as she nursed 12-day-old Jason. "A hospital told me they'd put the baby in a warming bed at least four hours before I could hold him. And we wanted midwives; they're more personal."

Holmes said he found home birth let him participate more actively. "I got to cut the cord," he said with paternal pride.

Successful

The Holmes' stocked up on towels, warm blankets and hot water. The Berkeley Birth Group says the delivery was one of about 25 they have assisted at since January and all were successful. Forty pregnant women currently attend their natural childbirth clinics and prenatal care sessions.

The clinics and prenatal care sessions are legal, only the actual practice of midwifery is subject to prosecution.

Childless Couples Find Fulfilled Lifestyles

Decision a Matter of Responsibility

By Jane Menninga
"First comes love.
"Then comes marriage.
"Then comes mommy and daddy with the baby carriage."

Grade schoolers may still be jumping rope to that age-old chant, but not all contemporary couples are leaping into the lifestyle it suggests.

A generation ago, all hope was tossed out the window if you weren't married by 22 years of age. And if the baby carriage wasn't filled by your 25th birthday, the entire neighborhood knew you had to be sterile.

Yes, the pitter patter of at least 12 little feet was more than expected. It was your duty.

Even though parenthood is still the norm, the 70s bring a new concept: voluntary childlessness.

No Baby Carriage

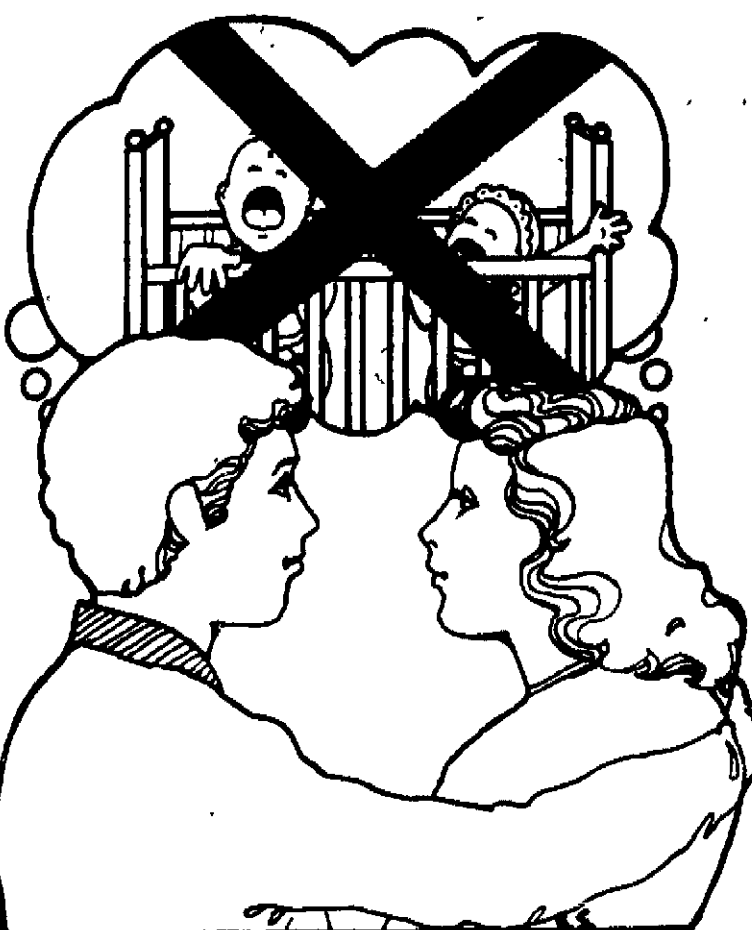

For the first time to any great extent, marital partners are questioning the silent assumption that they must bear children. And Ron Daly, extension family life specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says an increasing number are sticking to the love and marriage, but leaving the carriage in the baby store.

Take the Barrys — Ann, 34, Bob, 37 — of 2410 Jameson North for example.

Three years ago and after being married for 10 years, they made the definite decision never to have children. She had a masters degree and was teaching English. He had spent time in the military and graduated from college.

"By that time we had filled our lives with so many things, we didn't want to make the change," Mrs. Barry, an English teacher at Lincoln East High, said. "Neither of us felt we could do our home job and career job at the same time and give enough time to each."

The children you're bringing into the world must be considered, too, she said, adding that "if we're gone all the time with careers, what kind of a life is it going to be for them."

Allen McDowell, 36, and wife Judy, 33, 2924 So. 26th, made the same decision five years ago.

McDowell, vice president of Alexander and Alexander Inc., said: "When we first got married we felt we should both work. We enjoyed that life. We decided not to make the sacrifice of having children or change our lifestyle."

Numerous Reasons

Daly said he has met up with numerous other reasons for couples taking the child-free route.

There is a definite emergence of women taking a more serious look at other professions aside from motherhood, he said. Then there are some solo cases that question their ability to be a good parent or hold a fear of bringing children into today's troubled world.

But even though attitudes are changing, parent and peer pressures against voluntary childlessness are still real, Daly said.

Mrs. Barry said that, at first, she would evade the "When's the baby coming?" question because she was a little embarrassed.

"But then Bob and I realized it was our own business. Sure the parents were a little disappointed. And friends kept telling us how much we were missing and how sorry we'd be.

"Now it's become a mutual respect thing. We respect their choice to have children and hope they respect ours for not."

Societal Pressures

Steve White, Lincoln Planned Parenthood director, said that aside from society's pressures to have children, child-free couples must look harder at their relationships all the time, because that's all they have.

"Without children, there is more emphasis on them as people in the relationship. Kids can be a good draining mechanism for a relationship. You don't have to face each other. All energies are drained off through the kids."

He and Susan, his wife for nine years, have also decided never to have children.

"I don't see a child as a necessary thing in terms of how I want to live my life. I don't want the responsibility," he said.

But as all others interviewed, White emphatically said the decision was not because he didn't like children.

"I really dig kids," White said. "I just don't want any of my own."

New Group

White said he was a believer in a new group growing up in America, now 2,000 strong, called NON (National Organization of Non-Parents).

The group is working for acceptance of the couple in a long-term relationship who have opted not to have children.

Even a local pediatrician, who makes a living from children, called the questioning of parenthood a healthy attitude.

"Sometimes people have children for all the wrong reasons," the doctor said. "Proving manhood or womanhood, keeping up with the Joneses, showing the world you can get married and can have kids and thinking that's what you should do are the wrong reasons."

Mastectomy Doesn't Affect Femininity Qualities at All

Dear Ann Landers: Just one more word, please, to "Too Late and Sorry," the unmarried female who was mad at her doctor because he removed her cancerous breast. She said, "Who would want half a woman? Now I'm doomed to spinsterhood."

I'm a coordinator for the Florida Division of the American Cancer Society and I direct the "Reach To Recovery" program. Our volunteer group of dedicated women includes many who married after mastectomies.

Doesn't "Too Late" realize that a woman need not be double-breasted in order to be lovable? This is how she separates the men from the boys. To a real man, a woman's being single-breasted or flat altogether doesn't matter. Who'd want a man to whom a mastectomy would make a difference? If he really cared he'd be so grateful she had life-saving surgery that he'd love her even more.

We single-breasted ladies have a little trick of our own. We don't let a man appraise our femininity on the basis of our single-breastedness. We appraise his masculinity based on his reaction. You'd be surprised how many gals have found wonderful men in this manner. It's foolproof.

Marie Maxon
Dear Marie: Thanks for a wonderfully upbeat letter. It should give a lift to the single-breasted and double-breasted alike.

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please use your column to educate the average person regarding one of the "niceties" of social interchange? I refer to the casual question, in the presence of others, "And how are your children?"

I happen to have a son who, after several years of disgracing his father and me, straightened around and returned to the world of reality.

Recently an acquaintance asked, in the presence of a large group, "And how is Andrew?" Two years ago I would have been mortified (he was in jail). Now I am able to say, "Andrew is fine."

He has a good job and is getting along beautifully.

There were other parents present when she asked — parents whose children are still in trouble — or have left home and haven't been heard from in months. The comparison stung a little.

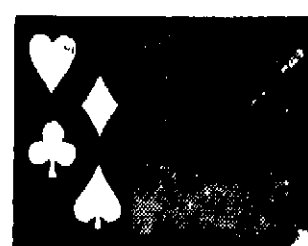

Close friends know about Andrew's problems. Casual, acquaintances should not risk embarrassing a parent. If people want to talk about their children they will do so without being asked. Please print this.

Sensitive
Dear Sen: Talk about signs of change in our culture!!! Now it's "risky" to ask about one's children because they might be in jail.

Sorry you had problems with Andrew, and it's good to know he has straightened around, but it seems to me that inquiring about one's family should be a fairly safe subject. I'll pass the word anyway.

Dear Mr. Corn:
I was South and this was the bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♦	Dbl.	Redbl.

After West redoubled, he said to my partner "that lets you out."

Can West redouble before my partner has spoken? Should North bid or pass ignoring the remark?

Point of Order
Birmingham

Answer: West's redouble was a legal bid made at a legal opportunity to bid. However, his remark, like all extraneous remarks during the auction, was questionable. During the bidding no words other than legal bids should be spoken to prevent conveying illegal information to partner. In this case, it seems that West was being "playful" but his remark was still uncalled for. North could have bid or passed as North wished and ignored the remark completely.

Dear Mr. Corn:
Please clarify the meaning of North's double in this bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♥	1♠	Pass	Pass
Dbl.

No Penalty
San Francisco

Answer: North's double was for takeout. It means: "Partner, since you've passed to one spade I know you do not have much. However, I have a good hand and we should compete. Please bid something. I have hearts and support for the unbid suits."

MONDAY, OCTOBER 28

Your birthday today: An urge for personal growth filters into all phases of your daily life. Changes in the first half of the year force further readjustments, many of which are unexpected. Relationships take on new dimensions; your real feelings emerge and determine the outcome, no matter how illogical.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Good sense in carrying out existing arrangements is preferable to chasing after larger, would-be deals. Research, fact-finding errands; brief travels are favored.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Go ahead on your own with something that doesn't require immediate cooperation. Let associates take their time coming into the field.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: No work pattern is exempt from brief periods of confusion, readjustment. Get back on the track by patient, persistent and small moves.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: It's a catch-as-catch-can day. Avoid speculation, overbuying. Your imagination is lively and leads to extravagant remarks that upset your friends. Be alert!

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Continued exploration of pending negotiations reveals helpful information. Call in loans and anything that is owed you.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: In-laws and relatives have conflicting viewpoints. You may as well stay near home base where you have sound knowledge of details and can trade on what you know.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: You can practically write your own ticket today. It's up to you to avoid excesses and to sidestep those of others.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Obstinate people require careful handling and a deft touch. Creative ventures move along well with moderate effort. Family ties require consideration, special care.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Your opinions carry more weight if you wait until asked for them. Meanwhile, quietly pick up loose ends, attend to neglected tasks, complete what you started.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: The ability to "turn a deaf ear" is a great asset today. However, you possibly hear something unfavorable about yourself that you should be aware of—listen, learn and grow!

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Domestic details complicate business and career just enough to inspire lasting improvements.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: For the moment, expect nobody nearby to agree with you. Select a go-it-alone project and pursue a practical course of action. Correspondence brings in interesting items.

Going Like Sixty

By Jack Smith

To age successfully would not seem to be much of a trick. Like wanting a change in weather, all you really have to do is wait and it will happen.

But, if we define successful aging as achieving something — as coping with age and mastering it, rather than letting it master you, then it is a feat.

What is the success formula? One who knows it well because he has studied hundreds of successfully aging people is Eric Pfeiffer, M.D., associate director of the Duke University Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development.

The one characteristic that is found in all the successful seniors, reports Dr. Pfeiffer, is a determination to "stay in training" for life.

Staying in training, he says, means (1) keeping up physical activity on a regular basis (2) continuing to engage in social interaction and (3) keeping emotionally and intellectually involved with current events and trends.

Happy Outlook

The process works best, he indicates, when it is purposely planned before the person reaches the half century mark. Then the person comes into seniority prepared for what it will be like and how to live with it. Consequently, he or she maintains a happy outlook and doesn't complain.

Complaints are self-defeating in that they tend to erode one's energy to cope — and, eventually, destroy one's will to do so. When a person begins to get satisfaction out of his complaints, it is time to be wary.

There are more successful seniors than one might imagine, Dr. Pfeiffer says. The majority of them do not have famous names nor do they draw headlines. But they are well known in their own communities where they have extensive contacts and participate in activities.

Successful Aging

Here are the other characteristics of the successfully aging that Dr. Pfeiffer has noted:

1. They are not just hanging on to life, they are producing — by holding jobs, by developing ideas, and-or by rendering service. They are useful — and they generate their own evidence of it.
2. They utilize their past experiences as part of a rich history upon which they can draw, not only for satisfying memories, but for helping to solve new problems.
3. They do not disengage socially. They continue to mix and mingle. They belong to groups and participate in activities. They get out in the world.
4. They do some planned physical things — such as walking, playing golf, playing a non-strenuous game of softball.
5. Probably as a result of the above, they continue to have a good time. They are cheerful, able to share a joke. And they know what's going on.

Such successful aging, says Dr. Pfeiffer, can and should be a commonplace rather than a newsworthy exception.

When the Duke University Center staged a conference on successful aging a year ago, Dr. Pfeiffer presented live models to illustrate the accomplishment.

Happiness is written on the faces of these people. It is not a for-the-press smile. It comes from inside. So the magic of a planned success formula is that the joy comes automatically.

Lincoln Mormons Add Second Ward

By Anita Fussell

If a first-century Christian bishop were to relive his life in the twentieth century, he might well be reincarnated a Mormon bishop.

Like his early church counterpart, newly appointed Bishop Blaine L. Blad will oversee a local congregation, earn his livelihood elsewhere, and keep his position for a limited number of years.

Blad's position was created this week when Lincoln's 854-member ward (congregation) of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was split into two wards, approximately 400 members each.

Joining Bishop Alvin Schiess, who continues as bishop of Ward I, Blad formerly served as a counselor to Schiess and later as an assistant — responsible for youth programs — to the stake (regional) president.

Lincoln's membership growth, said the bishops, reflects the worldwide growth of the American-born religion.

From a low of under 400 soon after Lincoln's airbase closed, the local Mormon community has more than doubled, they said.

Statewide, the Omaha area (including Council Bluffs and Bellevue) has been split into seven wards, the Nebraska City area, into two.

And today, they said, Thomas Monson, one of the 12 apostles from Salt Lake City, Utah, is in Omaha deciding how to split the 15 wards and branches of the Omaha Stake into two stakes.

Schiess and Blad credit such growth to "really great missionary effort," although observers such as the late Louis Cassels of UPI point also to the Mormons' strong home life.

"Lincoln now has four full-time missionaries and a strong group of local members spending a minimum of one night a week — or 40 hours a month — calling in homes," said Blad.

Many young Mormon men, Schiess said, give two years to their church serving without pay as missionaries. He said they work in one area an average of four to six months.

The bishops explained that local missionaries are called Seventies. Their name comes from the seventy appointed by Jesus (Luke 10:1) and sent out two by two into "every city and place" proclaiming the kingdom of God.

Church Notes

Reformation Rally Today

Dr. Lewis W. Spitz, professor of history at Stanford University in California, will speak on Luther — Man of Faith, tonight at 7:30 for the Lutheran Reformation Service at Trinity Lutheran Church, 12th and R. Special music will be provided by the Lincoln Lutheran Male Chorus and the Lutheran Youth Chorus.

Church Women United

World Community Day will be observed by Church Women United Friday from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church, 17th and F Sts.

Old-Fashioned Sunday

Senior citizens will be spotlighted next week at the First Assembly of God, 36th and R Sts. Services for the Old-Fashioned Sunday will be held at 9:45 a.m., 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Included in the day's festivities will be a choir consisting of members 60 years or older, a special quartet, Pastor Jack Glass wearing a swallowtail suit, and transportation by antique automobiles.

Crossed Ends

The Rev. Calvin Hays of Des Moines, Iowa, will climax an evangelistic crusade at Hope

A keystone of the Mormon religion is its rule by continued revelation.

Calling themselves the "restored church," Mormons abide by the revelations given to their leader — or prophet — from the time of Joseph Smith on.

And the consequences of some of those revelations have given Mormons a lot of trouble. Like polygamy was a century ago, the alleged racist policies of the Mormons have been bitterly attacked in recent times.

"It's something we live with," acknowledged Bishop Schiess. In the Mormon church, blacks cannot hold high office and never will unless the prophet receives a new revelation from the Lord, he said.

The current head of the 3½ million Mormon church is Prophet Spencer Kimball. "His personal feelings and mine have little to do with the change," commented Blad.

Recently the National Associa-

Zion Pastor Installed

The Rev. Ernest H. Lauer will be installed tonight at 7:30 as pastor of Zion United Church of Christ, 9th and D Sts.

The installation sermon will be preached by the Rev. David Jamieson, Nebraska Conference Minister. Other ministers participating in the service include the Rev. Edwin Berreth of Faith UCC, the Rev. Stephen Evans of Northeast Community Church, the Rev. Don Reuter of Nebraska City, and the Rev. Jacob Nein of Ebenezer Church.

Coming to Lincoln from an 11-year pastorate at Tipton, Iowa, Lauer said he sees his task in Lincoln as "meeting people where they are," and then helping them move toward "closer ties to the denominational structure — for their own enrichment."

Lauer and his wife, Julia, have five sons and one daughter.

Mormon Temples Not for Worship

By George Cornell

Washington (AP) — Unlike ordinary churches, the newly completed Mormon temple here is not a place for regular Sabbath worship. In fact, it and the 15 other Mormon temples around the world are kept closed on Sundays.

The rites held within them are special, singular events for the participants, distinctively observed by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"Temples are not public houses of worship," points out the church's president Spencer W. Kimball. "Temples are for sacred ordinances."

These ordinances are considered so sacred that once a Mormon temple is formally dedicated for use, as the new $15-million structure will be in November, only faithful Mormons — those approved by their bishop — may enter.

Like other Christians, Mormons have their open weekly worship services in neighborhood meeting houses — called wards — but the temple is reserved for exceptional rituals.

The Washington temple, the first in the eastern United States, is the scene for three special ceremonies intended to fit participants for heaven.

Among them are marriages for "time and all eternity," which differs from ordinary marriages in which couples pledge themselves "until death do us part."

Another exclusive service involves proxy baptisms in which members are baptized in behalf of departed ancestors, which is regarded as making it possible for them to choose eternity in heaven.

by Bob and Russ Metcalf

Theodore Roosevelt speechified this way in 1890. "Far better it is to dare mighty things, to win glorious triumphs, even though checkered by failure, than to take rank with those poor spirits who neither enjoy much nor suffer much, because they live in the gray twilight that knows not victory nor defeat." Roosevelt was one of this country's most courageous men, and he possessed the charisma which made him one of the nation's most popular presidents. Yet, his words should ring in every soul, and inspire us all — our lives should be lived to the fullest, since that is all we really have.

For Women Workshop Scheduled To Focus On Jobs

"Out of the Supermarket — Into the Job Market" will be the title of a day-long workshop to be held Nov. 9 at the Central YWCA.

Sponsored by the Junior League and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension division, the workshop is designed to assist the mature woman who is seeking employment for the first time, or who has prior work experience and now desires to re-enter the job market.

The workshop is scheduled to begin at 8:30 a.m. with registration and coffee.

Marie Arnot, coordinator of community development programs and associate professor of community and regional planning with the UNL School of Architecture, will give the keynote address at 9 a.m.

Employment

Ms. Arnot will speak on the topic "Employment and Family: Making It Work," and she also will discuss the "traditional" role of women versus the "new" role.

Small, informal group discussions on how to develop potential and job skills will follow the keynote address. Dr. Gaylan Dodge, director of the Nebraska Human Resources Research Foundation, Inc. will coordinate the discussions.

During the lunch hour, a group of local career women will lead a discussion entitled "We Did It, Why Not You Too?"

During the afternoon, three concurrent educational seminars will be held. Each workshop participant may attend two of the three.

Topics

The topics to be considered include:

- "Steps to Getting a Job" — where to go, how to fill out an application, how to go through an interview, etc. — to be led by Susie Jackson, director of the Lincoln Volunteer Bureau and Jean O'Hara, executive director of the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women.

- "Being in Business for Yourself" — the aspects of going into and maintaining your own business — to be led by W. W. Hays, member of the Service Corps of Retired Executives, and Mrs. Pamela Harn, owner of a local business.

- "Job Searching and Your Rights as a Woman" — an explanation of the laws as they relate to finding a job; equal pay, equal opportunity, child care, income tax, what to do if discrimination occurs — to be led by Donna Polk of the State Department of Labor, Jean Thorough, a Lincoln attorney, and Mary Jo Ryan of the UNL Child Care Center.

An informal coffee hour — to be attended by a number of Lincoln employers, personnel managers and representatives of educational institution — will conclude the day's activities.

Further information and registration blanks may be obtained from Dena Zimmer, UNL Extension Division, 511 Nebraska Hall, Lincoln.

The Lincoln Hilton's entryway twinkles a welcome to nighttime visitors and passersby.

The Lincoln Hilton not only adds another spire to the Lincoln skyline. It also adds job opportunity, convention space, eating and drinking establishments.

The public is invited to take a look at the new hotel today from 1-5 p.m. Tours of the building will be offered, the Lincoln Community Playhouse Puppeteers will give shows in the ballroom, refreshments will be served.

The hotel will be formally dedicated at a banquet Nov. 23. Among expected guests are Vernon Herndon, senior vice president of the Hilton chain, and James F. Sheerin, another senior vice president who also heads the central regional office.

Proceeds of the banquet will go to Nebraskans for Public Television.

Development of Old Town Desired Outgrowth of Hilton

Impressed with the success of Omaha's Old Market and spurred by the opening of the new Hilton Hotel, Lincoln civic leaders are looking with renewed interest at an area just northwest of downtown called Old Town.

The Old Market in Omaha, formerly a run-down warehouse district, has been transformed into an area renowned for its specialty retail shops, a dinner theater and an individualistic, nostalgic atmosphere.

"A lot of people have looked at Old Town for a long time," said Lanny Jorgenson, director of the Lincoln Center Development Assn.

And the new Lincoln Hilton might kick off a redevelopment project similar to Omaha's in Old Town, an area bounded by 9th and 7th Sts., O and S Sts., he said.

Old Town is sometimes confused with Haymarket Square, a city-owned block bounded by 9th, 10th, Q and R Sts.

"A lot of times what it takes is a big investment like this," Jorgenson said. "We feel the area has great potential."

Barton-Aschmann, a consulting firm involved in current downtown redevelopment planning, said Old Town is an unique section of the community that should be looked at for development which will retain its architectural design, Jorgenson said.

The area now includes warehouses, the Russell Stover candy manufacturing plant, the Burlington Northern depot, the U.S. Post Office and wholesale operations.

What Jorgenson and others envision in the area are small retail shops such as clothing boutiques, flower shops, bookstores and small restaurants.

Tom Fricke, general manager of the Lincoln Hilton, said he believes those sort of businesses could do well in Old Town.

"Anything in the arts would be the kind of thing that would be a success," Fricke said. "Painting, crafts, that kind of thing."

"I've heard a lot of rumors about people going into the area," he said.

If a trend toward redevelopment of the area is starting, the French Gourmet Restaurant is the first example.

The restaurant, which offers French cuisine in the leisurely French dining style, is located a half-block from the Hilton.

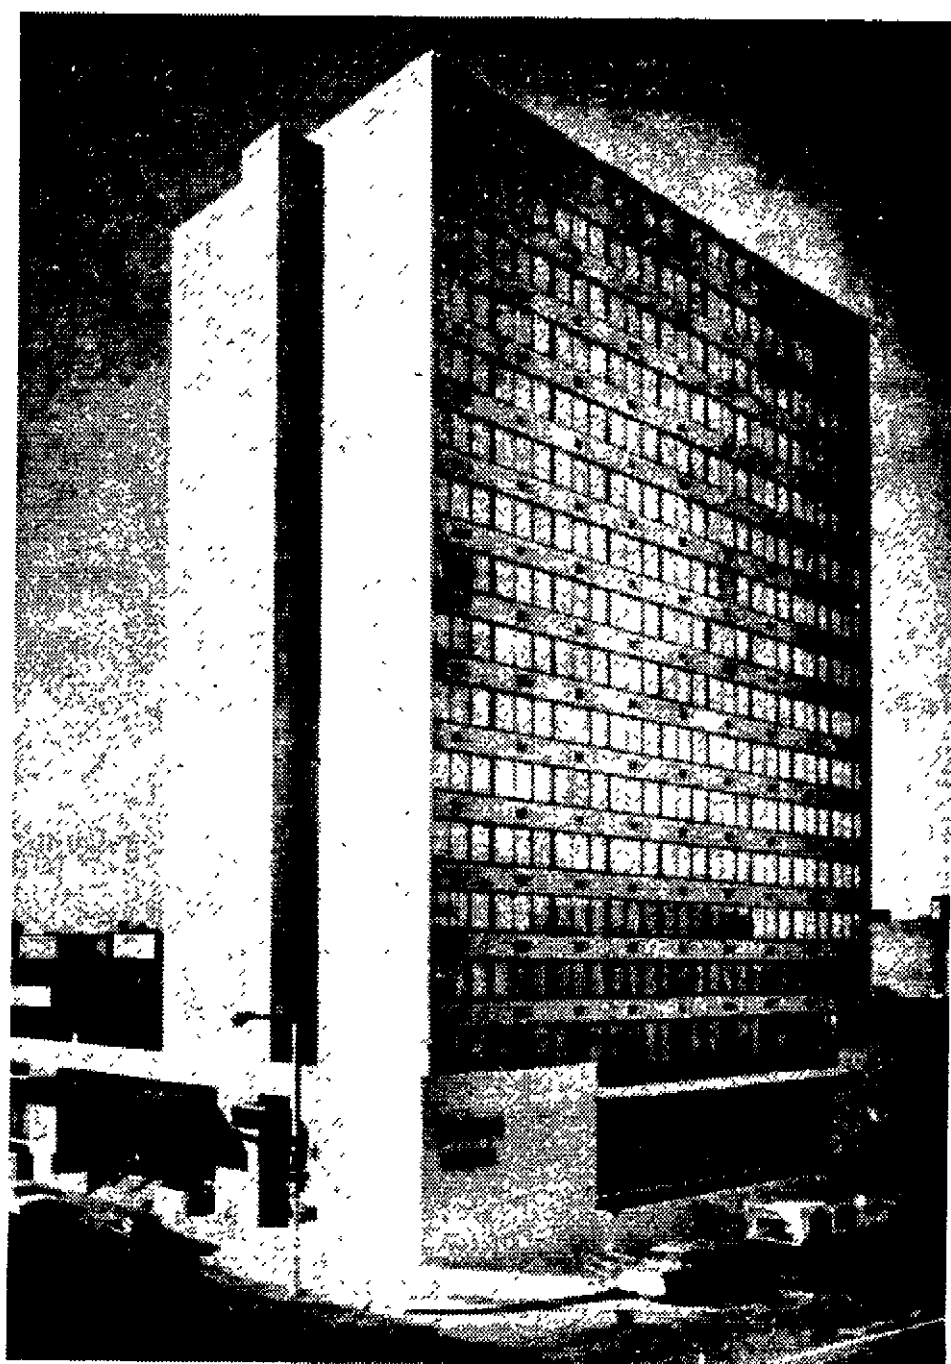

One of the rumors about Old Town redevelopment concerns Lloyd (Bud) Feerhusen and Everett Evnen.

The pair recently purchased the former Miller and Paine warehouse across P Street from the Hilton.

"It's just a fantastic building," Evnen said. "The circular wood staircase is just beautiful. It has terrazo floors for the first two stories."

"I think it would make a beautiful display area for antiques and gifts or for small restaurants," Evnen said.

"We only took possession two weeks ago. We really haven't settled on anything. We're just beginning to explore the possibilities."

The Lincoln Hilton stands tall and proud against the Nebraska sky.

Haymarket & Old Town

The Hilton Hotel is situated in the Old Town area of Lincoln, an area sometimes erroneously called Haymarket Square or the Haymarket area.

Old Town is bounded by 7th, 9th, O and S Sts. It contains a building owned by Haymarket Square Ltd. a real estate and development firm, at 801 O St., the old Raymond Bros. Clarke Co. warehouse.

Haymarket Square is bounded by 9th, 10th, Q and R Sts. It really was a market area in the late 1800s, complete with scales to weigh wagons of produce, sales stalls and a camping area.

When the town was originally platted, the block bounded by 9th, 10th, O and P Sts. was set aside for a State Historical Society and was used as a market area.

That block was traded for Haymarket Square in 1875 so the federal government could construct a Post Office there.

In addition, the Hilton's restaurant is called Haymarket.

Even though it sounds like the restaurant was named for the area, the name was an accident — practically.

According to Jim Golden, director of food and beverage operations, the name Haymarket was recommended for Lincoln because there are a number of quality eateries in the Hilton chain called the Haymarket.

It was not until they discovered that the hotel is located in Lincoln's old Haymarket area that "interest was heightened," said Golden.

Hilton Increases Lincoln's Attractiveness to Conventions

By Bart Becker

The addition of the Lincoln Hilton's 240 rooms will be a big boost to the city's attractiveness as a convention city, according to a Chamber of Commerce staffer.

"Anything new is a great addition to Lincoln," said Ingrid Beckman, the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce's convention sales manager. "It creates new rooms and we hope we can get larger conventions to Lincoln."

Including the Hilton, the city now has about 2,100 convention rooms with meeting space, Beckman said. She said the added rooms will complement the intangible attractions Lincoln holds for conventioners.

"A lot of times people look for the intangibles, like friendly people and a central location, when they're planning a convention," she said. "My job is to bring conventions to town and fill up the facilities."

She also pointed out that the Hilton joins an existing downtown core of hotels, all relatively near to Pershing Auditorium and one another. This provides an attractive housing package for prospective conventions. But Beckman discounted the possibility that the downtown cadre would squeeze outlying hostilities out of the convention business.

"I don't think that will happen at all," she said. "We get enough large conventions in town to use all the facilities. For instance, when the Roller Skating Rink Operators of America (RSROA) convention was in town, every room was occupied."

In 1972, according to Lincoln Chamber of Commerce figures, Lincoln had just over 1,500 available overnight rooms. On a year-round basis, most of Lincoln's overnight trade is conventions, sales meetings and other business groups, as opposed to transient tourist trade.

From June to August, when tourist traffic is up, it's slack time for conventions.

Seasonal events such as home football Saturdays produce busy weekends. State basketball tournaments and June brides are an additional boon to hotels and motels with party rooms.

But both the Chamber of Commerce and lodging managers agree that conventions produce most of Lincoln's big hotel-motel business. The Chamber's figures show about 100,000 persons annually attend conventions in the city.

Since the turn of the decade, several hostilities with the capacity for housing convention crowds have been built in Lincoln.

But Lincoln's boom in motels and hotels apparently isn't having an adverse affect on Omaha's business. Instead, it seems to indicate a healthy convention trend for the whole area.

"It's really going to help Lincoln, I can tell you that right off," said Peggy Flower of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce. "I don't think it will cut into our convention business, however. We have two considerably different cities."

Beckman is even more enthusiastic about the Hilton-provided shot in Lincoln's convention arm.

"My personal preference is obviously Lincoln," she said. "After all, I'm selling Lincoln. I'm trying to sell the conventions."

Whatsisname?

All joking aside, the Radisson Cornhusker extends a sincere welcome to the Lincoln Hilton Hotel and it's staff. We will look forward to working with Tom Fricke and the Hilton staff in making Lincoln the midwest's Hospitality City.

THE
HILTON

Statistically Speaking

Statistically speaking, the new Lincoln Hilton Hotel provides the city with one of the largest sleeping, eating, and convention establishments in the downtown area.

The new 16-story high rise which opened in mid-September is the first new hotel building to be built in the downtown area in 40 years.

—The hotel offers 240 rooms for its guests, 16 per floor. Each room can accommodate up to four people comfortably. Twenty-nine suites are available if space for a larger number of people is desired.

—Rates range from $17-$25 for a single, $22-$30 for a double, suites start at $50. Three color schemes are used in the rooms: Cranberry-grey, orange-brown and green. There is a fire stairway at each end of each floor.

—Contrary to hotel superstition, one room on each floor is numbered 13 and there is a floor number 13.

—Food and drink are in no short supply at the Hilton as four individual places are provided for hotel patrons' enjoyment. According to Jim Golden, director of food and beverages, the Arbor Inn Coffee Shoppe seats 110 people, while the Haymarket Restaurant seats 100. If something more intimate is desired, the Den, a lounge, has capacity for approximately 60 people. And while the official opening is not until Nov. 15, Fannys, a nightclub, will admit approximately 180 people though its doors nightly.

—People confined to wheelchairs have access to the new hotel via a ramp constructed beside the main entrance.

—Free parking is provided for Hilton guests. While currently only 210 spots are available in the hotel parking building, Jeff Sturman, director of sales, says other parking is plentiful close to the hotel in city lots.

—Conventions promise to bring extra business to the Hilton and ample space has been planned for conventioners' meetings. Nine meeting rooms may not seem like a lot, Sturman said, but the ballroom, largest of the meeting rooms, holds 900 people theater-style and 650 people banquet-style.

—And for guests who would like to relax with a refreshing swim, the Hilton boasts an indoor pool measuring 20 by 40 feet. Depth varies from three to seven feet.

Jobs, Guest Spending Boost Lincoln Economy

The 175 new jobs the Hilton supplies Lincoln are probably a small part of its economic impact on the city, hotel and Chamber of Commerce officials agree.

As in all businesses, it's the customer who counts.

A 1966 national Chamber of Commerce study quoted by Hilton Gen. Manager Thomas E. Fricke said every dollar spent by hotel guests turns over 12 times in the city.

That means, every $1 spent turns into $12 for Lincoln residents.

And since the same study said the average conventioner spends $30.36 each day of an average convention, and conventions last an average of 2½ days, that means $900 for Lincoln from each guest.

Hotels have their ups and downs, Fricke said. In Lincoln, he said, the ups are football weekends and the downs include Christmas.

But he said he expects 70% occupancy of the hotel's 240 rooms.

Chamber of Commerce Vice President Jack Campbell said the Hilton has a "positive effect" on Lincoln.

It employs Lincoln residents, and supports local businesses by buying food, furnishings and advertising, he said.

Hilton Personnel Director Ann Seeley said all but five of the 175 employees are Lincoln residents.

Those five are employees of the Hilton chain.

Campbell said the Hilton is also an "obvious attraction" for conventions and group meetings and it adds to "the continued revitalization of downtown Lincoln."

Fricke said hotels are a "clean industry," that is, they stimulate local business with less pollution than some industries.

Money spent in construction supplies and salaries, furnishings, carpeting and other operational expenses stays in Lincoln, Fricke said.

He said the hotel plans on a mixture of guests: convention and meeting attendants, single guests, and long-term guests, such as state senators.

He said it's too early to tell what proportion each category will be of the mixture.

Conventions have already included the house of delegates of a state medical group and the Central Union Conference of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The Easter Seal Society and county officials association are planning conventions at the Hilton, he said.

Manager Fricke Ready for Anything

Tom Fricke

Lincoln Hilton general manager Tom Fricke is ready for anything because his last big convention was the famed Chicago Democratic Convention in 1968.

During his 17 years with the Hilton chain, Fricke has worked at hotels in El Paso, Chicago, Omaha and now Lincoln.

His first real introduction to the hotel world was as a bellman in Tennessee while he was touring in summer stock theater.

Born in Indiana and raised in Michigan, Fricke studied speech correction at Western Michigan University but was really more interested in radio.

While learning that trade at the Midwestern Broadcasting School in Chicago, "I walked in the back door of the Hilton and needed a job."

Fricke has never looked back, but admitted that no one in the Hilton family starts at the top — himself included.

Maintenance Chief Adopted State As Home

Robert Cedzidlo, chief engineer for the Lincoln Hilton, has adopted Nebraska.

Born in Chicago and stationed at Lincoln's Air Force base from 1956-64, he married a local woman and remained here after his service stint.

Cedzidlo is new to the Hilton chain, coming from Lincoln Carpet Mills.

As chief engineer, he is similar to a building superintendent. His duties include supervising maintenance of every aspect of the physical building and the surrounding grounds.

Sturman Handles Hilton's Conventions

Jeff Sturman, 23, director of sales for the Lincoln Hilton, has his hands in the convention booking pie when it concerns 10 or more people.

Jeff Sturman

His primary function's coordination of meeting space, meeting programs, sleeping accommodations, exhibits, food service and in a smaller property like Lincoln, he dabbles in advertising and public relations.

A personnel management graduate from Northern Michigan University in Marquette, Sturman "fell into this position" (sales) when none were available in his area of study.

With the Hilton family for two years, Sturman began his career at the Detroit Hilton, with Lincoln his second assignment.

A stained glass window from the old Lincoln Hotel separates the Den from the Hilton lobby.

Something Old Something New

By Liane Guenther

Something old, something new, nothing borrowed and only the logo's blue — everything else in the new Lincoln Hilton Hotel is red.

Those who lament the passing of the old Lincoln Hotel should be heartened to learn that the new hotel has tried to preserve some of the Victorian atmosphere.

Jim Rodney, public relations director for the Lincoln Hilton, can point out bits and pieces from the old building that have been worked into the new.

"We're adding pieces here and there as they fit into the decor," he explained, pointing out a marble-topped mahogany table and two matching chairs covered in plush, burgandy velvet. The three pieces sit in the corner of the lobby, near the entrance to the Haymarket restaurant.

A similar set rests on a landing midway between the lobby and the basement.

"People who know something about antiques just drool when they see this stuff," Rodney said, leading a tour of the new building.

The stained glass window imbedded in the ceiling of the dining room came from the Lincoln's Terrace Room. Another chunk of that glass divides the Den lounge from the lobby.

"There's a peculiar story about that stained glass," said Rodney, former manager of the Lincoln Hotel. "I kept looking up and seeing a place in the old hotel where plywood had been nailed over something."

"One day my engineer and I climbed up there and pried some of the wood loose. We found that beautiful glass underneath."

The Haymarket restaurant also houses a few other remnants of the past. Two paintings on the south wall used to hang on the mezzanine of the old hotel. And the old oak grandfather clock kept track of passing years.

The Arbor Inn Coffee Shoppe, which inherited its name from the Lincoln's coffee bar, also harbors several antique treasures.

One of Rodney's favorite pieces is an old oak hutch which sits near the coffee shop's entrance. Another is a 10-foot tall, oak grandfather clock, positioned against a west wall in the shop.

"In the transition and moving, we lost the key," Rodney said, explaining why the giant pendulum wasn't swinging. "We're having another one made, though."

Much of the furniture and decorations salvaged from the old hotel are still in storage, Rodney said.

Chained to a giant water pipe in a basement storage room is the brass chandelier that hung in the lobby of the old hotel.

"We're trying to think of some way to use this in the new lounge, Fannys," Rodney said. "That thing is so heavy you wouldn't believe . . . I held my breath when they took it down."

About the only thing the wreckers didn't salvage, he said, was the building itself.

"They originally tried to keep the old hotel," he said, "but studies showed it was economically impossible. The cost of redoing it was too high and in the end it would have meant many more problems."

"It's just like an old car — it'll run so long and that's it."

"I guess the next best thing was to keep all the pieces and that's what we've tried to do."

Chef Aguilar Runs Kitchen by Book

By Holly Spence

John Aguilar is as zealous about his culinary duties as a devoted monk is about his religion.

And executive chef Aguilar runs his Lincoln Hilton kitchen by the book — "my Bible" — which chronicles the preparations of each dish that is placed before customers in the Arbor Inn, Haymarket restaurant and at Hilton banquets.

"If it (any dish) doesn't come out right, there is no excuse," he said as he points to the volumes of instructions on individual dish preparation.

The native born Mexican has 30 people in his kitchen operation, including four cooks and five involved in the cold item "pantry" area.

Aguilar has worked himself up through the culinary ranks from a glass washer in the mid 1950s after entering the United States as a sheet rock hanger.

He came to Lincoln from the Omaha Hilton.

Aguilar always enjoyed cooking and food preparation and his office is filled with loving cups from the Nebraska Restaurant Assn. proving his expertise in everything from canape creation and display to ice and tallow carvings.

Jim Golden

In addition to being a chef (actually he has had very little time in Lincoln to dip his hands into the food bins), his duties call for maintenance of the food stores, checking for food and health regulations, preparing menus and experimenting with new items, training and directing his kitchen help and "the waiters and waitresses when they enter the kitchen."

Dishes for the Lincoln Hilton menu were finalized in the Hilton test kitchen in Chicago after much preparing and tasting, preparing and tasting, etc.

"Now we are continually experimenting, especially on banquet items," he said.

Aguilar hopes to whip up a special Mexican meal calling knowledge from his native land, but with all of his food interests, "I forget about it."

He admits that the classic Mexican dishes "like my mother prepares" are not as hot and spicy as some may think.

"Cinnamon and cloves are spices — garlic — and even salt," he said. "You've just got to learn how to use them."

Aguilar's personal food tastes run from octopus to the simplest and most common of dishes. "I enjoy everything," he laughed.

The chips fly as chef Aguilar makes ice carving.

Golden's Food Job Fattening

Jim Golden swears he has gained at least 15 pounds since he started his new job.

But a director of food and beverage operations at the Lincoln Hilton is expected to sample all the fare — and Golden tries to live up to his job expectations.

He got his first taste of the hotel business as a part-time summer bellman during his college years.

The University of Colorado business administration major worked himself up through the ranks since he joined the Hilton family in 1970.

The 26-year-old son of an Air Force officer who spent some time growing up in Germany has been a banquet manager, food and beverage controller (figure specialist), executive steward, purchasing agent and assistant food and beverage man.

Golden helped open the Omaha Hilton and came to Lincoln from the Detroit Hilton.

Hotel Rooms Plentiful All Across Nebraska

With the addition of the Hilton's 240, Lincoln has around 1,100 hotel and motel rooms with adjoining function space, according to the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce's convention sales manager, Ingrid Beckman. The city has almost 2,100 overnight rooms.

In comparison, Omaha has about 5,000 rooms and North Platte 1,600, although a couple of hotels there are being phased out, according to the local Chamber of Commerce. Grand Island offers 1,700 rooms with a new Regal 8 Inn being built and Kearney has 700 rooms available.

Ogallala, with its strong tourist trade, has about 1,000 rooms available during the tourist season. Of those, 250 rooms (Ramada Inn and Holiday Inn) are equipped to handle convention functions.

Jerusalem Hilton Opens

Nebraskans bound for the Holy Land will have a new place to stay starting next month. Reservations for the new 420-room Jerusalem Hilton are now being accepted for any date after Nov. 16.

Located on the Givat Ram, highest hill in the city, the Jerusalem Hilton will be Hilton International's second hotel in Israel and the company's seventh in the Middle East. With the new Jerusalem hotel and the 620-room hotel in Tel Aviv, Hilton International will be able to provide more than 1,000 guest rooms in Israel.

Lincoln Hilton Sports Chain's 195th H

Lincoln skyline now boasts the 136th Big H in the United States, not counting 59 more dotting the landscapes of 39 other nations.

But this Hilton symbol, billed as the traveler's passport to savory chef's specialties, back-home comfort and amiable service, hasn't always catered to the world in such abundance.

Ironically, the now multi-million dollar operation got its feet wet in Big State, U.S.A. It was Cisco, Texas, 1920, when Conrad N. Hilton bought his first hotel, the Mobley.

After weathering the 1930's depression, Hilton moved on to Los Angeles where he bought the Town House in 1942.

Metro hoteling was Hilton's next dream, which transported him right to the steps of the giant in U.S. metropolises — New York City. He leased the Roosevelt, bought the Plaza and began survival drills during the war years.

Wartime brought plenty of business, but room rates were frozen while operating costs and property depreciation zoomed.

But Hilton was more interested in moving west. It was Chicago's hotel offerings that first caught his eye. A $19 million purse bought the Palmer House in 1945 with a few million added to buy the Stevens — now known as the Conrad Hilton.

Organization was the key to Hilton's financial success and in 1946 scattered units were united to form the Hilton Hotels Corp., which now manages the Lincoln Hilton.

The new corporation first embarked on some serious homework aimed at passing the test of buying the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. Finally in 1949, this milestone was passed, a historic event matched only by the $111 million acquisition of the Statler properties in 1954.

Since that time, Hilton Hotels have opened in Beverly Hills, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Denver, Portland, Ore., San Francisco, St. Paul, Indianapolis, Oakland, San Antonio, Omaha, Macon, Savannah, Washington, D.C.

The Hilton Hotels Corp. basically stayed untouched until 1964 when all shares of stock of its wholly-owned subsidiary, Hilton International, were issued to shareholders.

Then in 1967, Trans World Airlines, Inc., bought Hilton International. These properties, however, continue to be identified by the name Hilton and Conrad N. Hilton remains chairman of the group. He also chairs the Hilton Hotels Corp.

The Big H came a long way before climbing atop the Lincoln, Neb., skyline. The corporation now employs some 23,000 persons. Gross profit in 1973 hit $372 million, netting $17.5 million in profits.

The Big H's near half-century success hinges on individuality, creating an instinctive feel for a community. Each hotel has its own personality, its own way of welcoming visitors and its own warmth and charm.

Only the Big Hs are the same.

All roads lead to the Hilton, as this map shows. The new Lincoln hotel is at the crossroads of several major highways.

Comptroller Calls Hawaii Home

Toshio Tsurunaga

Toshio Tsurunaga gave up the sifting sands of Hawaii's beaches for the ever-changing weather of Nebraska, but he doesn't regret leaving the Kona Hilton a bit.

Lincoln Hilton comptroller Tsurunaga has "been in the hotel business a long time — on and off since 1945."

He started as a part-timer in college and learned a lot of English — "I couldn't speak English even though I studied it in Japan" — by working in a hotel food supply area. His undergraduate degree is from a university in Japan with his graduate work done at Michigan State University.

As head of the accounting department, Tsurunaga is involved with the financial statements, budgeting and budget forecasts, analyses and financial recommendations to management.

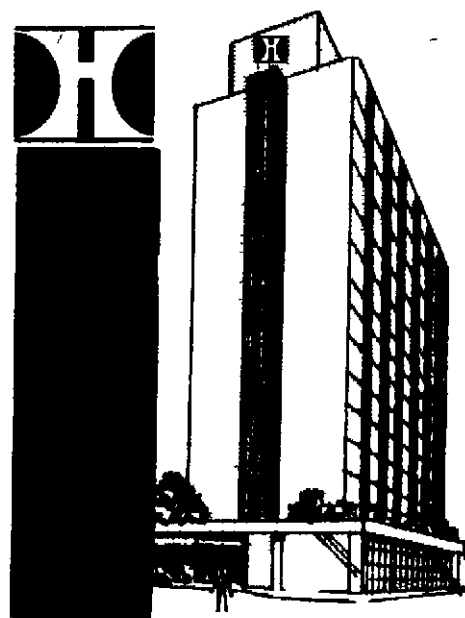

This is how downtown Lincoln looks from the top of the Hilton Hotel. Looking the other direction, one can see the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus. No, you can't see a football game from up there — the building would have to grow several stories first.

Local Hilton Sets Its Own Policies

Consistency with a difference is the idea behind day-to-day Hilton Hotel operation.

While trying to maintain national principles of operation, Hilton officials say individual hotel managers rely as much as possible on their own knowledge and feeling for the community in which they live.

This means you'll probably pay different prices for the same Hilton meal, depending on which city you're staying in.

Food and beverage manager Jim Golden said the Lincoln Hilton's food prices were determined after studying other Lincoln restaurant menus prior to opening.

"Our prices are generally lower than the Omaha Hilton's because Lincoln prices are generally lower and we have to stay competitive," he said. "Everything is geared to the local market. That's the way Hilton likes to do it."

A Lincoln management committee comprised of local owners, Hilton senior vice president in charge of the central division James Sheerin, and Lincoln Hilton general manager Tom Fricke are responsible for local policy decisions.

Fricke says there is a definite feeling of autonomy within the Hilton chain and "it doesn't really matter to us who physically owns the hotel."

Questions such as which credit cards will be accepted, room decor and "all those things we must live by" are determined locally, according to Fricke.

"While it's good to be consistent, it's also good to be different sometimes," he said.

As another Hilton representative said, "Perhaps the match folders in all the hotels are similar, and perhaps the accountants all use the same corporate forms, but each hotel has its own personality, its own way of welcoming visitors, and its own warmth and charm."

Miller Left Computers for Hotel Business

Ohio native Tom Miller, the Lincoln Hilton's front office manager, began his hotel career as a part-timer during college.

The Purdue University computer graduate, 28, forsook computers for hotel management because "this business is far more interesting."

His Lincoln duties include maintaining a smooth functioning of the front desk, room clerks, reservations desk, bellboys and telephone system.

Miller's hotel experiences have been in Indianapolis, Boston, Chicago and Detroit before Lincoln. He has been with the Hilton chain since 1972.

With an order similar to that, the Lincoln Hilton Hotel reserves a room for two in Paris for a hypothetical Mr. John Jones of Seward.

The order includes his arrival date and time (7.30 a.m. Nov. 2), kind of room (1 double bed) number in his party (2), price ($47) when he will be leaving (Nov. 11).

With the opening of the Hilton, Lincoln has become a part of the most advanced hotel reservation system in the world. A completely computerized service, Hittron terminals are functioning in every Hilton and Hilton International hotel and inn in the world. This means you can reserve a room at any Hilton anywhere from right in Lincoln and receive a printed confirmation.

The Hilton not only keeps track of what rooms are available, but can also tell guests what conventions or sports teams are in town, information on transportation and distance from the airport.

Hilton Changing Owners

It's been said that the ownership of Lincoln's Hilton Hotel is tied up in a very complicated legal and financial arrangement.

Perhaps one of the most complicated arrangements made in Lincoln during the last decade or so.

The 16-story white structure at the corner of 9th and P Sts. started out under the ownership of H-H Hotels Inc., a Nebraska development corporation organized in 1971.

H-H was a family affair involving two of Lincoln's most prominent business families, the Martins and the Kingerys.

Specifically, the corporation was owned by Bennett S. Martin, his wife, Dorothy, and their son, Bennett T., as well as brothers Wayne and Orville E. Kingery and their sister, Betty Hales.

The elder Martin, president of Lincoln Terminal Co., owned the Lincoln Hotel which once stood on the site of the new Hilton.

Wayne and Orville Kingery are Lincoln contractors and Mrs. Hales is the wife of Harvey Hales, an official with the Kingery construction firm.

But early this fall, the ownership of the hotel, managed by Hilton Hotels Corp., started to change hands.

And there still are details to be detailed, agreements to be agreed to and signatures to be signed before the transaction is transacted.

It was in September that Balcor Realty Investors Ltd.-74 announced the purchase of controlling interest in the Lincoln Hilton.

That purchase was dependent upon a number of complicated transactions yet to be finalized, according to Lincoln attorney Sid Sweet, representing H-H.

Although the owners would not reveal the actual dollar value of the proposed transaction, sources indicated that the total cost of Lincoln's Hilton will exceed $7 million.

"There's a long and complex set of documents that require approval of a lot of subjects," he explained.

Balcor is not a corporation, but a limited partnership. It is headquartered in suburban Chicago and registered with the state of Illinois. The publicly owned entity offers its limited partnership interests in most states.

According to its literature, the partnership plans to invest in developments such as apartments, office buildings, mobile home communities, shopping centers and hotels.

It is based on a belief that diversification reduces the risk of investment, and therefore it intends to purchase different types of properties in various geographical locations.

Already the partnership has acquired four properties in addition to the Lincoln Hilton investment. Those include apartment complexes in Clarkston, Ga., Ormond Beach, Fla., and Largo, Fla., as well as a mobile home community in Sterling Heights, Mich.

When and if Balcor takes over, the H-H corporation will continue to maintain an interest in the hotel and participate in its operation.

That's because Balcor is an out-of-towner and wants involvement from local people who know and are known in the Lincoln community.

A waitress cleans up after guests in the Arbor Inn, the Hilton Hotel's coffee shop.

The indoor swimming pool at the Hilton must be especially inviting in winter.

The 20 by 40 foot pool is covered with a domed skylight.

A fireplace makes for a warm, cozy atmosphere in the Den. The grandfather clock is a remnant from the old Lincoln Hotel.

The Permanent Guests Made Closing Lincoln Hard—Rodney

The saddest part about closing the Lincoln Hotel was the permanent guests, Jim Rodney says.

As general manager of the old hotel located on the site where the Lincoln Hilton now stands, Rodney was charged with moving them out — and one had lived there 31 years.

They went to apartments, to nursing homes, to live with relatives, he said, but all away from downtown, an area most enjoyed.

"I think they miss it," he said. "Uprooting them was very difficult."

Other than that "human problem," as he termed it, Rodney, now public relations director for the Hilton, was happy a new hotel was going up because "Lincoln needed it."

One of the city's oldest hotels, the Lincoln was built partly in 1890, partly in 1911 and extensively remodeled in 1926. It had 219 rooms but only 135 were in use at the time of the decision to close it.

The others needed extensive remodeling to suit the comforts and requirements of modern hotel guests, Rodney said.

Recently-passed federal safety standards were staring the Lincoln in the face, "so many rules and regulations, they would probably have been impossible to fulfill," Rodney said.

And that age-old reason: "People want new things."

Although the old Lincoln Hotel was not torn down until 1972, it was first recommended in a report compiled in the early 1940s by H.L. Stevens & Co. of Chicago.

Noting the remodeling undertaken in 1926, the report said, "While much money was spent, it was impossible even at that date to thoroughly modernize the hotel, the main section of which was 36 years old . . .

"Other modern, fireproof hotels had been erected . . . and no matter how much money was spent . . . it was impossible to put it into such condition that it could compete with the new hotels . . ."

The new Hilton Hotel was "more or less a civic project," Rodney said.

Abe and Dorothy Martin, owners of the old Lincoln, "knew the needs of Lincoln for a new hotel," he said, even though "they loved the old Lincoln."

So March 31, 1972, Rodney closed the Lincoln's doors for all time.

The wrecking crews found out the old building was built tough, Rodney said, but the structure eventually was razed and room cleared for the new hotel.

And on Sept. 13, 1974, the Lincoln Hilton Hotel opened its doors.

People still express regret about losing the old hotel, Rodney said. They see the new Hilton and tell him, "It's beautiful but I remember the old Lincoln."

But, he said, "I think it's emotions, nostalgia. The climate was right for a new hotel. The city of Lincoln needed a new hotel."

"And people from Columbus, North Platte, Scottsbluff, all across the state, tell me this is the finest thing that ever happened to Lincoln."

Eat, Drink in Style at Hilton

There is a subdued conversational fun that often happens within the confines of a quiet bar.

And there is a rousing fun that is complemented by a few drinks and lots of musical entertainment.

The Lincoln Hilton hopes to run this fun gamut from your basic dark, intimate bar like the Den to the nighelubbish atmosphere of Fannys.

The Den, a quiet drinking establishment, is complete with the tinkling piano of Dave Brown.

"The main reason we have piano bar music is that it is not only conducive to drinking, but as it (the music) overflows into the dining room, it is not offensive to fine dining," said director of food and beverage operations Jim Golden.

He is primarily interested in instrumental background music in the Den, not vocals. Golden thinks singing would be overpowering in the lounge and distracting in the adjoining Haymarket Restaurant.

Even though some of Dave Brown's music will filter into the Haymarket Restaurant, Golden hopes this room's "entertainment" will be enjoyed through the taste buds.

Here Golden hopes to have the luncheon and dinner dishes served with a special flair, with items ranging from turkey Wellington to crab-stuffed trout with a wide selection in between.

While the Haymarket will specialize in multi-course dinner extravaganzas and sumptuous lunches, snackier food might find its way into the Den.

Future fare there could possibly include sandwiches sold in a gimmicky manner like "by the inch" or "by the hand." From the homey leathery, warm atmosphere of the Den, Hilton visitors can travel down the steps to Fannys — soon.

"We want Fannys to be THE place to go in Lincoln," Golden said of the soon-to-be-opened club.

Fannys is set to open no later than Nov. 15, possibly as early as Nov. 10, with the Dolan & Celery Road Show.

Entry to Fannys will also be possible through a brightly-lit P St. entrance. The low-ceiling club, which will have a dance floor, will be brim full of wooden and cable spool tables (custom made, not the real thing) and an east end cove bordered with rough hewn telephone poles.

"We are now concentrating our entire effort on Fannys," commented Golden.

He said the Lincoln Hilton is going to experiment with different types of entertainment to determine what fits the room and the clientele.

Golden noted that the menu in Fannys would be restricted to "six or seven different things."

In addition to German sandwiches and ribs, hearty soups, pickled eggs, "A nickel pickle" and one dessert item named "Fannys brandy mug," Golden might even toss in a barrel of unshelled peanuts for munchers.

UNL Symphony To Play in Washington

The symphony orchestra of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is one of six university symphonies selected to give a special performance at the John Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., on Thursday, Nov. 14.

The orchestra's performance will include "Three Places in New England" and the "First Symphony."

Members of the 80-piece NU orchestra will fly to Washington, D.C., on Thursday, Nov. 14.

The six university groups, the Greater Chamber Players of Washington, D.C., the California Institute of the Arts and the New England Conservatory will present 12 concerts honoring the 50th birthday of American composer Arnold Schoenberg and Charles Ives.

The University of Nebraska Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emanuel Wishnow, will perform the music of Charles Ives Saturday, Nov. 16,

Saturday, Nov. 16, the Washington, D.C., club of the University of Nebraska Alumni Assn. will host a reception at the Kennedy Center for the orchestra members from 7 to 8:15 p.m. Honored guests at the reception will be Chancellor and Mrs. James H. Zumberge.

The students will do some sightseeing in the nation's capital before returning to Nebraska on Monday, Nov. 18.

Rehabilitation Unit To Meet in Omaha Nov. 6-7

Legal rights especially for the disabled and disadvantaged, have generated the general theme of the three-day fall conference of the Rehabilitation Association of Nebraska.

The sessions open Nov. 6 at the Omaha Hilton Hotel, the programs beginning Nov. 7.

Talks and panels will be presented by such authorities on handicapped's legal rights as Marcia Burgdorf, attorney for the National Center for the Law and the Handicapped in South and, Ind.; Melvin Jenkins, attorney for the U.S. Civil Rights Commission in Kansas City, and is Rovira, Denver attorney, formerly on the President's Committee on Mental Retardation.

Officers of the parent and various subdivisions will be elect and take office during the three-day session. This includes Michael Sprague, program director, Region V, Division of Rehabilitation Services, who assumes the state organization presidency Nov. 8. He succeeds Jane Harrington of Omaha Goodwill Industries.

Drummer Boy Decoration

Special Writer

One of the most moving Christmas carols of all time is a comparative newcomer... the winsome Little Drummer Boy. It tells the story of a little boy who comes to pay homage to his newborn king: "Baby Jesus, I am a poor boy too; I have no gift to bring, that's fit for a king; Shall I play for you, upon my drum?"

We have had many requests for a do-it-yourself Christmas display depicting this delightful carol. Here it is, measuring 42 x 58 inches — not more than an evening's work!

Just glue the full-color poster on plywood, then saw it out. Prop it up with a wooden stake, dramatize with a spotlight and... pa-rum-pa-pum-pum... you'll be the talk of the block! It's waterproof (like billboards) and will last for many years.

Sentry Available

By Michael J. Conlon

Washington (UPI) — For less than $100 it may be possible to protect yourself and your family from death by the smoke or flames from a household fire.

The idea of home smoke or fire detection devices is not a new one. But more and cheaper products — some of them even portable — have been coming on the market. Basically they all do the same thing: sense the presence of poisonous gases or heat, then set off a bell or buzzer loud enough to wake the soundest sleeper.

Some mechanisms work only for heat while others detect only gases. There are others that do both. Protecting against poisonous fumes is an important consideration since a fire can smolder long before it gets hot, fed on space-age foam and plastic materials that emit silent, choking gases.

In April of this year the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) began requiring at least one automatic smoke detector in federal and FHA-backed housing. The regulations require the device to be placed near the sleeping areas or at the head of the stairway in two-story houses.

The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) says the middle of the ceiling, in a hallway outside the bedrooms for instance, is the best location. It also suggests such devices be tested weekly once installed.

And while not recommending specific brands, it urges buyers to check the labels when shopping for the Underwriters' Laboratories (UL), Factory Mutual Engineering Corp. (FME) or Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada (ULC) seals.

One witness before a recent government hearing displayed a portable smoke detector which he plugs in the wall and hangs near the ceiling each night when he checks into a motel.

The witness started using the device because he narrowly escaped death when a color TV set caught fire in his motel room, and he had to crawl along the floor to escape the poisonous gases which filled the room.

There are some other considerations beyond what brand to buy. However, most of them are too involved to get into here.

For a complete rundown, write the NFPA at 470 Atlantic Ave., Boston, Mass., 02210 for a booklet called "Household Fire Warning Equipment." It costs $1, but it gives a detailed rundown on circuitry, back-up systems and so on.

ITEMIZE HOUSE TAX DEDUCTIONS

One of the great financial benefits of home ownership versus rental is that you are immediately eligible to deduct a good-sized amount of money from your income tax. As a homeowner, you will generally find it to your advantage to itemize deductions rather than taking the standard deduction.

This is especially true during the earlier years of home ownership. The mortgage interest and real property taxes on your personal residence, when added to other deductible items will usually be well in excess of any standard deduction you could claim.

Your home payment may consist of several parts; an amount placed in escrow to pay real estate taxes and fire insurance, FHA mortgage insurance premiums, and an amount applied to reduce the principal of the mortgage. Of these parts, only the interest and taxes are deductible — but that will prove to be a very sizable figure.

Bavarian Style Pole House Has Ecological Bent

By Andy Lang (AP)

Rustic Bavarian styling is incorporated into a centuries-old concept of building in this three-bedroom house.

It's called a "pole" house because its structural elements are poles sunken into the ground for stability. In many areas of the world, geographical demands — such as high water, uneven terrain and wild animals — dictate its use. It is especially popular in Australia.

Among present-day reasons for its use are that it has high wind resistance and is in conformity with the ecological trend, since it allows the earth to continue uninterrupted by the unhealing scars of excavation and foundation.

Architect Rudolph A. Matern has cloaked Design R-87 in charming exterior features. Most prominent is the large open gable on the left, with its wood-faced balcony and outside stairway, and the extended sloping roof over the main entrance. Others are the second-level projecting bay window, the gable roof extension over the small window on the second bay projection at the window on the right side.

The pole construction is quite evident.

At first glance, this house appears to be constructed on a solid foundation with the carport open. It was designed this way to lend the air of visual stability to the exterior. The chimney wall and the stone wall on the right side of the main entrance are the units that give this impression.

The entire lower level is actually open except for two enclosed service areas for heat, storage and plumbing lines. This lower level becomes the owners' covered, outdoor living area, screened from passersby and from the garage area by strategically located walls.

It covers an area equal to about one-half the livable house size. Even the carport is ecologically minded, since the driving strips are bluestone in earth with planting all around.

Access to this house is through the latticed opening which enters the flagstone and sod outdoor living area. Open stairs located here lead to the upper level. Above, the stairwell is enclosed with the main entrance door located at the top. A large foyer greets the visitor and an eye-level octagonal window allows a small view of the outdoor elevated balcony in front.

One can turn left or right to reach the three main areas of the house.

To the right, a long living room runs front to rear with a stone log burning fireplace dominating the front wall. Two French doors flank the fireplace and allow access to the outdoor balcony.

The exterior stair lands upon this balcony and provides a second means of access to and from the ground level. Since this balcony faces the front and is near the front entrance, it is an ideal place from which to greet visitors.

To the rear of the living room, the formal dining room completes this wing of the house and attaches to the 20-foot-long kitchen-family room. An island cabinet divider separates the two spaces and two large windows provide excellent light and ventilation.

Off the center hall the three bedrooms are grouped around two baths. A private bath with stall shower is part of the facilities of the master bedroom.

This is a striking house, and practical as well.

The exterior materials of this three-bedroom house include wood roof shingles, half timber and stucco wall finish, treated wood posts, stone, lattice work at front entrance and garage.

age, vertical wood balcony and stair boards with cutouts, and steel casement windows. The outdoor area near the front entrance provides a garden area.

More Control at Lincoln General

Hospital Rates Before Council

The question of whether the City Council should have more control over Lincoln General Hospital rates will be before city lawmakers again when they meet Monday night.

The hospital board says there is no good reason for changing the present rate adoption procedure, but some Council members assert the Council should take a more active role in the procedural process.

Under the present practice, rate changes, which need only the approval of the hospital board, take effect in 30 days if the City Council does not reject them.

Two proposed ordinances which are set for a third and final reading before the Council would make council action mandatory for acceptance, rejection or modification of proposed rate changes.

Other items on the Council's 7:30 p.m. Monday agenda include:

Passports Are Hot Items In Underworld Circles

(c) New York Times
New York — A U.S. passport costs $10, but it has become a red-hot item in criminal circles around the world and currently commands a price as high as $2,000.

Indeed, underworld demand has become so great government officials have issued a warning to travelers to be particularly on guard against loss or theft of their passports.

"The United States passport is the single most valuable document an imposter can have to substantiate a false identity," Frances G. Knight, director of the Passport Office, declared in testifying before a Senate committee recently.

"Possession gives the alien, narcotics trafficker, fugitive or criminal a freedom of movement which would otherwise be denied him," Knight said.

For the past three years, the number of stolen passports has averaged about 3,500 annually, government officials say, adding this represents only about 25% of the total passports reported missing abroad each year.

"In most instances, the passports are stolen by pickpockets who are generally concerned primarily with cash or possibly credit cards," says William E. Duggan, chief of the Legal Division in the Passport Office.

"The most troublesome areas are naturally those with the most tourists, namely western European countries, but we do notice certain fluctuations in areas where there has been a recent drug problem."

There are no statistics on the number of passports that wind up in the hands of drug smugglers. "People involved in drug trafficking would probably use a stolen passport once and then discard it," said Duggan.

"What we do know is that the problem of lost and stolen passports has worsened in recent years, and the market value in the underworld has been reported anywhere from $200 to $2,000."

What can the traveler do to guard against passport theft? According to Duggan, "Simply be constantly aware that there are persons who are endeavoring to steal such documents."

"Examination of hundreds of these cases indicates that sheer carelessness or lack of reasonable vigilance is the principal reason passports are lost or stolen," he said.

Farmer Says Hiho the Dairy

Nashville, Ill. (AP) — Like his father, Casimir Kozuszek worked all his life to leave something for his sons: the family dairy farm.

But his sons won't have it. Inflation milked it dry. "The feed is too high and milk wasn't high enough," 66-year-old Kozuszek says.

"I sold out because my boys were supposed to take over but there wasn't enough money and I'm getting too old."

Kozuszek sold his herd of dairy cows at auction in September. He still lives on the farmland, but no longer as a farmer.

His son, who would have run it, works in a factory! The Agriculture Department predicts that by 1980 half the nation's family-run dairy farms will vanish, the herds auctioned to large producers.

The trouble with farming, as Kozuszek sees it, is that farmers won't work together. "They are going to have to organize like everybody else, like Union labor. If they don't they are going to go broke," he says.

Johnny Cash Has Nov. 7 Date at Auditorium Here

One of the biggest attractions to hit Pershing Auditorium in a couple of years — Johnny Cash — will bring his country sounds back to Lincoln at 8 p.m. Nov. 7.

The words—"hear the train a-comin' . . . I walk the line . . . hey porter, hey porter, would you tell me the time . . . I wear the black for the poor and beaten down . . . Daddy sang bass . . . a boy named Sue . . . Jackson . . . ring of fire . . . Orange Blossom special" . . . will all be familiar to Cash fans.

Johnny will be joined by his wife, June Carter Cash, a noted country singer in her own right. Also in the spotlight will be Rosey Nix and Rosanne Cash, Johnny's daughters by a previous marriage.

Also in Lincoln will be Carl Perkins who scored in the music world with his Blue Suede Shoes, a hit since he wrote and recorded it for Sun Records in 1956.

Gordon Terry will bring his country fiddle; the Tennessee Three, whose roster of four includes Larry McCoy, Marshall Grant, Bob Wooten and W. S. Holland, will provide some back-up sounds.

Cash will appear in Kearney's Cushing Coliseum Nov. 6. The Kearney program is sponsored by the Kearney Optimist Club to support youth activities.

Husker Fans Are A Travelin' Band

By Tom Cook

Nebraska fans have a long, illustrious and, in some cases, hilarious history of following the Cornhuskers to football games away from home.

Trains, boats or planes may mean a trip to London or Paris for some, but those modes of transportation have been used by Nebraska fans for years to follow the Huskers.

Fans have flown to bowl games, taken boat trips to Hawaii (for the 1971 victory) and for many years followed behind screaming steam engines to places like South Bend, Ind., Portland, Ore., and Pittsburgh, Pa., (for the classic 14-13 victory over the 1939 powerhouse Pitt Panthers.)

In the believe-it-or-not category, is one of Husker fans' earliest migration odysseys. It was in 1901 when the Rock Island and North Western railroads locked horns in a fierce price war.

The Nebraska football management had signed a contract with the Rock Island to carry fans to Minneapolis for the Husker-Gopher clash, stipulating the best price must be matched.

North Western, anxious to get in on the action, engaged in a rate war with Rock Island.

Round trip price slashes were exchanged cut by cut until North Western made an offer Rock Island couldn't match or refuse: Three dollars for the Minneapolis round trip. (Persons riding city buses for 60¢ round trip downtown on game day may now let out a nostalgic groan.)

Six special trains took an estimated 3,000 Husker enthusiasts to the game. The Nebraska State Journal saw them off with these words:

Leather-Lungs

"Nebraska colors will beautify the field and Nebraska yells will drown the noise of the leather-lunged rooters of the north."

Husker fans are traditionally known for putting their money where their mouths are and this was no exception, according to the paper.

"Nebraska money will be placed on the game in great quantities should the Minnecotans show a desire to give odds."

The "eleven Gopher giants" won that game 19-0, but the paper noted in its headline, "Nebraska Faces Sore Defeat, But not a Whit Disgraced."

The fans, too, reportedly remained loyal and supportive,

'Company' and Rating Mixed

By Holly Spence
Even though Mixed Company, now showing at Douglas 1, isn't what you'd call your exceptional situation comedy, it's tough to find fault in it.

The film has one of those elements — kids — that tends to tug at the heartstrings.

It was put together by the crew that brought you Yours, Mine and Ours, and resemblances between the films are many. Instead of merely combining two families, Mixed Company combines a family and three orphans of different colors — hence the title.

The plot is simple. It centers around a loving basketball coach who also loses arguments with his wife. They already have three of their own with no more prospects in sight, so her volunteer work turns into a family.

Barbara Harris and Joseph Bologna are the parents of this ethnic mixture and come up with all sorts of problems and fairly livable and lovable situations. Performances are generally solid, all the cute kids included with the Indian adoptee taking the honors of "most lovable."

The language is a bit spicy, but appropriate.

It is no dramatic tour de force, no depth of character is evident and the story could run forever, but Mixed Company is a mild diversion. All it needs is a bunch of dogs.

Super-discriminating motion picture fans will have little or no interest. PG.

Old Gold Oak In New Office

Stockton, Calif. (AP) — a bit of nostalgia dating back to the 1930s greets patrons stepping into Stockton's new mid-city post office. The nostalgia is evidenced by installation of a partition holding windows and letter drops which was salvaged from a recently closed post office.

It is built of rare golden oak and dates back to 1932. It was originally in Nevada before being moved to Stockton.

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

'A Not So Haunted House' and Gus

By Barbara Vitzthum

"I think it's a perfectly spooky night for a trip to the haunted house on the old road," Kevin tried to convince his little sister Jean. "Of course we can never tell Mom or Dad that we went to the haunted house." Jean wasn't very convinced though. She had tried to tell Kevin but he wouldn't listen. "You wanted something to tell your classmates at school didn't you? Well, now you can say that two weeks before Halloween you went to a real haunted house."

When they were in their rooms preparing for the trip, Jean was wondering if they really should go. She was so scared she could barely move. Even Kevin had second thoughts at first. Neither of the children noticed the heavy fog which made the night that much more spooky.

On the way, neither Kevin nor Jean said a word for about 10 minutes, but Jean broke the silence with her high shrill scream. Right about 50 yards in front of them stood the most eerie looking mansion they had ever seen. It was just perfectly ugly.

They entered through the window because the door was bolted shut. Just as they entered it sounded like the whole house would fall in if they took another step. All of a sudden out of nowhere came a weird white ball tumbling down the stairs. They could barely make out what it was. When it stood up, Jean jumped and laughed so loud that the ghost and Kevin both jumped.

Kevin was the first to speak. "Who or what are you?"

"Don't say that please!" the ghost wept.

"Oh Kevin! You've embarrassed him."

"Oh that's okay! I'm just a little clumsy," said the ghost. He walked clumsily towards the children, who jumped because they were still kind of frightened. "You see, you kind of scared me when you came in. I was upstairs thinking about my problems."

"Well, perhaps we can help you. What are your problems?"

"First, a small problem," the ghost replied. "I have no name."

"That is a problem," said Kevin and Jean. "Have you ever thought of a name you'd like to have?"

"Well, no not really, but will you try and think of one for me?" the ghost said.

"Do you like the name Gus?" asked Jean.

"Oh yes! I love it, it's perfect. Oh good, good, good! My name is Gus, Gus the ghost. For once I have my own name all to myself! My next problem is I don't know how to float."

"You what?" Kevin and Jean exclaimed. "Every ghost knows how to float!" said Jean.

"Every ghost but me!" wept Gus. "One year ago on Halloween I went to this ghost party. They had all different kinds of games. One was to see which ghost could scare the most people. I ended up tripping over everything and goofing up all the time. When I got untangled from a clothline that this old lady hung me on thinking that I was one of her sheets that had blown away, I returned and found all the ghosts yelling and arguing over me. Finally the head ghost handed me this book." Gus brought out from behind him a four inch thick book titled "How to Be a Perfect Ghost." "They said I had to finish it before this Halloween and then come to the new ghost tryouts. If I goof it up, they won't accept me as a ghost. And since I can't float, I can't go!" cried Gus.

"Don't cry Gus, please!" Jean said politely.

"Well I'll try not to. But I just don't like scaring people. I want everyone to like me."

"Gus," Jean said looking at her watch. "we better go, it's getting late."

"Will I see you again?" asked Gus.

"Sure, replied Jean. "We'll come tomorrow right after school."

"Bye Kevin! Buy Jean!"

"Bye, said Kevin and Jean.

After the children left Gus ran upstairs and started to practice to float, but of course he failed. On the way home the children heard thump, thump, thud. They knew it was Gus.

That night they both dreamed about Gus. When they woke up they both thought that there never was a Gus the ghost. But after school they found out there was.

For about 10 days Kevin and Jean went to visit Gus. They didn't really think about the problem that Gus had, but they were always doing something with him that was exciting. He always taught them different kinds of games, new and old. About two days before Halloween Kevin came up with the solution. "I've got it! Gus, we can get you to the party."

"How?" asked Gus.

"Well, we just tie a couple of balloons around you and then tow you to the party!"

"Great! Oh you kids are wonderful! How can I ever repay you?" asked Gus.

"Well, after the new ghost tryouts you can go trick or treating."

"Oh I'd love to!" said Gus.

"Good, then it's set we'll take you to the tryouts, and you come trick or treating with us afterwards."

On Halloween, the children were busy getting their costumes ready. Jean was going to be a witch, and Kevin was going as a poor begger. Both of them were ready to leave by 5:30. They hid the balloons under Jean's hat. Gus met the children in the woods by the haunted house.

"Hi guys! I thought you might have backed-out on me." "Oh, Gus, we would never do a thing like that," said Jean.

"I know, I'm sorry," said Gus.

Kevin interrupted, "Come on, let's go. It's getting late."

"Okay, I'm ready."

First they tied one balloon, but it didn't do a thing. Next they tied two balloons around him, but that only brought him to about three inches above the ground. So they tied four balloons which was just perfect.

"Beautiful! You look just like a real ghost," said Kevin.

"Well, do remember I am a real ghost."

"Sorry, Gus," said Kevin.

"Hurry up," said Jean.

"We've got to go."

Gus gave them directions and they made it in 20 minutes.

"Where have you been?" the head ghost screamed. "We've been waiting for at least 10 or 15 minutes."

"I studied the book you gave me," said Gus, trying to change the subject.

"Oh shut up!" said the head ghost.

Then he called a meeting of the council. The children stared, wondering what would happen next.

"We have decided to keep you," said the head ghost after a while. Cheers came up from the children and Gus. "As long as you children help him learn his lessons."

"Oh we will, we will," said Kevin and Jean.

Then all the ghosts were invited to go trick or treating with Kevin and Jean. They all had a wonderful time and were friends for years to come.

Grant Helps Opera House Restoration

Fremont—The Dodge County Historical Society has received approval for a matching grant of $800 from the National Trust for Historic Preservation. The grant is for use in the society's opera house restoration project, according to Loeff Jorgensen, director of the Louis E. May Museum.

Jorgensen said the grant is for an architect's consulting fee for the year 1975. He said the society will engage an architect if and when it acquires the Opera House. "We are still trying to raise money — $20,000 to buy the building," said Jorgensen. He added that a purchase option agreement has run out and the building is "now on the open market."

"We are by no means close (to the $20,000)," he said. "We would prefer raising the $20,000 from two or three large contributors so we can save a city wide fund raising for actual restoration."

The opera house was recently added to the National Register of Historic Places, the only structure in Dodge County so listed. The National Register is the official inventory of sites, districts and objects worthy of preservation, said Jorgensen.

He continued that the National Preservation Act of 1966 also allows that a building on the National Register may qualify for federal matching grants.

'Lorelei' Soon Goes to London

New York (UPI) — Producers Lee Guber and Shelly Gross, who know a good thing when they have it are closing the Lorelei musical on Broadway Nov. 3, but they are merely putting it in theatrical mothballs for a time.

This retread of 1950's Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, starring, now and then, the tireless Carol Channing, has had quite a workout, and the end is not yet, the producers say.

The Nov. 3 closing comes after 328 Broadway performances: But before Broadway, the show toured nationally for 426 performances.

However, it did not get to all of the major cities on that tour, and they are on the agenda for the future. Not to mention London, where Miss Channing is a popular entertainer.

A London run is scheduled to begin early in 1975 after Miss Channing has fulfilled some television commitments.

Puppet Comedy Has Family Appeal

Puppet Paraphernalia, a puppet show for the entire family, will be staged at 3 p.m. today in Howell Theater, 12th & R Sts.

Sponsored by the UNL Theater Dept., the show was written and is performed by George Churley and Alan Nielsen.

The show — about puppets who go on strike and subsequently puppeteers who go on strike — contains comedy, satire and music. Two major songs in the show were written by Nielsen.

It has been performed 100 times since last October in 15 states throughout the country.

"The satire comes in there naturally," said Nielsen. "There is a lot in the show that adults get out of it that the kids can't possibly understand."

Churley added that "we can laugh at ourselves through the puppets" but insisted it is still a family show.

Ten hand puppets will be used with one being just the puppeteer's bare hands.

Both puppeteers have bachelor degrees in secondary education and have studied on advanced degrees. They combine 12 years of educational and professional theater experience.

Churley has 16 published and produced plays and Nielsen has acted in numerous professional, summer stock, community and college productions.

Photos Exhibited

Seward — Photographs of Ralph Eugene Meatyard are on display at Koenig Art Gallery on the Concordia College campus through Nov. 22. Meatyard studies at Illinois Wesleyan University and had photography classes with Van Deren Coke. Later the two photographers had a two-man show in New York City. Meatyard's photographs have appeared in several books, periodicals, public and private collections.

Faison Dance Experience Organist Here to Teach, Perform Faulkner To Perform

The George Faison Universal Dance Experience will participate in a three-day residency this week in Lincoln. The Wednesday through Friday residency will culminate in a public performance in Kimball Hall at 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the University of Nebraska cultural affairs committee, the residency here is funded in part by the Nebraska Arts Council through the National Endowment for the Arts.

The Faison company will present lecture-demonstrations at a number of Lincoln public schools and the Malone Center. There will be master classes at the University with drama and dance students.

The 12-member, all-black company reveals the whole of American Black Hisotry from its most joyous occasions to those of sadness and tragedy. The experience is not derived from African or Caribbean influences.

Choreographer George Faison has a flair for unusual themes and includes in the repertoire a tribute-in-dance to Billie Holiday entitled Reflections of a Lady. In the short span of three years he has made his Universal Dance Experience one of the country's most talked about dance companies.

It is dance about people on the street. The company seeks a fusion of social message and artistic mastery. Themes are taken from drug experiences, racial oppression, everyday tragedies and joys and the lives of historical persons.

Before establishing his own company in 1971, Faison was a principal dancer with the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater.

Organist, Musica Antiqua Perform in Church Series

A two-day festival of old and new music will be presented as part of the Abendmusik series at First-Plymouth Congregational Church, 20th and D, today and Monday at 8 p.m.

Tonight's concert features William Albright on both the organ and piano. An assistant professor of composition at the University of Michigan, he also is associate director of the electronic music studio there. He specializes in new music for organ and piano and is known as an interpreter of classic ragtime and early jazz styles.

Tonight's program includes two of his own compositions, one entitled Organbook I and the other Three Novelty Rags. He will also play O Susanna by Rush and Animations for Piano by Kurtaz. Al Romero, University of Nebraska percussion instructor, will join Albright on William Bolcum's Black Beat for organ, percussion and electronic tape. Bolcum and Joan Morris recently presented a program at the University.

Musica Antiqua will present a public performance Monday at 8 p.m. This 13-member group includes students and faculty of Iowa State University and Ames area residents. Musica Antiqua performs vocal and instrumental music of the Middle Ages and Renaissance, using replicas of instruments of those periods.

Recipient of National Arts Council grants through the Iowa Arts Council for five years, Musica Antiqua has made 150 appearances since its founding in 1967.

String Quartet Concert Tuesday

The Lincoln String Quartet will present a free public concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Nebraska Wesleyan University Elder Gallery, 51st and Baldwin.

The quartet, composed of Aleta and Morris Collier, violin and viola; Ruth Johnson, violin, and Carol Work, cello, will perform three quartets, each the first work in that form by the composers Schubert, Brezina and Bartok.

The recital by Quentin Faulkner, instructor of organ and music theory and history, is free to the public.

Faulkner earned a bachelor of music degree at Westminster Choir College, a master of sacred music and master of theology from Southern Methodist University and is completing work on a doctorate at Union Theological Seminary.

He holds the degree of associate of the American Guild of Organists and for three years has been assistant organist at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City.

His program will include Nova, composed by a retired NU professor of organ, Myron J. Roberts. Faulkner will also play the Offertoire from Francois Couperin's Parish Mass, Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach's Sonata II for Organ in F Major, Franz Tunder's variations on the communion chorale, Jesus Christ Our Savior, Who has Turned God's Wrath from Us, and Combat de la Mort et de la Vie, from Olivier Messiaen's Les Corps Glorieux.

Song Cycles Series Opens Next Sunday

The first in a series of four afternoons of song cycles will be presented in the auditorium of Sheldon Gallery, 12th and R, at 3 p.m. next Sunday.

The first free public program will open with the first song cycle ever written, according to pianist Cary Lewis, Nebraska Wesleyan University professor who helped organize the series. That "first" is Beethoven's Andie serne Getlebbe. Tenor Mark Madsen, also of the Wesleyan music faculty, will sing it.

Also on the Nov. 3 program are Frauenliebe und Lieben by Schumann, depicting the life of a woman. Mezzo soprano Judy Cole of the University of Nebraska will be the vocalist.

Three songs by Ravel, depicting the life of Don Quixote and sung by John Branstetter of the University of Nebraska School of Music, complete the first program.

The University of Nebraska Symphony Orchestra presents a free public concert at 3 p.m. today in Kimball Recital Hall, 11th and R. The orchestra will play the same program that it will perform Nov. 16 at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. It is a Charles Ives-Arnold Schoenberg program, marking the centennials of the birth of the two American composers.

The Printmaker Gallery Opens At 134 No. 14th

A new art gallery is open at 134 No. 14th. The Printmaker, an upstairs gallery, is under the directionship of Rosemary Kuehn and Barbara Kendrick, artists and printmakers.

The prints of Ms. Kuehn and Ms. Kendrick have appeared in local, regional and national exhibits. The aims according to the directors, is to incorporate a print workshop.

"It is a tradition. Artists coming together to work in various print media is an old one. In Europe and the eastern part of the country there are many such ateliers, but there are none in the state, I believe, and none in neighboring states," Ms. Kendrick said.

On exhibit until Dec. 2 are the works of Lincoln printmakers. The show includes prints by Robert Weaver and Michael Nushawg, plus several prints which have been exhibited in the National Student Printmakers show.

Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays, closed Mondays.

Ferris Show

On exhibit at First National Bank main lobby, 13th and M, are 16 paintings by Walton C. Ferris. The exhibit, mostly oils, runs through Nov. 9.

NU Orchestra Will Play Today

The University of Nebraska Symphony Orchestra presents a free public concert at 3 p.m. today in Kimball Recital Hall, 11th and R. The orchestra will play the same program that it will perform Nov. 16 at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. It is a Charles Ives-Arnold Schoenberg program, marking the centennials of the birth of the two American composers.

International Exhibit Slated

The International Display will be in the Main Lounge of the University of Nebraska Union, 14th and R, Wednesday through Friday. Clothing, art and crafts of various nations will be included in the exhibit. International Night at 8 p.m.

Friday will close the display. Songs, dances and skits may be seen in the main ballroom.

The event is open to the public.

Schubert's work is Quartet No. 1 in Flat composed in 1842. The Bartok work is Quartet No. 1, Op. 7.

The Lincoln String Quartet was formed in the early 1950s as an outgrowth of weekly chamber music reading sessions. Ms. Johnson was a member of the original group, and Morris Collier joined the group within a year. A year later, Ms. Work became the group's cellist.

Our Little Town Home Is Where Life Was Invested

By Gertrude Skinner

Superior
You can't go home again — a statement that most expatriates subscribe to. No doubt because nostalgic remembering things as they once were clouds one's vision with fantasizing. Therefore reality can be pretty disappointing to them.

But if you've gone home two or three times a month as I always have there's really no drastic change that you are not aware of. After having gone home to Superior for 38 years my position is now reversed. I'm going home to Ruskin with amazing frequency.

And why not? Ruskin is my home town. There is where many good friends are. There is where the greatest portion of my life is invested — an investment from which I derive much pleasure.

Any mention of Ruskin and my ears point like that of a hunting dog. Star Trek look out — I'm hearing and seeing a great deal of Ruskin these days.

Football, what else? Our eight-man team is plowing over and through adversaries like the canny Indians they are.

The sweet taste of victory is everywhere — on the playing field next to our little house (nostalgic remembering), in the postoffice, the grocery store, the filling station, the elevator and all up and down Main Street.

Ruskin is conditioned to win. For a small town it has more vitality than a hat full of jumping beans. It is both awake and aware.

One large implement firm closed its doors and neighboring towns predicted our doom. Sorry, folks. Another well known implement firm was waiting in the wings to move in — into one of Nebraska's choice, vital farm communities.

Some homes isolated and in disrepair are overshadowed by new homes, remodeled homes and mobile homes.

What keeps Ruskin perking? Why the people living there, of course. They care about and for each other and they DO something about it.

How lucky can an old lady with pointed ears be? Mighty lucky if she has two home towns such as mine.

Bellwomen Are Noticed

(c) New York Times

The annual "Bellman of the Year Contest" has changed its name to "The Bellman/Bellwoman of the Year Contest."

A spokesman for the American Hotel and Motel Assn., co-sponsor of the event with the Samsonite luggage people, said the contest's title was changed because "we've been getting an increasing number of 'bellwoman' nominations in recent years."

Kimball Hall Team Directed By Fowler

It might just tire the listener out to hear all the directions.

That is, the directions David Fowler, director of Kimball Recital Hall and vice director of the University of Nebraska School of Music, rattles off to a stage-crew member.

Yet, the personable Fowler is not the least bit flurried as he schedules rehearsals and performances, notes stage arrangements for both, and prepares ticket sales materials and talks to a visitor.

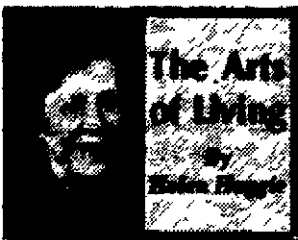

The burden of smooth scheduling and performances seemingly rests lightly on the genial director's shoulders.

Early All Stater

How he got involved in this work?

"I suppose it happened when we were planning and building Westbrook Music Bldg. and Kimball Hall I worked directly on equipment purchase. It was a question of knowing what we could and can do."

Fowler's background is not one which would seem to put him into the position he holds. A native of Fremont, he attended the second or third year of All State at the University in the 1930s.

A high school junior, he played the violin.

Past tense is correct, he said. "I haven't played in a long time. My boy, Dave, a Harvard graduate, is a violinist with Blue Grass Crusade and instructor of math at Nebraska Penal Complex. He has both my fiddles."

Two-Year Certificate

Fowler's first stint as a student at the University was for two years. When he earned a two-year teaching certificate in 1938, he went to Plattsmouth to teach.

There he met his wife the former Dorothy Glock of Plainview. He did the rest of his NU work to earn bachelor of music education and master of music during summer sessions. He taught instrumental music in Falls City and Humboldt; served in the China-Burma-India Theater during World War II, 1944-46. He also did a stint at the Martin Bomber Plant in Omaha.

Before he came to Lincoln to teach music at Northeast High School he had organized the Plattsmouth High School marching band.

In 1956, Fowler became assistant professor of music education at NU. "I worked with John (Moran), director of the music school) in All State from the time I came to the University until 1967. I do enjoy working with younger people and certainly with John," Fowler said.

Credit to Associates

Fowler likes to give credit to those associated with him in work at Kimball. "Ron Bowlin, coordinator for the University cultural affairs committee, is full-time this year — though he has been on the scene the two previous years on a part-time basis. He is an unusual kind of guy with a feeling and particular interest in the work."

"John Branstetter, who serves as a part-time house manager is very good."

"Tekla Monaghan is in charge of the ticket office and Tom Casker was designer for the two operas this year. We also have a fine group of students who work as stage crews."

This is the third full season of Kimball Hall programming and Fowler says it is only a little heavier than last year. He emphasizes that financing of many programs is based on the ticket sales; "all of us here on the faculty buy our own tickets for such performances."

Fowler is also "pleased with the progress made at Kimball Hall and very pleased with the support we have from the College of Arts and Sciences. This year the Fee Allocation Board has pledged money which makes it possible to keep student ticket prices low."

Graduate Administrator

As vice director of the School of Music, Fowler administers the graduate program. "There is so much expansion of administration that it does become time consuming," says Fowler a member of the Academic Planning committee. "There are lots of challenges in the graduate program. It is growing."

Fowler finds time to attend retraining and concert management workshops. "I like to try things that are new and a little different. I think these things make us tick."

Fowler said his son Steve (state senator) is "not really musical. Another son, John is in Kansas City finishing work at Midwestern Theological Seminary."

"William, an NU graduate, was a Vreeland winner in English. He's on the west coast writing and he plays the sax in a dance band."

"My wife plays the organ but she won't play for anyone. When I walk in the house, if she's playing, she stops."

The Kimball director dreams that the programs at the recital hall will broaden enough so that everyone will have an interest in some performances. "I hope for viable audiences and programs from blue grass through rock and chamber music. At the moment, I believe the greatest enthusiasm is in dance."

Fowler believes the esprit de corps among the faculty at Westbrook is a unique thing. "Everyone is so cooperative. I can't imagine a smoother relationship than the one John (Moran) and I have. We throw the problem into the air and see what can be done about it. And the whole school of music personnel has a can do attitude."

Omaha Exhibit Is Photographs Of Jerusalem

Omaha — Jerusalem, City of Mankind, a major international photographic exhibit which comes directly from New York, opens next Sunday at the Jewish Community Center, 333 So. 132nd.

The show had its world premier at the First International Triennial of Photography in Jerusalem in 1973. The black and white photographs portray Jerusalem in all its diversity through the image and comments of 21 distinguished photographers including Cornell Capa, Werner Braun and Marc Riboud.

The exhibition, which hangs through Nov. 21, is jointly sponsored by a grant from the Nebraska Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts.

New Exhibition At Haymarket

Opening next Sunday is an exhibition of works of Vivian Lindley and Nancy Peterson at the Haymarket Art Gallery, 119 So. 9th.

Ms. Lindley, an Omahan, is an alla prima oil painter who completes her landscapes and florals on the site.

Ms. Peterson, of Lincoln, is a graduate of the University of Northern Iowa. Her small ceramics, boxes, mirrors and other pieces are decorative as well as functional.

A reception will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. on opening day. The exhibit will hang until Nov. 25.

Concordia Jazz Concert Friday

Seward — The Concordia Jazz Ensemble will present a public concert at 8 p.m. Friday in Weller Auditorium at Concordia College. The program includes arrangements of Maple Leaf Rag, Another Shade of Blue, Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen, Never My Love.

Cafe Offers Danube View

(c) New York Times

The latest thing for diners who want to see the Danube while they eat is the Bystrica Cafe, which is perched atop a 270-foot-high pylon over the National Uprising Bridge at Bratislava, Czechoslovakia. The new circular restaurant seats 128 and commands a spectacular view of the city, the ancient capital of Slovakia, and of the river.

The menu includes grilled and flambe dishes and many cold specialties of Czechoslovakia. The average price of a meal with wine is about $10.

By Train, by Plane, By Bus, By . . . Golly It's a Husker Fan and "it is safe to say that people (along the line) imagined them victorious rather than defeated."

Many a Husker listened to the whine of the lonesome train whistle and went to sleep with the clickity-clack of train wheels adding to pre-game jitters.

Ed Schwartzkopf, supervisor of career development for Lincoln Public Schools, was on many of those train rides, including the famous Rose Bowl trip of 1941.

"Modern jet travel is much easier on a youngster," said Schwartzkopf, a guard on the Rose Bowl team and now a University regent. "Train travel got pretty tiresome. Now a player gets on a jet and gets to the game with his adrenalin really flowing and ready to go."

Train travel had its good side, though, Schwartzkopf remembered.

Getting Acquainted

"It was a great opportunity to get acquainted with the staff, and the press was usually right with the traveling party," he said.

Train trips were hard on the academic side of an athlete's college years. A typical road game to Pittsburgh, he recalled, meant leaving Wednesday afternoon and not getting back until Monday afternoon.

Some professors and deans would go along, said Schwartzkopf, who lettered in 1939, 1940 and after the war in 1946, but the learning sessions were informal.

"It was kind of like the modern concept of education," he said. "We talked informally and got to know them as individuals."

Entertainment wasn't easy to come by on long trips, according to Schwartzkopf, especially for the underclassmen.

Besides being responsible for junior and senior luggage, sophomores were obliged to hold skits.

But one fortunate thing for the luggage-carrying sophs and equipment managers was the team didn't change cars en route.

It usually took two or three cars to carry the Husker entourage, Schwartzkopf said, and the engines were changed, not the cars.

On a trip to Pittsburgh, the cars were pulled on the Burlington or Rock Island to Chicago, then transferred to the Pennsylvania Lines.

Outside of an occasional sophomore batting his eyes at a stewardess, en route workout schedules are another problem the jet-age Huskers don't face.

On trips to Pitt games, stopovers at Chicago were long enough to permit a quick workout in sweat clothes at Soldier Field.

Schwartzkopf, as a member of the Rose Bowl team, remembers a week of workouts at the luxury Camelback Inn in Phoenix to tune up for the big game against Stanford in Pasadena.

Another benefit jet travel has whizzed over, according to Schwartzkopf, is the travel experience gained by old-timers.

Historical Perspective

"Biff Jones (coach of the 1940 team that played in the Rose Bowl) was a great one for always providing historical perspectives and excursions for his players on trips," he recalled.

Players learned other things on trips, too.

Schwartzkopf recalled a story about his teammate Ray Prochaska, now an assistant coach with the Los Angeles Rams.

"None of us really had much money on those trips, and Ray was no exception. He was always afraid someone was going to steal his money. So on one trip he hid the 65¢ he had for the trip in his shoe."

"When he woke up in the morning, he looked in his shoe and woke everybody up trying to find out who had his money."

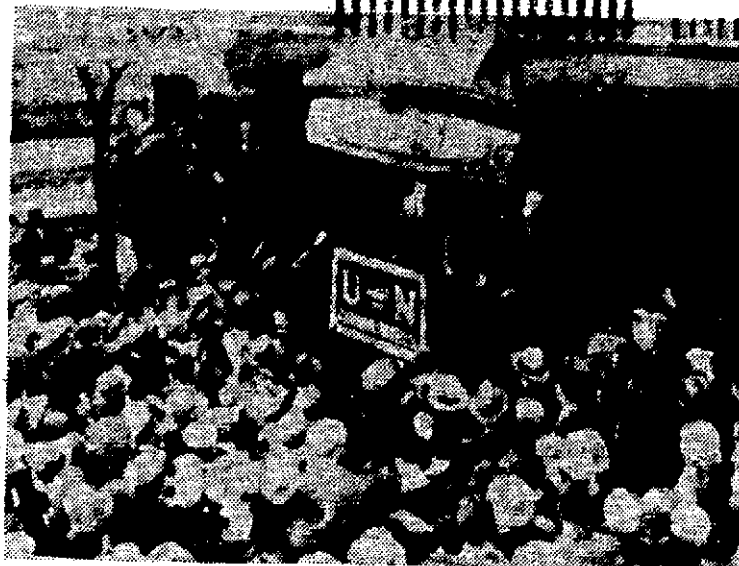

Apparently after several people had been bounced around the car by Prochaska, somebody asked him where he had put his shoes the night before.

It turned out he had put them on the floor under his bunk, and when the sleeping car porter came through, he picked them up, shined them and kept the 65¢, thinking it was a tip.

"Big Ray was too embarrassed to ask for it back," Schwartzkopf said.

John A. Cunningham, Union Pacific general traffic agent, was in charge of many migration trains during the fifties and early sixties. Some of the stories from those excursions are actually printable, he laughingly recalled.

He remembers the time three "prominent citizens" were on a Husker train to Oklahoma for the traditional rivalry with the Sooners.

The men were imbibing a bit, he said, and when the porter came through calling "everybody off" for Norman, the men continued to drink thinking the special train would be parked in Norman.

Cunningham said they were surprised when the train ended up in Purcell, Okla., farther down the line.

Purcell was "a small cattle town," Cunningham related, and when one of the men was sent out in a frantic search for transportation back to Norman and the game, his choices were few.

"The guy finally got a cattle truck for $25," said Cunningham, "and they all piled in the back which was covered with hay and manure."

Cordiality rooms were often set up in baggage cars for thirsty fans, and Cunningham said they were quite popular.

He recounted the time a Lincoln businessman was tending the bar. When it finally closed, he fell asleep on it.

"There was an ice cooler below him, and one of his feet slid into it," Cunningham said. "He really woke up in a hurry."

Cunningham has another story he says you'd believe if you'd ever been on one of the trains.

It seems a guy "who was feeling his oats" was sitting in the men's room bemusing the fact he didn't have a blade in his razor.

Another Husker fan teetered in and said he needed a shave. The first guy was explaining he didn't have a blade in his razor, when the second man picked it up, lathered his face and shaved.

He rinsed his face, thanked him for the "best shave he'd ever got" and walked out. After the door closed, the first guy shrugged, lathered up and shaved.

Cunningham feels there would still be riders if trains could be provided.

"It was something the people really enjoyed," he said. "We always had a crowd, even when we weren't winning. It kept Nebraska spirit alive."

Civic groups, travel agencies and even churches have organized migrations. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Letheby, 7240 Aylesworth, have organized bus trips for members of their Lincoln church and other friends.

Enthusiasm pressed the crowd against the observation car of the Cornhusker Special before it left Lincoln's Burlington station for the 1928 battle with Army at West Point. But the trip's end was a sour note when Army upset Nebraska 13-3. The Huskers won seven games that season and tied Pittsburgh, and reports were that the Army loss cost Nebraska a bid for the 1929 Rose Bowl.

Mrs. Letheby recalled the time they were supposed to leave at 7:30 a.m. for Ames for an Iowa State battle, but, unknown to them, the bus broke down on the way to the church.

They waited and waited, until the assistant pastor opened the church. She didn't say if prayer did it, but the bus finally came at about 9 a.m. and they made it to Ames in time for the game.

Harold E. Mischnick, former operations superintendent for Continental Trailways bus system and now with Lincoln Tour & Travel, said buses also have a long history of migration duty.

He said 20 buses are chartered for most Nebraska games, and expected 30 more would be chartered if they were available.

He said many unusual things happen on game trips, but the most unusual one is hard to believe — though it's true, he stresses.

It seems a driver was cruising along the interstate at about 70 m.p.h. when a passenger staggered to the front.

"Somebody fell out the window," the tipsy passenger said. At first the driver was skeptical, but another passenger reported the same.

The drive turned the bus around and headed back frantically.

Sure enough, a man had become sick and leaned too far out the window. Amazingly, Mischnick said, the man was walking calmly up the highway uninjured.

Not all migrations are happy ones. Veterans of the 1968 Boulder migration can testify to that. A giant snowball fight, including the use of Big Red Band hats as targets, was called a draw. But not before several people were injured.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Stevenson of Omaha have had many good experiences of migrations, but they remember a bad incident at Iowa State.

Mrs. Stevenson was hit on the head with an orange and spent the night in Ames with a headache. The injury was only temporary, and Mrs. Stevenson said the fact Big Red won the game 14-12 helped.

Visions of No. 1 may have gone out the door this year with the Wisconsin and Missouri setbacks, but Nebraska's No. 1 fans will probably continue to roll on, fly on and keep on cheering.

Antique Coffee Urns In Sheldon Display

One word which typifies elegance in antique English silver is Sheffield.

And coming to Sheldon Art Gallery on the University of Nebraska campus is a 175-piece collection of antique silver from the Folger Coffee Co. of Kansas City.

After a gala opening the evening before for members of the Nebraska Art Assn., the exhibition will be open to the public from Nov. 5 through Dec. 1.

The collection is housed in the company's museum. The exhibit to be seen here includes coffee pots and urns, creamers and sugars, miniature coffee sets, examples of Sheffield and accessories connected with the serving of coffee.

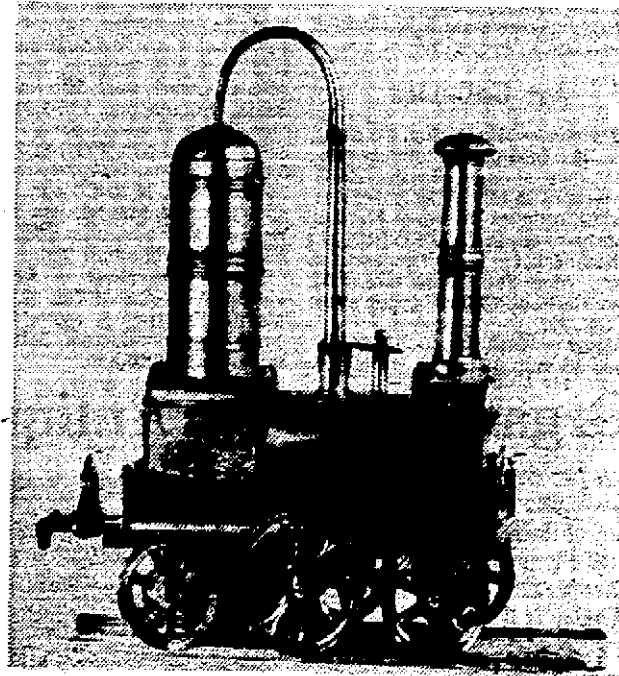

Coffee, tea and chocolate reached the shores of England during the reign of Charles II — 1660 to 1685. Popularity of the beverages sparked the country's great silver age, 1700-1825.

So great was the interest in silver that silversmiths from France and Holland, especially the Huguenots who fled from religious persecution, were welcomed in England.

Among the refugees was Paul de Lamerie, one of the outstanding designers and silversmiths of all time. The great houses in England prided themselves on their coffee and tea sets. In the third decade of the reign of George II the French rococo style becomes evident.

George I beverage fountain.

This silver coffee maker stands 19 inches tall.

Among the pieces to be on exhibit is a George IV coffee maker in the form of a railway engine. And a piece of pure elegance is a George I beverage fountain by Thomas Farrer. The arms engraved on the piece are those of Archibald, first Earl of Roseberry.

By Mary Somerville
Chief, Young People's Services
Lincoln City Libraries

From soft-drink ads to essays on education, the prevailing wisdom suggests that young people are interested only in what's happening now. "Give them relevant titles about current social concerns," everyone argues. "They won't touch yesterday's books on Elizabethans."

There is a great deal of truth in these assertions, but I wonder whether apathy toward the past is so new. Even in my day, which is ancient history, children did not easily approach what has been. We also demanded that history, and historical fiction be above the humdrum.

Fortunately for the current generation, new children's books present the past with more verve. It is no small praise to say that Elizabeth Pope's The Perilous Gard (Houghton Mifflin) was recommended by a young reviewer.

In her forthcoming piece for the LCL Jr. Critic, 15-year-old Nancy Gunderson said: "This is one of the best novels I've read in a long time. The plot was built carefully, events lapped over each other and the story kept moving along. I would hope that many people would read and enjoy this book. I think almost anybody would enjoy it."

A Gothic romance, The Perilous Gard records what happens to Kate Sutton after she is banished from the queen's court to a remote castle with underground caverns where fairies dwell. Along with these fanciful elements, the story offers a taste of Tudor times: court intrigues, clammy castles and horseback rides over rutted country roads.

Containing more humor and less romance, Leon Garfield's The Sound of Coaches (Viking) crashes its way through 18th Century England. Picaresque hero Sam Chichester, father unknown, becomes the child of a coachman and his wife after his natural mother dies in childbirth. The only clues to his parentage are a fine pistol and ring, bound in a barber's box.

How Sam grows to manhood — albeit without much heroism — gets affiliated to a chamber-maid named Jenny and locates his real father are the main threads of the plot.

Aside from things British, American history gains a new significance now that the bicentennial is near. We can be grateful that younger children can feast their sense on these books: And Then What Happened, Paul Revere? by Jean Fritz (Coward, McCann & Geoghegan), The Star-Spangled Banner by Peter Spier (Doubleday) and The Star-Spangled Banana and Other Revolutionary Riddles by Charles Keller and Richard Baker (Prentice-Hall). All three titles provide humor, marvelous illustrations, and a flavor of what life was like for early Americans.

In the vein of Tom Sawyer, Robert Peck's Soup (Knopf) shows kids what it must have been like to grow up in the Vermont countryside during the 1920s and 1930s. Two boys' homespun pranks, such as smoking acorn pipes and tying up Aunt Carrie, elicit laughter and a welcome nostalgia for the past.

A Cruel Distortion of Today's Caril Ann Fugate

Caril. By Ninette Beaver, B. K. Ripley and Patrick Trese; Lippincott.

The woman on the dust cover looks like she has some 40 years of hating behind her. She is standing next to a prison fence.

A few spikes are blown free of her short, dark shag. Her brows cut a curve that seems to square rather than round out her face. Her eyes, where depth may lie, are narrow and dark and so icy it is a relief to have them looking out of the picture and not at you.

That is the portrait with which the J.B. Lippincott Co. introduces you to its new book Caril by Ninette Beaver, B.K. Ripley and Patrick Trese.

It's superb photography, but it's not good reporting. The picture is a cruel distortion of Caril Ann Fugate as she is today.

The book, presenting Caril as an innocent hostage of Charles Starkweather, is equally distorted. People who lived in Lincoln at the time just don't remember Caril as the wide-eyed, teeny-tiny girl — maybe even a typical teen-ager — who is depicted here.

And the authors' unrealistic explanations of why she may have been innocent in the face of rather overwhelming evidence to the contrary don't come off convincingly.

The complete story of the Starkweather-Fugate crimes has never been told. With Caril, it still hasn't.

Poorly edited and in some ways shallow, it is pseudo-biography, pseudo-documentary. It lacks objectivity. Except for verbatim testimony at trials and in statements and interviews, it is not very well written.

Caril should have had more research. With the exception of the KMTV coverage used as a vehicle for the tale, little that was not known to most reporters covering the event at the time is used.

Caril's early life should have been explored — Charlie's, too, and how they became a pair. More information, even if only questions, about the murders should have been included.

Despite being under contract with the authors (which has kept her from granting other interviews), Miss Fugate does not give an eyewitness account of the crimes.

She wanted to talk about the murders under "truth serum," the authors explain. Since prison authorities denied that request, she chose not to discuss them until after her release from prison.

Ninette Beaver, an Omaha TV reporter, interviewed Caril before her trial. B. K. Ripley is a medical writer and author of Who Is That Lady in the President's Bed? Patrick Trese is a producer-writer for NBC News and the author of a novel, Penguins Have Square Eyes.

Their book is divided into three sections: the crimes, the trials and the punishment.

With the suspenseful story of 10 murders to tell, space, instead, is devoted to patting KMTV's staff on the back.

The reconstructed reporter conversation and reactions are so unrealistic as to be professionally embarrassing. Says a newscaster callously at one point, talking about the case that left a community shaking: "It was a good story while it lasted, but it's over."

And the naivete of another staffer's comment that "trials based on insanity pleas are always the same" is hard to believe.

(The authors point out that the conversation was reconstructed "with casual profanity om-

Caril Fugate

mitted." Shades of expletives deleted, by gosh!)

Lack of objectivity weakens the book's case for Caril's innocence. The authors didn't look at all the evidence, nor did they follow both prosecution and defense thoroughly to reach the conclusion that Caril couldn't have done it. Mrs. Beaver simply stuck with the defense.

The second part of the book, the trials, is the best and the most sensational for those who want details.

The many pages of testimony re-create the drama of the event. Descriptions of Caril's "masklike expression" and her voice, "staccato, rapid, propelled from quickly close tight lips," present an accurate picture of her in court.

But the TV reporter talk is still there to explain things. Example: Following Charlie's electrifying testimony that Caril sat and watched TV while he disposed of her family's bodies and had had many occasions to leave, the authors write:

"Ninette Beaver made a grimace. That's really hurt her, Mark. I guess that's the worst thing that could have happened."

"What? Charlie testifying? I don't think so, Ninette. Yes, it's pretty gory stuff, but, after all, it's Charlie talking. And as much as the crowd may like to hear him give all the details, they still know that Charlie is a liar. He can say anything today, and he might change the whole thing tomorrow."

Contrast this with: Defense attorney Clement Gaughan: "Charlie, you have been accused of a lot of alleged acts concerning the death of a considerable number of people. Why did you kill those people, Charlie?"

"The ones I killed?"

"Yes."

"I thought I was killing them in self-defense."

"You killed them all in self-defense?"

"The ones I killed, yes."

"Charlie, in your confession pertaining to the Jensen case, right after you left the cave out there — I think your confessions said that you were mad at Caril about something. I don't think those were the exact words, but you were mad at her. What were you mad at her about, Charlie?"

"What she did."
"And what did she do there?"
"Shot Carol King."

The final section of the book tells about Caril's growing up in prison. It gives kudos to the network documentary of that title, of which the book is an outgrowth.

Despite some interesting material, however, there's no real insight into what prison life is like, and some of the details are wrong.

Even though it takes her part, I doubt that Caril, is pleased with the book's publication.

She has grown into a different person in prison.

She is a warmer, softer individual than she was earlier and she looks much younger than her 31 years.

She would like to forget the horrors of her adolescence. Caril, though anticipated, must have been a shock.

Airlines Fish Hard For Europe Fares

By John Justin Smith
(c) Chicago Daily News

A neighbor who has developed a fondness for spoiling himself each year with a visit to Europe groaned about air fares.

"They're going up again," he said, correctly.

"This means my wife and I will have to stay home this year," he said, incorrectly.

The proper statement is that if you could afford a trip across the Atlantic last year and have the same money to spend this year, you can still go. You may have to settle for something less expensive in the way of accommodation — or you may not.

In some few cases, you may even find things a little less expensive. So shop.

As of Nov. 1, over-the-Atlantic fares are up once more because of increased fuel costs, making the rise for the year about 35%.

Nobody knows this better than the airlines, who have nightmares of flying jets to Europe with more empty seats than full ones.

Take the case of SAS Scandinavian Airlines, which advertised bravely during the summer: "We could all use a little Scandinavia this year."

The opposite also is true. The Scandinavians could use a few more American tourists too.

Anker Palvic, an SAS manager, knows this full well. So he is able to report that the airline has been working with hotels and tour operators to create tour packages that are not highly inflationary.

One such package offers seven nights in Copenhagen (including hotel room with bath, continental breakfasts, daily sauna, service charges and taxes, transfers to and from the airport and a "day-on-the-Danes" freebie package) for $70 for the week. This is the same price as last year.

A similar package to Stockholm, $100 last year, is being offered for $100 this winter.

Clay & Paper Show at Ames

Ames, Iowa — Artists living within a 500-mile radius of Ames may participate in the fifth annual Clay and Paper Show at the Octagon Art Center here in January. Awards will be in four categories — clay, photography, prints and drawing. Jurors include Paul Soldner for clay and Rudi Pozzatti for paper. Information concerning entry may be obtained from The Octagon, 232½ Main St., Ames.

SAS has other new packages (travel agents know about them) covering tours to Oslo, Helsinki, Moscow, Leningrad and lots of other places.

This is not all. Other airlines have been coming up with packages designed to get you overseas or elsewhere. Some examples:

— Trans World Airlines has a new "Hotelpass" voucher system guaranteeing you a room in 29 European cities for $12 a night, double occupancy ($17 single). You get a room with a bath, continental breakfasts and service charges at this price. Typical of the hotels used is the new Penta Hotel in Paris. If you have a Hotelpass voucher, you must notify your hotel before 3 p.m. that you want a room for the night. If none is available, one will be arranged for you at the same price at another hotel.

— British Airways has a whole new series of packages, including a London show tour ($70 for the week) that includes more than you are likely to believe: seven nights' lodging, Continental breakfasts, service charges and taxes, a series of theater tickets, a bus tour to Oxford, cocktails and wine at certain restaurants, a guidebook, a $7 meal ticket that will allow two to eat for the price of one, a party, a Thames River cruise, a discotheque membership, gifts, shopping discounts, a rental car for a day and other discounts and sightseeing.

These prices, of course, do not include air fares.

How high are they?

Well, as stated, they are going to be 35% higher than last year — but the airlines are working on that, too. With luck, they'll be coming up with fares that are lower than a year ago for those willing to book and pay for trips 60 days in advance.

Hang in there with your travel agent on these pay-in-advance fares.

'Dracula' Dinner Hastings Fare

Hastings — The horror novel Dracula is being dramatized as a Hastings College Theater production. Director Dr. Hal Shiffler said eight performances are planned in the studio theater. Remaining performances are at 2 and 8 p.m. today and 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

With this production dinner theater comes to Hastings; a buffet is being served on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the theater scene shop prior to the performances.

Shiffler said Ted Tiller's dramatization of Bram Stoker's Dracula includes some comic moments, but it is not recommended for grade school children.

$2 Billion For Music To Replay

(c) Chicago Daily News

In case you've ever wondered just how big the music business really is, Billboard's International Buyer's Guide reports that 1973's total record and tape sales came to $2,017,000,000.

LPs accounted for $1.25 billion, singles for $190 million, and tapes for $581 million.

By far the largest kind-of-music category was popular, adding up to 65.6 per cent of all record sales. Soul music made up 14.6 per cent of sales, country music 10.5, classical came in at 6.1 per cent. Surprisingly, jazz accounted for only 1.3 per cent.

Over-all, at an average list price of $5.98, Billboard estimates that 208 million LPs were sold last year.

Peyton Place Alums Separated

By Vernon Scott
Hollywood (UPI) — Only Christopher Connelly of the original Peyton Place television series cast can be found today — five years later — still starring in a weekly show.

His is one of the best performances of the new season in ABC's Paper Moon, the half-hour situation comedy version of the successful movie.

Connelly hasn't even heard from other alumni of Peyton Place, the soap opera that enjoyed a run from 1964-69.

Mia Farrow has become a sometime movie star, living in England with husband Andre Previn and her children. Dorothy Malone lives in Texas and takes occasional acting roles.

Barbara Parkins enjoyed a flurry as a busy movie star and is now appearing less frequently on the big screen.

Ed Nelson is still a working actor. Pat Morrow is studying for her law degree and may enter politics.

Superstar Ryan O'Neal is doing best of all. And therein lies a curious chain of events. O'Neal played Connelly's brother in Peyton Place. They were Rodney and Norman Harrington.

O'Neal and his daughter, Tatum, starred in the screen version of Paper Moon. Little Tatum won the Oscar for best supporting actress.

Now that Connelly is playing the role of Moses Pray, originated by his erstwhile co-star, there are comparisons of their performances, their appearances and careers.

"Funny thing," said Connelly, stroking the wispy mustache he has cultivated for the series, "about four years ago I read the book, Addie Pray, on which Paper Moon is based. I discovered paramount owned film rights and had a six-figure price tag on it.

"I couldn't put that on my credit card. I gave up. And when the picture was made I thought that was the end of it. Then a year after the movie came out I heard ABC was going to base a TV show on the story.

"I had my agent contact Paramount and the network. I really wanted to play Moses Pray. I was rejected by Paramount. Somebody there didn't like me. But I met a Paramount executive at a party and he asked if I could play a 35-year-old man with an 11-year-old girl."

Connelly got the message. But he blew his first screen test.

Thereafter he went to see the movie version of Paper Moon starring Ryan O'Neal. "I thought Tatum was great," he said. "Ryan was very good."

Connelly, an energetic, likable man with an outgoing personality, hadn't seen the picture earlier because he didn't want to see someone else in a role he thought was tailor-made for himself.

The second test for the part turned out somewhat better. And after a suspenseful two or three weeks he was given the series.

"I knew I'd be compared to Ryan," Connelly said. "And it's more than two actors playing the same role because of our association in 'Peyton Place.'"

Connelly and O'Neal are not friends despite their training years together in the old soap opera.

"The only contact I had from Ryan was through Tatum when I saw her at the Academy Awards earlier this year," Connelly said. "She told Dottie Foster (the 11-year-old actress in the series) that her father said to say hello to me. That's it."

Connelly is delighted with his role and the popularity of the series which is filmed entirely on location. The first 13 episodes were photographed in Hayes, Kan. The next 13 are being shot in Texas.

"We only have one problem," Connelly concluded. "We're opposite The Waltons."

San Francisco (UPI) — The trolley is coming back to San Francisco.

The city has ordered 345 new electric trolley coaches for its municipal railroad system. Advocates of the trolleys persuaded officials that trolley lines are less harmful to the environment than gas buses.

Bailey Moves on To Movies

By Bob Thomas

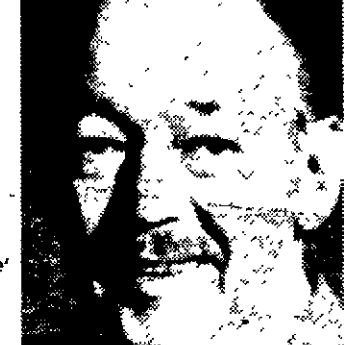

Los Angeles (AP) — The face is still round and puckish, the wit sharp and outrageous.

But instead of dispensing posies and plunder to the Queen for a Day Jack Bailey is wielding a paint brush and playing drunks in movies.

"Funny thing, my playing drunks," he muses, "since I haven't had a drink since Oct. 8, 1948."

Bailey's trimmed mustache and balding pate were familiar to millions of housewives during his 20-year run in radio and television with Queen for a Day. By the time the show had shut down 10 years ago, he had crowned more than 5,000 queens and bestowed $23 million worth of merchandise.

The emcee-actor talked about his life with Queen for a Day and afterward during an interview at the Disney studio.

Jack Bailey

He had just finished a role as a board member of a cereal company owned by Eve Arden in the latest supernatural comedy, The Strongest Man in the World.

"It's the first time I've gone legit in quite a while," Bailey reflected. "Mostly I've been playing drunks in films like How to Seduce a Woman and series like Police Story and Emergency." A man who can tell the date of his last drink more than 25 years ago might seem to have had a drinking problem. True. Bailey did not hesitate to talk about it.

"I drank because I liked to drink," he said. "The tendency certainly wasn't inherited, because my mother was Iowa state president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union."

"I was never a mean drunk who started fights in bars. I just became thick-tongued and slow-talking, and in radio that clock on the studio wall wouldn't wait."

How did he break out of the alcoholic haze?

"I decided it was either me or the jug. And a group of friends helped me a lot."

Bailey continued a sober path with Queen for a Day until 1964, when ABC summarily pulled the plug.

Since then he has kept busy not only in films but as a star in summer theaters and dinner theaters. He has appeared in such shows as Hello, Dolly, Take Me Along, Show Boat and Generation.

He has also had success as a painter. His instruction kit, How to Brush Your Cares Away is distributed by Pepperdine University's Home Study Institute.

Medical Series Has Sugar Coat

By Eric Newhouse

New Orleans, La. (AP) — The same folks who brought you Sesame Street and The Electric Company now proudly present a sugar-coated pill for adults on the PBS television network.

Called Feeling Good, the 26-program series starting Nov. 20 will plug preventative medicine.

Children's Television Workshop unveiled its new show her last week at the 102nd annual meeting of the American Public Health Association.

"We're trying to motivate people in their own behalf," explained CTW spokesman Eliot Tozer.

"We hope to reach several million people, but to do that we have to be entertaining enough to make them turn on their television sets week after week."

Thus, PBS viewers will be treated to a comedian Bill Cosby remembering how his brother Russell looked when he got the whooping cough and was advised to raise his leg each time he coughed to prevent a hernia.

"But nowadays there is no whooping cough," Cosby concludes. "Not if you've had your shots."

Or sportscaster Howard Cosell saying, "To be a winner in life, you've got to have all the shots," as the viewer watches player after player sinking baskets.

The series, funded mainly by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, covers mental health, heart disease, weight control, nutrition, alcohol abuse, high blood pressure and other topics.

"We filmed a sequence on breast cancer last spring, but events have outrun us," Tozer said.

Naughty Marietta

New York (UPI) — The light opera of Manhattan, an off-Broadway operation that has specialized for years in revivals of the Gilbert and Sullivan comic operas, will make a slight detour March 5 to revive Victor Herbert's Naughty Marietta, a 1910 relic with a memorable score.

Petrocelli Is Finn And Hero

Hollywood (UPI) — Albert Salmi, so far as he knows, is the only prominent actor in the world of Finnish extraction — and he may be seen weekly costarring in the Petrocelli series.

A familiar face in movies and television, Salmi is no superstar and probably never will be. But in Finland, he is a hero.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., where he was reared in what he calls a Finnish ghetto, Salmi now lives with his wife, Roberta, and daughters, Elizabeth, 10, and Jennifer, 9, in Brentwood, a fancy Los Angeles suburb.

Salmi and Roberta admire genuine antique furniture, selecting every piece with care. Their home is a showcase of excellent furnishings.

In order for him to star in the new NBC-TV adventure series, it was necessary for Salmi to move away from his comfortable surroundings to live six months a year in a hotel room in Tucson, Ariz.

That's where the Petrocelli

Albert Salmi

show is filmed on location.

There is no opportunity to spend his weekends at home because the series films six days a week.

The actor enjoys nothing more than being approached by Finns who recognize his name as being Finnish. When they ask for his autograph, Salmi speaks to them in flawless Finnish.

Both his parents were born in the Old Country and Salmi has never forgotten the family's native tongue.

"I'm proud of my heritage," Salmi says, "and I get a big kick out of being a hero in the land of my father and mother."

Dick, Bill Spin Records, Yarns for Early Risers

By Holly Spence

Like a courtship, "it was love at first sight," joked Dick Perry of his radio partnership with Bill Wood.

These two personalities of the Dick and Bill Show have been spinning records and yarns and chatter on KFOR in the early morning slot for the last 12 years.

Although two-voice shows aren't as popular as they were in the mid 1950s, both find the two-man format a success and added Perry, "we've never had a fight about the show."

Wood first began at KFOR as a production director and on-the-air personality and Perry was originally hired as the news director.

"I didn't spend a day in news," said Perry, who also does the sports broadcasting for KFOR. Early morning hours are trying after games, especially the late basketball clashes, he said.

Although the music for the Dick and Bill Show is pre-selected, they do their own engineering and provide off-the-cuff patter for their listening audience.

Both prefer the morning slot, although Perry comes in an hour later than Wood, at 6:30 a.m. Wood said he tried broadcasting at home with Perry at the studio when he was filling in a couple of air slots.

"It was short-lived because we need the eyeball contact," he said.

Perry pegs their audience as "more mature" although he feels that it is "widening out — we're not 22 years old, you know," he said.

Their music is "pretty contemporary — a little sweeter and softer" than the rest of the day and the jokes and stories "just happen."

"We both read a lot and some people just feel sorry for us and send us jokes," chuckled Wood. "And we both scan the papers and wires every morning."

They receive many calls to work together as masters of ceremony or toastmasters, but rarely appear on the same program.

Wood has "Golden Days of Radio," a cassette tape of actual segments from old radio programs plus his own narrative. And, of course, Perry is a favorite on the sports circuit.

Even though they are asked to help many charities, the two radio personalities have a "pet project" in Camp Floyd Rogers, a camp for diabetics.

There are not too many guests on the Dick and Bill Show (formerly the Musical Clock) anymore because of time and space limitations.

One of their favorite on-air activities is the Big Red Breakfast, which they do live from the Villager complex.

"We used to take it on the road with the Huskers" said Perry, adding that because of the out-of-town success, they decided to do it on Husker territory.

Between 300 and 500 usually attend the breakfasts and "every year it builds."

The twosome talks to the fans, visiting newsmen and broadcasters, government officials, parents of the players and other visiting dignitaries and personalities. A pep band provides the Husker breakfast music and there are often prizes.

This activity is a favorite and a challenge, said Perry, because for three hours they don't have a turntable of music to turn to like they have in the studio. The Nebraska State Fair, where they do remote broadcasts, is also a favorite because they get to meet people from all over the state.

Wood and Perry are also exposed to the public through cooking schools, fishing contests, patio fun fair, bike races and special nights at various locations in the city.

This six-day-a-week venture certainly boasts two stalwarts if attendance records are taken into consideration.

"I think I can honestly say the show has never been late," said Wood, with Perry adding he has missed 1½ days for illness in all these years and Wood was in Cozad for a short time six years ago.

When Wood went to the Stuart station, a lot of station personalities sat in on the show.

"But it never seemed to work; there wasn't that rapport," noted Perry. "I was delighted when he returned."

Despite the camaraderie of their partnership, they don't socialize but give their wives a lot of credit because of their frequent absences from home.

The format for the show hasn't changed much since it began although the music has changed with the times.

"We like to mention names — that's one of the secrets of the show," said Perry. "Actually, management gives us wide-ranging freedom."

Although they both admit they would always like to talk more — "we used to get reminded" (to talk less) — they feel that they have "a pretty good mix," said Wood.

"We never have a feeling that we don't have an audience," said Perry. "But sometimes the well does run dry."

But one of the fascinations with radio, said Perry, is that the imagination of the listener runs rampant.

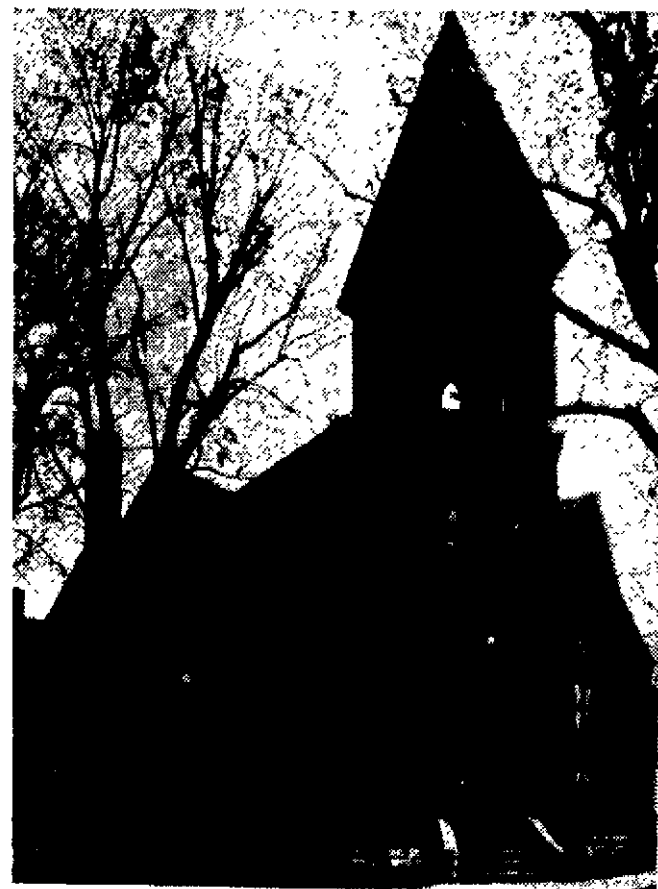

"There is still an innovativeness about radio," he said. "But away from the business, we'd both rather fish."

This building is still used as a church today; a successor congregation to the one that built this building is observing the 25th anniversary of occupancy elsewhere today.

Last Week's Picture

For many adults the good old days might be represented in this picture of "football specials" lined up at the Burlington depot. The picture, from the James C. Seacrest Collection, is dated Oct. 11, 1961. It shows parts of three trains that carried Cornhusker fans from Omaha, plus another (far right) that brought rooters from the McCook area. Altogether there were 55 coaches and nine locomotives in the consist of the four trains.

Oh yes. The score that day was Nebraska 6, Syracuse 28. It was the last season played under coach Bill Jennings. Other losses were to Oklahoma State, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and Oklahoma. Victories were over North Dakota, Kansas State and Iowa State; there was a tie with Arizona.

107 years ago this week

1867: A Lincoln resident said it still took a fabulous number of mint juleps to remove the taste of Salt Basin water from one's mouth even though a group of 250 missionaries had spent two years making salt for their subsistence.

100

1874: Several people were beginning to voice worries that with an annual slaughter of about 210,000 buffalo, the animals would soon be extinct.

Chicago merchants were forming a Nebraska State Aid Society to solicit aid for grasshopper plague victims.

90

1884: The Lincoln Cricket Club defeated Hastings by 35 runs. The city waterworks laid pipes to the University of Nebraska campus.

80

1894: A meeting of the Lancaster County Bar Assn. was called to discuss action to forestall alleged incidents of jury-bribing and jury-tampering.

70

1904: Mayor Adams signed the resolutions directing the execution of contracts for a new municipal lighting plant. Lancaster County was being redistricted to provide solid rural mail delivery.

60

1914: The Lincoln Manufacturers' Assn. endorsed the proposed workman's compensation law to be voted on that autumn.

Prof. George Elliott Howard of the department of political science and sociology at the University of Nebraska said he did not oppose Sunday baseball games if they were limited to non-residential areas. Sunday baseball was a current municipal issue.

Old Nebraska

1924: The City Council ordered the city engineer to plan for the installation of automatic traffic signal lights at 12 of Lincoln's busiest intersections.

A majority of the City Council voted against use of power machinery to clean the city streets on the grounds that there were already too many unemployed men.

40

1934: Congressman John N. Norton told a University of Nebraska convocation that a unicameral legislature would place more responsibility on the legislator, involve less log rolling and less expense, and result in greater efficiency and responsiveness to the public will. The Antelope Park Zoo opened.

30

1944: Prof. J. P. Colbert, chairman of the University of Nebraska consultation board for returned veterans and ex-war workers, said that practically every college and university in the nation was preparing to aid returning service men and women gain schooling.

20

1954: Gov. Robert Crosby said Nebraska's population growth during the early 1950's was encouraging and blamed the losses during the 1930's and 1940's on the rapid mechanization of agriculture.

The Howell Memorial Theater at the University of Nebraska was dedicated.

1964: The Nebraska Supreme Court declared that a amended "bottle club" law passed earlier in 1964 at a special session of the Legislature was unconstitutional and void and that two Lincoln city ordinances providing for the act's regulation were also void because they were inconsistent with the Nebraska Liquor Control Act.

Howard ("Tell It Like It Is") Cosell is making plans to branch out from sports on ABC-TV. He'll head up a variety show for the network. That may pose a problem for Howard: Will he tell it like it is when one of the acts stinks up the show? (Knowing Cosell, he will!).

marriage to RCA Board chairman Bob Sarnoff.

ABC-TV offered Julie Nixon Eisenhower a role on the new AM America morning show, debuting in January. But she declined, with thanks, explaining, "I'm not ready to make a TV commitment at this time."

The role of women in the Ford administration may be increased tremendously as a result of the conference between presidential aide Anne Armstrong and Mrs. Joe (Muriel) Nellis, wife of the D.C. attorney. Mrs. Nellis urged establishment of an undersecretary of HEW for women's affairs, encompassing the entire spectrum of milady's affairs. French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing set the pattern for Mrs. Nellis' proposal when he named Mrs. Francoise Giraud to his cabinet.

Brown Book Aids Coin Identification

By Joe Planas
Special Writer
The 11th edition of A Catalog of Modern World Coins by R.S. Yoeman should be a part of the astute numismatist's foreign coin library.

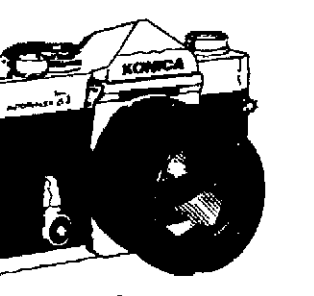

One index lists all the countries covered in the book and another index lists all coin denominations and the various countries that issue them. This makes it relatively easy for even the novice collector to identify foreign coins.

In addition, all coins are grouped by metallic content, design type, and denomination, and the universally accepted ("Y") number is placed beside each coin.

The Brown Book, as the Catalog of Modern World Coins often is called, has a new section on "Precious Metal Content of World Coinage," this gives information on calculating the bullion value of many gold and silver coins of the world from 1850 to 1950.

Fire Costs
Fire costs 12,000 American lives and $11 billion in property damage yearly, according to Rick Gongs of the Fire Equipment Manufacturers Assn.

Information about the club and its program may be obtained by writing Lincoln Stamp Club, Box 80951, Lincoln, NE 68501.

New Scout Stamp

Ever since Lord Baden-Powell organized the first Boy Scout troop in 1907, this viable youth organization has been expanding to all corners of the globe and now can claim scouting troops in more than 60 countries. Since that time, illustrations of Scouts on stamps and commemoratives honoring their progress have been issued by most of these countries.

The latest two Scout sets come from far away Fiji and Malaysia. Fiji honors its 1st National Scout Jamboree held at Natabua, Lautoka. The 3-cent stamp depicts a Cub Scout preparing a fire for cooking. The 10-cent shows Scouts checking out their course on a map. The 40-cent bears different Scout uniforms and the flag of Fiji.

Malaysia hailed its recently held jamboree also with three new stamps. The 10-cent il-
